Volunteers study area lakes

The Tip of the Mitt Watershed Council has released results from its 1995 Volunteer Lake Monitoring Program. Under the supervision of Water Resource Program Director Ann Baughmann, 44 volunteers collected data from 23 lakes in the watersheds of Antrim, Charlevoix, Cheboygan, and Emmet Counties. Two parameters are measured in the program. Water clarity is measured using a Secchi disc, and algae abundance is measured through chlorophyll-a analysis of water quality, builds a strong baseline database, and allows the Watershed Council to familiarize the public with our lakes.

The Watershed Council's program is part of a nationwide water quality protection trend. Last July Watershed Council lake monitors joined volunteers across the nation in the Great American Secchi Dip-in. One thousand nine hundred volunteers in 37 states, including Watershed Council volunteer lake monitors, sent their Secchi Disc readings to the Dip-In headquarters. Data collected for the program will be used to assess regional patterns of water clarity, including the development of maps showing regional averages of lake water clarity in the nation. Plans for future Dip-Ins include monitoring the presence of exotic species such as zebra mussels or the Eurasian water milfoil (an aquatic plant) to document the spread of these species.

If you need information on the Volunteer Monitoring Program or would like to receive a copy of the Volunteer Lake Monitoring summary and/or a detailed report of the lake you live on or near, please contact the Watershed Council by mail at P.O. Box 300, Conway, MI 49722. Fax 616-347-5928. Phone 616-347-1181.

the 1992 report. "We're talking health issues here. We're talking sleepy kids breathing stale air," said Ralph Moxley of the Beta Design group, when discussing ventilation problems at the high school.

Moxley went on to say that the exterior, exposed parts of the curved arch supports in the high school gymnasium have reached a dangerous point of neglect. The wooden arches were not originally weather treated, and started to rot shortly after construction. The arches were then weather treated, and were supposed to have been inspected every two to three years. Fourteen years have elapsed since the last inspection. Moxley also touched on the aging boilers in the middle school and high school.

"Your maintenance men are to be commended for keeping everything running for so long," Moxley said.

Jackson explained to the 30 people attending the town meeting what criteria needs to be met in order to pass a $26 million bond issue. She said the project must have credibility and the confidence of the community. The issue to be voted on must be reasonable. And children must benefit from the passage. Jackson acknowledged that, at this point, there is very little community agreement on what needs to be done. "We have a challenge as a community to do what we need to do for children," Jackson said. "When you look at the schools other students have available to them, you'll see a difference."

One difference is that the new schools featured in the slide show were large schools in big cities. The board visited schools outside of Lansing, Grand Rapids, in Holland, Kentwood, Okemos, and Roscommon.

After the tour and slide presentation, Jackson and school principals fielded questions from the audience. One question asked was what has changed to encourage voters to pass this millage when they voted down an enhancement millage. Principal Gary Grundman answered the question, saying that this election is not for the purpose of raising operational millage but a bond issue to raise money to build buildings.

The failed enhancement millage was actually earmarked for structural repairs, asbestos abatement in the high school, new carpet for the elementary school, computers, and electrical work to meet new technology needs.

The next town meeting will be held May 7 with the tour of the high school beginning at 6:15 p.m.

Hospital hosts buffet for emergency personnel

In recognition of their contribution to emergency medical care for Charlevoix County, Charlevoix Area Hospital was host to Antrim and Charlevoix emergency medical services personnel, the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office and the CCE Central Dispatch Authority (911) on April 18 for a buffet dinner and a talk on stress.

Rev. Dave Behling, chaplain at Northern Michigan Hospital, spoke on "Critical Incident Stress Management" to help emergency medical service providers appropriately manage the personal anxiety and tension which is often a result of working in this field. He explained common reasons for stress, the usual symptoms, and ways in which EMS personnel can deal with this problem to prevent it from becoming a significant obstacle in daily life. He explained that stress is normal and usual, but can become a concern when it begins to interfere with regular routine, such as sleep. Simple measures such as talking it over with a friend are sometimes all that are needed to alleviate the stress.

Dead steer found on beach

The carcass of a steer which wandered out on the ice near Petoskey was found Friday washed up on the beach near Charlevoix. The steer's carcass was found washed up on the beach along the dunes area near the Colorado Club in Charlevoix Township. The steer, owned by the Joe Foster family, wandered away from a farm near Petoskey April 11.

The Charlevoix Sheriff's Department and Charlevoix Township Public Works Dept. assisted the owners in removing the carcass from the beach. The owners arranged for disposal.

School continues facility spending

But no facility plan has been adopted

by Laurie Lounsbury

More companies have been hired; more steps have been taken towards a $26 million school project that hasn't even officially received the school board's approval.

At Monday evening's school board meeting, a bond financial advisor was hired for $19,000 to guide the school board through a bond drive.

But the company, Stauder, Barch and Associates, won't get paid until the bond issue is approved by voters.

The architects, Beta Design, are already working on new school building designs. But they won't get paid until the bond issue is approved by voters.

A professional pollster, Kathy Feaster, was hired to conduct a community survey on the project. She'll get paid $8,500, no matter what the voters say.

The architects, financial advisors, and legal counselors will get a total of 10 percent of the bond issue, which would be $260,000 on a $26 million project.

They have a lot to lose if the bond issue fails.

The architectural firm of Kingscott and Associates, who had nothing to gain on the bond issue, said the high school could be repaired.

The new architects, who will earn the bulk of the $260,000, say the high school should be replaced.

Ralph Moxley of Beta Design is already making plans to produce a video to introduce the new school buildings concept. "I firmly believe if we're going to sell this thing, we've got to show the voters what they're going to get," Moxley said at the last school board meeting.

Moxley has already asked students to narrate the video. "We want to win this election. Let's go with students (as narrators)," Moxley said.

If the bond issue fails, Beta Design will get paid something in the neighborhood of $7,500, with payment due next July. The bond financial advisors will defer payment until a bond issue of some sort passes.

The board also approved payment of $3,200 to Northwest Design to have four of the high school gym arches inspected this summer. This is in addition to the $5,000 budgeted to have Mike Pearsall repair all of the arches this summer.

Northwest Design will remove the steel caps from four of the arches, inspect them and replace the plywood.

Pearsall was planning to remove the steel caps from all of the arches, determine if further inspection was needed, and replace the plywood.

"I already bought all the materials," Pearsall told the board, adding, "You're spending money twice."

"We have money set aside to do this," Superintendent Dr. Roberta Jackson said.

It was Beta Design's recommendation to have the arches inspected. Beta Design advised the board that the inspection was needed before any work was done.

The maintenance budget is already $4,200 over budget this year.

The temperatures did get hot and humid last Friday evening, but only in the elementary school gym. As usual, the Spring Carnival brought crowds of parents and kids to the elementary school for fun and games. Mattison Crystal was intrigued with the sucker she received from Mary Beth Kur. Why author Rex Beach left northern Michigan

by NANCY RITSEMA
Norwood Area Historical Society

Critics wrote that turn of the century author Rex Beach was not a great "literary" figure, but that he sure could tell a good story. Twenty-seven of his stories and novels became successful Hollywood movies and "The Spoilers," written in 1905, was filmed four times.

Rex Beach's once popular novels reflect his love of the outdoors and his autobiography includes lively reminiscences of his early years in northern Michigan as well as his later years in Florida and Alaska.

Rex's parents, pioneers Walter and Eva Beach, left New York state before he was born in a covered wagon bound for Nebraska. Hostile Indians and malaria soon caused them to turn back and to settle near the east shore of Grand Traverse Bay.

Rex, their third son, was born September 1, 1877 in the house on the 60 acre farm the family homesteaded two and a half miles south of Norwood near old Antrim City. When the time came for the baby to be born, Walter quit his fall plowing, grabbed the scissors and a piece of string from the sewing machine, and delivered Rex into the world.

Times were hard and cash was scarce for pioneer families. In 1871 Walter tapped over 700 maple trees and sold maple syrup which he shipped west for $2.50 a gallon. His trees that year produced 3,500 pounds of maple sugar.

Walter also manufactured brooms and cut and sold pressed hay to customers in Harbor Springs, Petoskey and St. Ignace. In the fall of 1881 and the spring of 1882 he shipped 200 tons of hay aboard schooners from the Norwood dock.

Eva Beach, Rex's mother, taught school in the nearby log schoolhouse, gave music lessons, and was a sewing machine saleslady.

Walter and Eva were enterprising and hardworking. Their three sons helped with farm chores, attended the local schools and church, and developed a love for the northern Michigan out-of-doors.

The decision to pull up stakes and leave the rigors of pioneer life to seek a better life elsewhere was not uncommon in northern Michigan's early days. But no decision to leave was more impulsive or dramatic than the Beach's. In "Personal Exposures," Rex explains the events leading up to their adventuresome departure after his father was caught in an unexpected snowstorm.

"One winter night when the wind came shouting through the hemlocks father returned from Charlevoix where he had driven with a ton or more of baled hay. His bobsled had overturned repeatedly and dumped the load which had to be replaced bale by bale. On the fifteen mile return trip he had been forced to tramp down drifts belly deep to his team. He had been out for eighteen hours with the thermometer at twenty below.

"Clawing the ice from his beard he announced that he was fed up on Michigan and all points north. A man was an idiot to live where his whiskers froze and once spring arrived he would eat his felt boots, if necessary, but never again would he wear them."

The Beachs made the decision to seek a warmer climate in Florida and chartered William Stigar and his schooner Fair Play to take them there.

School continues to mishandle facility project

L. Scott Swanson

The Charlevoix schools' facility adventure continues to follow an unfortunate, but predictable path. Currently the school administration is in the high school building-bashing stage of the endeavor. During the past two weeks the school has been hosting town meetings which essentially are nothing more than infomercials designed to persuade people that the present high school isn't up to snuff and tax payers should cough up millions of dollars for a new one.

Although school administrators now appear intent upon convincing taxpayers otherwise, the high school building is far from a wreck. A 1992 architectural and engineering study of the building found that although the building does indeed have some problems, all of those problems are repairable. At a meeting of the original committee which looked into the school's facility needs, architect DeWayne Leppke from Kingscott and Associates told committee members that with some renovation the current high school building will serve the community well for several years. (The writer of this editorial served on that original committee.)

Why is a high school building all right in 1992 and a catastrophe in 1996? The answer is very simple. A second facility study group and the school administration decided they want a new high school. So a second architect has been hired and the current high school building is being given a verbal trashing. Granted, the present high school is no palace, but it is a viable facility for educating students at a reasonable cost to tax payers.

The next step in the school facility process is going to be a survey to determine public sentiment. The survey will be conducted by a firm the school has hired for $8,500. Whether the survey ends up being an unbiased survey to determine what voters actually think or a tailored tool of propaganda remains to be seen. To his credit, at a recent board meeting school board member Larry Levengood said that he wants an impartial survey. Whether or not that opinion is pervasive on the board is unfortunately open to speculation. It'll never happen, but it would be interesting if the contract with the survey firm stipulated that if the survey indicates the public supports a $26 million bond proposal and that proposal is subsequently voted on and fails, the survey firm receives no money.

The facility process has been badly mishandled by the superintendent and the school board. Dr. Roberta Jackson, school superintendent, appears to be orchestrating an effort to place a $26 million tax burden on Charlevoix school district taxpayers. Simultaneously, she maintains that the $26 million proposal isn't really her idea, but came from the second facility group. Essentially, she's tried to place herself in a position where if a $26 million building plan is proposed and passes it will be her baby, but if it fails it can easily be orphaned. How can that be deemed effective leadership?

School board members have also been ineffective in addressing the facility issue. Aside from Levengood's comment regarding the survey and Allen Telgenhof attempting to clarify that the board as of yet has taken no official position as to any facility proposal, the board seems to just sit and watch what happens. Indicative of the board's unwillingness to take a firm stand is scheduling June 17 as the date to officially make a decision as to how much money to ask for from voters. It's probably not a coincidence that the date chosen to make a decision falls after, not before, the June 10 school election. Despite that schedule, incumbents Levengood and Steve Czerkes, along with challenger Jerry Owens, should state before the election whether they favor a $26 million proposal or something more modest. It's something voters should know going into the election.

Board problems with the facility issue may well be part of a greater problem with the Charlevoix school board. Original thinking and a willingness by board members to ask tough questions seem to be missing from board meetings. Board meetings have become an educational jargon-fest where debate in the interest having an informed public and bettering education in Charlevoix have taken a back seat to presenting a united front and a spirit of camaraderie. Ironically, that is similar to some of the problems with previous boards which prompted some of the current board members to seek office.

The Charlevoix school board should divest itself of the $26 million proposal in favor of a more modest proposal to replace the middle school and renovate the elementary and high schools. Board members and the superintendent should also reassess their priorities, bearing in mind that having an informed public and a school system that provides a high caliber education at an affordable cost are far more important than having a board unwilling to exercise leadership or ask difficult questions at meetings for fear of ruffling feathers.

Naming a group of condominiums on Lake Charlevoix, The Foster Boat Works Inn, I will admit is a bit unusual. Anyone now driving past the attractive white building on the shoreline of Lake Charlevoix would never guess it's "seedy" origins — but more about that later.

Today, the condos share a common ground with Northwest Marina, an owners' association, that consists of a clubhouse, pool and 207 boat slips. The slips accommodate anything from a canoe up to 72 ft. privately owned yachts. There are only a few 30 ft. slips available for rent. The slips are privately owned and many owners use their boats as condos. This successful operation was started by two men, Brad Lundy and Dennis Heck in 1981, and was one of the first "dockominiums" in the United States. The slips originally sold for $12,000 and now go for $34,000. Fortunately, or unfortunately — depending on how you look at it — the development cannot be expanded because the DNR says, "No more!"

The old factory building was remodeled in three consecutive stages, starting in 1987. The Inn originally consisted of 57 small rental unites, with balconies overlooking the Lake. Since then, the rental concept has completely changed. Today, the former rental units have become second homes. Some tenants have even combined 2 units, thus shrinking the number of condos to 46, and surprisingly, only 10 percent of the condo owners own boat slips.

The original remodeled factory has a noble past. It was built around 1892 by the D.M. Ferry Seed Company of Detroit and its massive, rough-hewn beams joined by wooden dowels makes it something of an architectural masterpiece. Old timers recall that just about everyone in Charlevoix grew a few acres of peas for the Ferry Company and the girls who were hired to sort and bag them could make the magnificent sum of $9 or $10 dollars a week! However, in 1923, the seed company closed its Charlevoix operation and for the next decade the building was used for warehousing and small manufacturing operations. In the early '30s the neglected building was all but abandoned. Its paint was peeling and the grounds were overgrown with weeds.

In 1940 Harry G. Foster, a native of Grand Rapids, and frequent summer visitor, bought the building from the Charlevoix Depositors Corp. under a unique kickback arrangement with the city, according to local Chuck Duerr, the first Treasurer and Purchasing Agent for the Foster Boat Works Co., The company built small, light, fast boats, Duerr recalls and, "Things were happening pretty fast when World War II broke out. Those expediters wanted us to speed up production for the Allied advance across Germany, and the army needed boats to cross the Rhine River, since the Germans had destroyed almost all the bridges. The 18 ft. plywood "storm" boats, powered by 30-40 HP outboard motors, could be stacked like teacups for easy transport, shipped by express rail from Charlevoix to Detroit, loaded onto transport planes and flown directly to the front."

The company also built a specially designed re-arming boat, which could slip under the wings of a seaplane. It was used for loading on bombs and torpedoes. They also converted a canvas operation, which previously had been making sails and other recreational marine product, for producing portable Arctic shelters from insulated fabric. These too, could be dropped

Letters to the editor

Many made carnival a success

Editor,

I would like to thank all of the people and businesses that participated in the Charlevoix K-5 P.T.O. Spring Carnival. It was a great night for all. The Coast Guard Station, Police, and State Police did a wonderful job on the fun "jail." The parents, high school, middle school, and elementary staff helped the P.T.O. family fun night to be a success. It takes many dedicated people to make the night run so smooth. You all did a wonderful job and I thank you not only for myself, but for the children. You are all very special and I appreciate your time.

Bikathon needs support

Editor,

Upon hearing about the BIKATHON for the late Danny Thomas' charity, St. Jude's Research Children's Hospital, which is to be held in Charlevoix next Saturday, May 11th, my thoughts were directed to the parents. This would be an excellent opportunity to bring the family together to make it a family affair and bike together for a very worthwhile cause. so many sports that are taking place don't leave room for Mom and Dad to participate other than sitting on the sidelines. Wouldn't it be great to say "Let's do it together," and give your children some positive support!

By the way, I heard they are giving away some prizes, among which is a $50 Savings Bond from the Charlevoix State Bank. Good Luck!

A pool is needed

Editor,

Charlevoix needs a pool. Why do we need it? One reason is for exercise. Also it would be used for inside swimming lessons and to teach the little children about safety rules. Mostly for the winter, for people to go swimming in the winter, because people can't go swimming in the lake.

Thanks for your cooperation.
Sincerely,
Shelly Steen

from a plane. But possibly the greatest impact the company had on the community was to clean out every farmer's woodlot of timber and denude the countryside of basswood and ash lumber to produce wooden oars. During the war, plywood was a "controlled material" and at the height of production, Foster Boat Works employed 175 people. But when the war ended, the company faced much tougher plywood competition, and the company was not in a strong enough position to go back to manufacturing civilian products.

Thus the building was sold to a Belvedere summer resident, Robert Schleman, owner of South Bend Tool & Die Company, of Dayton Ohio, and South Bend, Indiana. The mayor, and the head of the Chamber of Commerce as well as former reporter, the late Fran Martin, had earlier urged Schleman to help bring industry to the area in order to boost employment after World War II. Schleman started out producing parts for Caterpillar Tractors, but during the Korean War, the company began building platoon type boats for the U.S. Corps of Engineers, which were useful in building bridges. At this time the company employed 600 people. After the war, the company, Steam-eze, converted to manufacturing recreational equipment, such as fiberglass bows and arrows, and fishing tackle.

Finally, in 1981, the historic structure became the Foster Boat Works Inn. The building, with its 100 year old record and ten mile view of Lake Charlevoix, has, over the years, merged the unsteady course from lumber, railroads, agriculture, and manufacturing, to weekend tourism, and ultimately the popular second home site of today. Its landmark name is as indestructible as the flexible rough-hewn beams and wooden dowels, that we are told, would still keep the three story building standing — even in a tornado.

Bikathon Saturday

A fundraiser to benefit St. Jude Children's Research Hospital will take place Saturday, May 11 from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m. Registration for the "Wheels For Life" will begin at 8:30 a.m. on the side lawn at Charlevoix Area Hospital. You can rollerblade, skateboard, ride your bike, even walk or run to raise funds for the St. Jude children. It is a two mile route from the hospital to the Medusa turn-around and back to the hospital. Five runs will be 10 miles. Prizes will be awarded.

Parking is available in the doctors' office parking lot on the hill behind the hospital.

BEACONS OF BLESSINGS

by REV. BRUCE HAMILTON
Pastor, Charlevoix Community Church of God

One of the joys of living in small town U.S.A. is that you can have really close ties to your friends and neighbors. On a spring day in a place not too much different from our own a rabbi, priest, and a minister who had become very close decided to go out on their town's lake for a day of fishing together.

They had been out on the water for about three hours or so without much success when the minister said, "I'm a little hungry. I think I'll go on shore and get a sandwich from the picnic basket." Where upon he promptly got out of the boat and walked across the water to shore. Not too much later, the warm morning was getting to the priest and he was getting a little thirsty. He proceeded to get out of the boat and walk across the lake to join his friend the minister on shore.

This was too much for the rabbi to take. Wait just a minute. I always thought the Jews were God's chosen people. If a priest and minister can walk on water, why can't I? He got out of the boat and immediately fell in the lake right up to his neck.

On shore the priest asked the minister, "Didn't you tell him where the rocks were?" The minister replied, "I thought you did."

Now that the weather is trying to make up its mind about warming up, those of us who were not brave enough to walk out on the ice, cut holes, and sit around in below zero wind chills will soon get our chance to practice the fine art of drowning worms once again. You can learn a lot about life from fishing for there are days that it can require enough patience to test even the calmest man's soul. There are voyages where catching something really isn't even the goal. It is just to get away for a few hours and restore a more peaceful balance to your heart. And when problems arise, there's nothing like God's power to see you safely through.

Too many of us get so caught up in the "busyness" of our daily schedules that we really do need to take more time for ourselves than we do. And in taking more time for ourselves, we ought to discover that time with God is crucial to the true refreshing of our spirits.

To live in Charlevoix is one of life's great blessings. Witnessing the change of seasons alone would be a tonic for most weary souls. The geese flying north, deer giving birth to new fawns, and the trees beginning to bud with the promise of spring are just a few reasons to be uplifted.

Just never forget who is responsible for it all. David wrote in the Psalms that "The earth is the Lord's and the fullness thereof ... The world and they that swell therein..." God's ready to go fishing. He's ready to work in the garden. He's anxious to spend time with you and He's willing to tell you where the rocks are.

City council discusses payments to Chamber

Second ward city councilman Gabe Campbell says he has no problem with the city paying the Chamber of Commerce for services rendered, he just wants an itemized list of services.

Campbell raised the issue at Monday evening's city council meeting. Each year the city pays the Chamber of Commerce $6,700. For this, the Chamber provides services such as promotion of the city and fielding questions which would otherwise have to be addressed by city hall. Campbell says he has no problem with the Chamber of Commerce and were he a business owner he probably would be a member of the Chamber. However, he said the Chamber also takes political positions. He said that's fine if they do it with their own money, but he believes it would be touching on illegal for the council to allocate tax dollars which ended up being used to support political positions. Campbell said he wants money the city gives to the Chamber targetted for specific items.

Mayor Josh Barnes said the amount of money the city provides to the Chamber is only a very small percentage of the Chamber's overall budget, however he also feels the city should ask for a specific invoice.

City attorney Jim Young said the state legislature and courts are getting stricter about tax dollars not being used for political purposes.

First ward council member Bob Timms said he doesn't really see the point of asking for an itemized services list. It wouldn't change the amount of money paid or the amount of money spent or how it is spent.

City manager Mike Wiesner suggested that rather than having the Chamber come before the council several times a year that an itemized list of Chamber expenditures with city money be included in the city's annual budget. Although no formal motion was made, the council by consensus approved that recommendation.

In other matters Monday evening, the council:

*Approved a refund of $225 to Chuck Morrow for a zoning variance application. Morrow had filed two applications for a variance and the council agreed to refund one of the application fees.

*Approved the purchase of a new golf course maintenance vehicle at a cost of $11,836.

*Approved the purchase of new water pump equipment at a cost of $12,000. The equipment will correct pressure surges and eliminate water hammering problems some homes have experienced.

*Approved the installation of a well at the city softball complex to water the fields.

YOUTH

Elementary students read before writing and then illustrate books of their own.

Writing is an integral part of education

Remember when writing was an English class activity only? Well, times have changed. As writing across the curriculum is implemented in Charlevoix Public Schools, students use language arts skills in a variety of content areas. Writing is one of the best ways to demonstrate understanding of material, and it is an essential skill for success after high school. Varied writing experiences also prepare students for the Michigan Proficiency Test, which requires writing in all tested ares. In the elementary school, science students write lab reports and experiment descriptions. In the middle school, research reports and letters to foreign pen pals provide valuable writing experience. In the high school, physical education classes take essay exams, math students write explanations of problem solving procedures in short expository essays. These are just a few of the many ways in which writing across the curriculum has become a reality.

Haley Georgi uses her writing skills in writing for the Charlevoix High School yearbook and newspaper.

BUSINESS

My Sister's Closet offers thrill of the hunt

by Laurie Lounsbury

It is instinctive behavior. Since the beginning of time, women have been natural born hunters, seeking out the ripest berries, foraging for the best roots, and scavenging for the prettiest shells.

But today's well organized supermarkets take all the fun out of the hunt. So women turn to other, more fertile hunting grounds.

What better place to hunt than a consignment shop like "My Sister's Closet?"

"Consignment shopping is a hobby. It's a fun treasure hunt," said Chris Sell, one of the four owners of the new business. Anne Golski, another owner, agreed. "It's all about the hunt," Golski said.

Four women teamed up to start the consignment shop at 1207 Bridge Street. Each woman brings her own special talent to the business. Barb Murray has an accounting and merchandising background, Kris Balasz and Chris Sell both have experience in sales and marketing, and Ann Golski brings her skills in advertising and promotions to the table.

When looking for their first batch of merchandise, the women turned to familiar hunting turf. They did what all women with sisters do when they need something - they raided their sister's closets. That's how they came up with the name for the business. "We kept saying to each other, 'I'll call my sister and see what she has in her closet,'" Golski said.

The consignment shop accepts "nearly new" women's and children's clothes, including maternity clothes and wedding dresses. When an item is sold, the store gives half of the selling price back to the person who brought in the clothing. If something doesn't sell in 30 days, the price is reduced, and after 90 days, unsold merchandise goes to the Rainbow Shoppe.

" At first we were worried about stepping on the Rainbow Shoppe's toes, but we've become their best customers," said Sell. If merchandise doesn't meet the women's standards of "nearly new," the women always ask the consigner if they'd like to have the Items sent to the Rainbow Shoppe. The answer is invariably yes.

The business resposibilties are split four ways, giving each woman the time to take care of their first priorities - raising their children. Each owner spends a day and a half to two days in the store. They each work one Saturday each month.

In the short two weeks they've been open, My Sister's Closet has accepted consignment clothes from 80 different people. Customers are coming from Harbor Springs, Gaylord, and Petoskey. "People are far more sophisticated than we think. Women who buy expensive clothes are also consigners. They'll drive all over to consignment stores," Golski said.

My Sister's Closet is open Monday through Friday, 10:00 a.m. to 5:30 p.m., and Saturday from 10:00 a.m. to 3:00 p.m. For more information, call 547-7350.

Bank to consolidate offices

Francis B. Flanders, President and Chief Executive Officer of CB North has announced the consolidations of the Bridge Street Financial Center into the State Street facility effective June 3.

Flanders said, "This move gives us the opportunity to expand customer hours and provide one convenient location for customers to access financial services such as mortgage, consumer loans, commercial loans and trust, in addition to all of our deposit services."

The new expanded hours at the State Street Financial Center include both lobby and drive-through services. The lobby will he open Monday - Thursday, 9 a.m. - 4:30 p.m., Friday from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m., and Saturday from 9 a.m. to noon. The drive-through will be open Monday - Friday, from 7:30 a.m. - 6 p.m., and Saturday from 9 a.m. to noon.

In addition to the expanded hours, CB North has three CB/24 machines in Charlevoix: the State Street Financial Center; the Bridge Street location; and Glen's Market. These 24 hour hanking machines provide CB customers access to their deposit accounts whenever it's convenient. "This alternate form of banking is important in that approximately 50 percent of all banking transactions today are not performed in a bank lobby," Flanders commented. "Consumers are very busy and many have little time during traditional banking hours to transact their financial business. With convenience being the key factor, we are developing new non-traditional ways for our customers to access their funds and transact business with CB, including telephone banking and PC banking."

Flanders said the old bank building at the corner of northwest corner of Bridge and Clinton Streets has been sold and will be converted into a retail clothing store. The CB/24 hanking machine will remain at least for the time-being. Flanders said that machine is in an ideal location and is very busy in the summer.

Softball team goes 4-0 to win Inland Lakes Invitational

Behind strong pitching from Jenny Eveleigh and solid defense, Charlevoix's varsity softball team went 4-0 Saturday to win the Inland Lakes Invitational softball tournament.

Charlevoix opened the day with a 15-5 thrashing of Harbor Springs , then squeaked past Pellston 3-2 and Inland Lakes 7-6 before wrapping up the day by hammering Posen 16-2.

In the Inland Lakes game, Charlevoix took advantage of three Inland Lakes fielding miscues to score seven runs in the first inning. From there, the Rayders held on as Eveleigh allowed six hits, walked three and struck out four for the win. Christie Kaczynski, the Rayders' senior first baseman, continued to have an excellent year hitting. Kaczynski took her hitting to a higher plane last season and has elevated her hitting again this season. Against Inland Lakes she had three hits including a double. Eveleigh had two hits including a three-run triple.

In the game against Pellston, Lyndsay Blechel pitched the first two and two-thirds innings, allowing two hits while striking out three and walking three. When Pellston kicked up a fuss in the third inning, loading the bases with two outs, Eveleigh came on in relief and put an end to such foolishness. In the final three and one-third innings, Eveleigh struck out eight while allowing three hits and two walks.

Against Harbor Springs, Eveleigh allowed seven hits while striking out eight and walking two. Kaczynski had three hits, including a double. Aprille Pischner and Liz Coen each had two hits with a double.

In closing out the day against Posen Eveleigh gave up five hits, struck out five and walked three. Kaczynski picked up her third three-hit game of the day with a single, double and triple. Eveleigh and Pischner each had two hits including a double while Ann Marie Terryberry had two singles.

The 4-0 tournament day brought the Rayders' season record to 10-5. The Rayders' next game will be at Boyne City, Thursday, May 9.

...he would eat his felt boots, but never again wear them

William Stigar was a local commercial gill net fisherman. he shipped freshly caught whitefish in his own handmade pine barrels to Chicago. He was a colorful man with a wealth of entertaining stories guaranteed to stir the imagination of the boy Rex Beach, who at age 24 would be a master story teller himself.

Stigar quickly built double tiers of bunks into the forward hold of the schooner and installed a wood burning cookstove. Each family brought their own provisions and did their own cooking as they sailed.

The party that left Antrim City on board the schooner the fall of 1889 included Eva and Walter Beach and their three boys, 14 other adult neighbors, and William Stigar and his wife. To the Fair Play's passengers' knowledge, the trip from northern Michigan to Florida by way of Chicago, had never before been made by a Lake Michigan fishing schooner.

When the ship reached Chicago her masts were lowered so that she could pass under bridges. She was then towed behind a steam-powered canal boat through the narrow canal linking Lake Michigan with the Illinois River and continued on to the Mississippi River.

At St. Louis, attached to a string of barges, she was pushed down the big river by a paddle-wheeled Mississippi freight steamer. Travel was slow. The floating caravan was tied up at the river bank each night and often laid over for days at each river port.

At New Orleans the schooner proceeded under her own sail to Tampa where the Beaches took up homesteading with renewed enthusiasm. The historic trip from old Antrim City to Tampa took 103 days.

In 1926 the Alfred Brooks family acquired author Beach's homestead. They soon wrote to Rex Beach who sent cards and autographed photos to Brooks' family members in fond memory of the old homestead where he was born and spent his boyhood.

Rex died at the age of 72 in 1949. The road which runs east and west beside the old farm remains today a silent tribute to one of northern Michigan's famous sons: It is called Rex Beach Road.

"Clawing the ice from his beard he announced that he was fed up on Michigan and all points north. A man was an idiot to live where his whiskers froze and once spring arrived he would eat his felt boots, if necessary, but never again would he wear them."

'Author Rex Beach describing how his father concluded the family should move away from northern Michigan.

It's time for some home grown "Madness"

Home town blooms will line our streets

by Laurie Lounsbury

Petunia planting this year will be pure, wonderful Madness. "Madness" is the variety of petunias chosen by Doug Perrault, owner of Greenleaf Gardens, for the Charlevoix petunias.

It's fitting that we have a new petunia variety. We also have a new petunia grower. The petunias are being grown, for the first time in 15 years, right here in Charlevoix. In the past, the petunias were grown at the Renaldo Greenhouse in Harbor Springs. "It's been a goal of ours to grow the Charlevoix petunias here," Perrault said. In order to accommodate the Charlevoix petunias, Perrault added extra greenhouses to his business. He's filled one and a half greenhouses with 45,600 petunias waiting to be planted along the roadside.

Perrault chose the "Madness" variety of petunias for their large blooms, (three to four inch wide flowers) their ability to branch by themselves, and because they need no pinching. They also stand up well to heavy rains.

The cold, dreary spring had no ill effect on the petunias. Perrault just cranked up the heat in the greenhouse and fertilized a little heavier than usual. Big, showy blooms are starting to pop. "I actually have to slow the growth down. They're looking great," Perrault said.

Perrault started growing petunias in the end of March, working with tiny, quarter inch plugs. It took Perrault and two helpers at least two weeks to get the baby flowers planted. During the germination period, Perrault kept the greenhouse at a toasty 80 degree temperature. The little plugs are now sturdy plants. Perrault said the secret to good looking flowers above ground is a good looking plant below ground. "They must have a good root system. If you get a good root system, you get good flowers," Perrault said.

The color scheme for the flowers will be slightly different this year. Five colors are featured: red, white, sky blue, sugar daddy (deep purple) and hot pink.

Petunia planting will take place Thursday, May 23 along U.S. 31 South, Bridge Street and Petoskey Avenue. Planting starts at 5 p.m., rain or shine.

Following the planting, there will be a free hot dog picnic for planters, held in East Park. During the picnic, the winner of the early bird drawing will be announced. Two free tickets and a limousine ride to the Charlevoix Country Club will be given for the Keep Charlevoix Beautiful dinner and the Charlevoix Friends of the Pool auction.

Bridge Park project is on time but over budget

by Laurie Lounsbury

The Bridge Park project just leaped $102,000 over budget. But the bulk of the cost overrun is going into more seawall.

Eighty thousand dollars will be spent to add another 60 feet of seawall, connecting the channel seawall to the seawall on Round Lake. The contractors discovered that the existing 60 feet of seawall that goes around the curve was badly deteriorated.

The rest of the cost overrun was for miscellaneous items, according to Mike Wiesner, city manager. For example, bad soil found during excavation had to be replaced with sand to provide a proper foundation for paving. "It was miscellaneous items that you encounter with a project of this scope," Wiesner said.

The DDA is also picking up half of the tab for modifications to a storage building for the Beaver Island Boat Company. A 20 foot by 80 foot storage building will be constructed at the north end of the park. It will create a second terrace. The storage building will have a flat roof and will be covered with bricks to create another viewing area for the public. The cost of the building changes is $37,000, with the city sharing the cost with the Beaver Island Boat Company.

In spite of unexpected problems and additional work orders, the Bridge Park project should be completed on schedule. Wiesner expects the area to be functional by the end of June or the first week of July. "We hope to have the Beaver Islander operating out of downtown by then, at least on a part time basis," Wiesner said.

If necessary, the Beaver Islander will continue to make freight runs from the Ferry Avenue dock, but will pick up passengers and vehicles at the new, downtown dock.

VanWieren art collection is a gift to all

by Laurie Lounsbury

On a cozy Christmas day 12 years ago, Gordon VanWieren gave his wife, Susan, a present that brought tears to her eyes. The present didn't come in a big box with fancy wrapping paper.

It was just a simple card with a hand written note inside that said, "In your honor, I have established the Susan VanWieren art collection. I love you. Gordon."

It was a gift that touched Susan's heart.

And over the last 12 years, it has been a gift that touches the hearts and minds of Charlevoix art students.

> "Art and music are often the only areas where kids can express themselves and can excel."

"Kids weren't getting the recognition they deserved for their art. That was my main motivation, to do something for the kids. Susan's always had a keen interest in art, so I thought this would be a nice Christmas present," Gordon said.

The Susan VanWieren Collection of art is displayed in the elementary school hallway, the middle school main hallway and the high school media center. The collection grows impressively every year.

The first art piece selected for the VanWieren collection was a painting of a clown, done by Kelly Heck in 1984. "I've always had a soft spot in my heart for clowns. It was so fitting that the first piece of art was a clown painting," Susan said.

The VanWierens asked the art teachers in each school to select one student's work to go into the collection every year. After the teachers make their selection, Gordon pays to have the art matted, framed and a plaque with the student's name mounted on the art work.

The VanWierens are firm believers in supporting the arts in the Charlevoix school district. Gordon was school superintendent when he came up with the idea for the art collection. "Art and music are often the only areas where kids can express themselves and can excel," Gordon said. As superintendent, he also observed a direct benefit in academic studies with students who took a great interest in the arts. "The arts are more important than people realize in how they affect a student's academic performance," Gordon said.

For Susan, the collection keeps touching her life in unexpected ways. When using her credit card to pay for something in a Charlevoix business, a young employee looked at the name on the credit card and said, "You're Susan VanWieren. My art work is in your collection. Thank you," the former student said.

Another budding young artist once approached Susan as she stood by the collection and told her, "My dream is to get some of my art on this wall."

Elementary art teacher Beth Mc Graw understands how important the art collection is to students. "Kids look at it as a real honor. We really appreciate Gordon and Susan for doing this," she said.

According to Susan's wishes, the Susan VanWieren Collection of art will hang in the Charlevoix schools in perpetuity.

Editor's notes

A person can move on, but Charlevoix always remains with you

L. Scott Swanson

It seems to me that Courier readers should view my departure as a win-win situation. Those who like me will be happy to see me go on to bigger and better things. Those who don't like me will be happy to see me go.

Assuming there are still a few people who haven't heard, this will be my last week at the Courier. My wife Kathy and I have purchased the Straitsland Resorter, a weekly newspaper based in Indian River. We see this as a wonderful opportunity for us and we are overjoyed. Yet, we will obviously miss living and working in Charlevoix. This is my home town. It is the town where I was born and raised. My children were born here. It is a town filled with many kind and caring people who, even though I now may not see them quite as often, I will count among my friends until I'm planted in a grave. I care deeply about this community and its people and although I'm now living 36 miles up the road, I don't ever envision that changing.

I took over as editor of the Courier in September of 1988. A couple of weeks ago, I tried to figure out how many editions of the Courier I've been a part of during the past seven plus years. It came out to approximately 400.

Garrison Keillor always begins his monologue by saying, "It has been a quiet week in my home town." And then he launches into a story detailing all of the strange and funny events taking place in the community. Many times over the past seven years people have asked me, "What's going on in Charlevoix?" And I would tell them, "Charlevoix is a quiet little town." And then I would begin to tell stories.

Charlevoix can be a contentious little town. I've had people from neighboring communities ask me how we ever get anything accomplished here when it seems like we're always fighting about something. I tell them that in Charlevoix, we may fight, but we always fight forward. Complacency would be quite harmonious. On the other hand, if people in a community have ideas and aren't afraid to challenge and answer challenges to ideas, then there's likely to be some friction. There also is likely to be better understanding as well as revision and strengthening of ideas leading to progress and a better community.

I realize that there have been times when things I wrote didn't sit well with certain people. Oh well. That never particularly bothered me. I concluded long ago that no matter how many people are mad at me, if I can look in the mirror each morning and be comfortable with who I'm seeing, that's good enough for me.

Beyond that, it just doesn't bother me when people disagree with me. In fact, over the years some of the most intellectually stimulating conversations I've had have been with people who disagreed with me about something.

In this, my last writing as editor of the Courier, I will let you in on a little secret. When I wrote something some people didn't like and was criticized for being "too negative," I always secretly chuckled to myself. I heard this criticism on more than one occasion, but I always figured if that was the best objection someone could raise about an editorial, then they probably hadn't had much success finding much wrong with the logic and reasoning behind my arguments. They just didn't like my position. In a way, being called "too negative" was something I felt was inaccurate, but kind of flattering.

During the past seven plus years I have lived among some of the finest people in one of the nicest communities this world has to offer. I have worked for and with good people. For this, I am eternally grateful. During the past week, numerous people have stopped me on the street and told me that although they are sorry to see me leave, they wish me and my family all the best in our new endeavor. It has sometimes been difficult for me to find just the right words to express the depth of my gratitude for such gracious and kind comments.

It is time for Scott Swanson to move on to other things. It is time for the Courier to have a new voice. Charlevoix was a great little town and the Charlevoix Courier was a great little paper long before I got here. It will be a great town with a great paper long after I'm gone. When I moved, I packed all of my worldly belongings in boxes and trucks. I couldn't fit the people of Charlevoix in boxes and trucks. But I packed many fond memories of them in my heart and they will be with me forever.

Nurse thanks road commission

Editor,

This winter has been one of the longest and most severe winters northern Michigan has had in years! Working in our line of work with people depending on us to provide home nursing care, it is very important for us to be out on the road every day. At this time we would like to express our appreciation to the Charlevoix County road Commission for making the roads safe and clear this past winter. Because of their persistent snow removal and road sanding we were able to meet all of our patients needs. WAY TO GO CHARLEVOIX COUNTY ROAD COMMISSION!

Sincerely,
Tami Frampus, RN and staff at First American Home Care of Petoskey

Student says new schools are needed

Editor,

I'm writing in response to the two articles in the May eighth edition of the Charlevoix Courier. I have one question to ask the people of Charlevoix. Have you ever thought what is best for the students of Charlevoix? All that you are publishing are negative articles about our school and what our administrators are trying to provide for the people of Charlevoix. We learn in school and journalism class that newspapers are supposed to give the whole story and not a biased form of it. If we were to receive a new high school and middle school it would not only benefit the students, but it would also benefit the community as a whole. An auditorium, for example, could be used by everyone in the community for meetings and community plays. I realize that everything costs a lot of money, but isn't it about time we, the community of Charlevoix, did what is best for the students? What really bothers me are the closed-minded people who won't even consider what the students need. They don't even take the time to study the difference in the proposals or to go see the schools for themselves. As a member of the Facilities and Bond Committee and the students group who are working with the architects, I am well educated in the proposals for the school buildings. I have attended all three schools in Charlevoix and personally know that a new high school and middle school are desperately needed. Yes it would be possible to just remodel the existing high school, but why put three million dollars in a building that will need to be replaced in ten years anyway? Isn't that just a waste of money? If you don't realize how lacking our current schools are, I encourage you to go to a town meeting in which our superintendent, Dr. Roberta Jackson, will give a tour of our current high school and point out why we obviously need two new schools, such as the small computer labs which are always packed and the single access to the Internet that we have in our high school. How are we supposed to stay in touch with the outside world? I hope all of you will think twice about the students of Charlevoix and what we need and would appreciate before your decision is made on the proposals. Thank you for your support of Charlevoix students.

Sincerely,
Kari Boss

Letters to the editor

Community deserves the finest schools

Editor,

After reading your continual bashing of the Charlevoix School Board, I feel someone should set the record straight.

You have sold your home in Charlevoix and decided to move 45 miles north of here, and so the issue doesn't really concern you, nor will you be paying for the new school facilities like the rest of us.

When I was a 14 year old boy in 1945, I witnessed the tearing down of old Central school, which was a good brick building, and had only been used for 37 years as a school building. It was not functional for the time, however. I have been to every meeting in the last year concerning school buildings, and have been very involved. Our school board and Superintendent are to be commended for the fine job and research they are doing about our needs. A Band-Aid like you are thinking of will not do the job. The amount they are spending will pay off ten fold in the end result.

Bill Joy and I will take the blame for suggesting the building of two new facilities. Good money thrown after bad will not make a silk purse out of a sows ear, when the cost is almost identical. Hard work, sound business practices and timing are everything when it comes to success.

Now is the time. Fortunately, we live in a school district which is in the top 3% valuation-wise behind each child in the state of Michigan. Our kids and community deserve and can have the finest, so that they can compete in the cruel world out there which is changing rapidly. Traverse City is tearing down 2 school buildings which are 2 years newer than ours, due to the added cost of remodeling them.

Any good community is known by its good churches, schools and public facilities, and most important, positive thinking citizens who live there. My 97 year old grandfather had a true saying "The Lord helps those who help themselves." There are those who say it cannot be done, but we can do it.

Proud of Charlevoix

Dale Boss

Multi-million school facility plan won't fly

Editor,

An open letter to the members of the Charlevoix School Board.

The tax payers of this school district are getting more than a little confused, irritated and disgusted by the minute. One of the main reasons are all the Johnny come lately so called experts who want to tell us what's good for us. We have elected the people we want to hear from, for better or worse, you members.

We especially do not want to hear from the Superintendent of schools. In spite of her bloated salary, the Superintendent is hired help and deciding policy and monetary expenditures or debts is the exclusive prerogative of you members. She is neither a structural engineer nor a building contractor and like all hired help could be gone in a year to greener pastures, hopefully. Her job is to run the school as efficiently and economically as possible.

When the Business Manager departed, you members, to save some $70,000 dollars, should have handed the job in it's entirety to the evaluation come contract time. It isn't too late for next year and you Board Members are, after all, the bosses.

Why are the people with the most to gain pushing for everything new? We have heard other professionals say, "fix it." Would removing insulation, installing gym fans, installing necessary electricity cost $26 million dollars? The gym supports all of a sudden are no good? Horse hockey!

You members should call that $26 million dollar figure we hear bandied about "The Penguin," because it's one bird that simply will not fly.

Thanks for your time.

Dispatch center ready, but 911 service delayed until June

hy Laurie Lounsbury

The 911 dispatch center is ready to go to work, but if the system was activated today, about a quarter of Charlevoix's residents wouldn't be able to get 911 service in an emergency. The reason is computer fall out.

Computer fall out is what occurs when a person's address isn't precisely the same between the phone company's billing records and the postal address. If the computer doesn't come up with a perfect match, then the address simply falls out. "It can be the difference between Hill Rd. or Hills Rd.," explained Gordy Neihardt, 911 director.

"We've waited this long, we want to make sure we get it going right when we start it up."
911 director Gordy Neihardt, on the recent delay for 911 service.

Right now, about 25% of the addresses in Charlevoix County are falling out. Neihardt said that an error rate of one or two percent needs to be achieved before the system can be activated. "We need good information on the screen in case we can't understand the person calling in," Neihardt said.

Neihardt hopes to have 911 service activated hy mid-June. "We've waited this long, we want to make sure we get it going right when we start it up," Neihardt said.

Junior golf scholarships available

The Charlevoix Area Junior Golf Association has two announcements by Director Dean Davenport. The scholarship program, which will award five scholarships to area youth to attend the Ferris State University's week-long summer golf School, has an application deadline of May 17th. Applications may be secured at the Municipal Golf Course and from the City's Recreation Department and can be returned at both places.

The second announcement is concerning the upcoming summer program with a tentative starting time of June 17. Davenport pointed out that this year's program will be slightly different in that the schedule will be more intensive early in the summer with several meetings weekly so that by early July, youngsters will finish the instructional portion of the program and will be ready to apply their lessons to actual play.

The teaching staff will return from last year and will include the pros from the Belvedere, Municipal and Country Club courses.

There will be additional information made available in the next few weeks.

BEACONS OF BLESSINGS

by REV. BRUCE HAMILTON

In my book, Moms don't receive nearly enough credit in life. So even though Mother's Day just slipped behind us on the calendar, permit me to extend it just a little longer and offer the following tribute to those special ladies in our lives.

Though Adam may have come along first
As the Lord unfolded creation,
It was out of his rib that Eve would come,
And stir up a great sensation.
From there it would be so easy
To get hung up on the first temptation
But just look at the difference between men and women
And there should be no need of an explanation.

It is on Eve's descendants
That we wish to focus our attention
For life would be utterly meaningless
Without one factual comprehension
God called upon them to be our mothers
And that merits our highest commendation.

For only a mother could have the strength
To carry a child in her womb.
Most men would be so antsy,
We'd run everyone out of the room!
And though we're called the strong ones,
Do we really have what it takes?
For when those labor pains really come,
We'd be looking to put on the brakes.

But the greatest treasure we enjoy,
Is that of a mother's heart.
For in this God-given miracle,
Every life gets a proper start.
They love us when we're unlovable.
They love us when all seems lost.
They love us when we go astray
And they never worry about the cost.
They love us for who we are.
They love us for what we hope to be.
They love us sometimes in spite of ourselves
When we're as ornery as we can be.

But perhaps the most priceless gift,
Is that all their care is unconditional;
And that's why on Mother's Day,
We owe them more than the traditional.
We owe them our thanks and gratitude.
We owe them our prayers each day.
We owe them all the honor and love,
These feeble words may try to say.

For whether they are the ones who gave us birth
Or gifted us with kids of our own,
A mother's heart is indeed a miracle,
As precious as the finest gemstone.
So God bless every single mother!
God bless them more and more each day!
For all the things we've put them through,
Aren't you glad God made them that way?

Clifford Royce Biddick

Clifford Royce Biddick, 77, of Charlevoix, died May 8, 1996, in Detroit.

Mr. Biddick was born July 6, 1918, in Ironwood. He moved to Detroit in 1922, where he lived until 1965 and attended Wayne University.

In 1942, he married Mary Elizabeth Rowland. He served in the U.S. Army Air Corps as an instrument specialist during World War II.

From 1965 until 1975, he lived in St. Louis, Mo., where he was employed as a metallurgist for the Chrysler Corporation. Upon his retirement in 1975, he moved to Charlevoix, where he was actively involved with his family and in various community and business interests.

Mr. Biddick was a member of the First Congregational Church , the Veterans of Foreign Wars Post No. 1153, and president of the Charlevoix Kiwanis Club. He was a member of the Manitowoc Maritime Museum.

He is survived by his spouse, Mary E. Biddick; his sister, Doris Violet Biddick, of Boyne City; two daughters, Carol Hellstrom of Horton Bay, and Anne Katherine Berdanier of England; three sons, Kenneth L. Biddick of Petoskey, John H. Rock and roll returns to Castle Farms

Reibel will also host programs for handicapped children

by Laurie Lounsbury

Rock 'n Roll is returning to Castle Farms, but heavy metal music is gone for good. "We turned down Ozzie Osborne. We're changing our image," said Art Reibel, who is operating the Castle this summer.

The Castle Farms season will open with Def Leppard on July 6. Ted Nugent will be performing July 21, and the popular Reggae Fest will return on July 28. "Ted Nugent and Def Leppard aren't heavy metal bands. They're more mainstream rock and roll," Reibel said.

Reibel has also scheduled antique shows at the castle for Memorial Day weekend and Labor Day weekend. The castle's art fair won't be returning this summer.

Perhaps the biggest change at the castle, under Reibel's direction, comes with his plans to host events for handicapped children. "We're going to have a pile of programs for handicapped kids," Reibel said.

Reibel is working with a group called Fish Tales out of Bay City, who coordinates summer programs for handicapped children. The group got its name when they started taking handicapped kids on fishing trips, accompanied by sports celebrities who volunteered their time.

Reibel is already taking measures to build handicapped bathrooms and make other accommodations for handicapped persons.

Parking meter rates increase

Getting a parking ticket in Charlevoix is going to cost a lot more than it did last year. In fact, all parking infractions are doubling in cost. Meter violations are going from $1 to $2, yellow curb parking from $5 to $10, and late fines from $10 to $20. The new rates are effective immediately.

Police Chief Dennis Halverson reported that the police force will start enforcing parking meters on Monday, May 20th. The early start is due to parking congestion in the downtown area as a result of the construction projects along Bridge Street.

Postal worker Bill Hartman took a blow torch to the mail boxes last week. No, it wasn't the act of a crazed postal worker. Hartman was shortening the legs on each of the mail boxes so that drivers can more easily drop their mail in the box from their cars. (Photo by Laurie Lounsbury)

Charlevoix teacher and custodian win MEA awards

Elementary school music teacher Marina LaBlance, left, received the MEA award, "Outstanding Person in Education."

Also receiving the award was Don Potter, middle school custodian, shown here with student Chad Collins.

Music teacher Marina LaBlance received the Michigan Education Association award, Outstanding Person in Education on May 14. The award is presented by the MEA to honor those individuals who have shown exemplary effort toward the cause of educational excellence.

LaBlance has been teaching music at the elementary school in Charlevoix for 23 years. She also received the "Teacher of the Year" award in 1973.

LaBlance is best known in the community for the outstanding spring musicals she produces every year.

LaBlance attended Delta College in Bay City, Western Michigan University in Kalamazoo, and Michigan State University in East Lansing.

LaBlance is a member of the Music Educator's Association, the National Music Association, the Charlevoix Council for the Arts, the Waterfront Art Fair committee, and Reach for Recovery.

State Representative Bev Bodem is seeking re-election

Rep. Beverly A. Bodem, R-Alpena, announced today that she is seeking re-election to the Michigan House of Representatives.

The 106th District Lawmaker, first elected to the House in 1990, said she wants to build on recent achievements.

As chair of the House Tourism and Recreation Committee, Bodem remains determined to develop northern Michigan's potential as a travel destination. Earlier this year she was selected as Legislator of the Year by the Michigan Hotel, Motel and Resort Association. She is already planning the second annual Northern Lower Michigan Legislative Conference on Tourism, a bipartisan event that gives state officials and local business owners a chance to exchange ideas.

"This is what public service is all about. By sharing information and building partnerships, we reach consensus on important issues and develop good policies," Bodem concluded.

Tip of the Mitt hosts forum on tourism

The Northwest Michigan Roundtable on Tourism and Natural Resources Stewardship invites you to participate in an interactive forum, "Protecting the Goose that Lays the Golden Eggs," to discuss the future of tourism in northern Michigan. The Community Forum will be held on Tuesday, May 21, 1996 at the Boyne Mountain Civic Center in Boyne Falls.

The Tip of the Mitt Watershed Council initiated the projection October 1994 by inviting leaders in northwest Michigan from the tourism industry, resource management agencies, forming interests, local government, regional planning agencies, and area citizens to be a part of the Roundtable.

Over the past year and a half the Roundtable has met several times to discuss how the region can provide for continued economic benefits without destroying the natural resource base that supports tourism.

Now the time has come for the Roundtable to share its ideas about how we might protect the goose that lays the golden eggs and to hear form you in this topic. The Roundtable's members have worked hard to organize a community forum that will stand out from other workshops and conferences. Participants will play an important role in this forum, helping to refine the Roundtable's initial ideas. Another goal for the forum is to lead the Roundtable's work into other projects to promote balanced tourism development with natural resource protection. Mark Wyckoff of the Planning and Zoning Center, Inc. will give a presentation on trends for northern Michigan based on the Michigan Society of Planning Officials Trend Future Report.

If you would like additional information on the Forum or would like to register contact Gail Gruenwald or Ann Baughman at the Tip of the Mitt Watershed Council offices at (616) 347-1181.

Students advocate anti-tobacco policies

Sixth and seventh grade student council members at Charlevoix Middle School met with the Charlevoix-Emmet-Antrim Tobacco Reduction Coalition on May 8, 1996. The coalition has been holding their meetings at area schools to engage and empower youth in advocating for healthy, tobacco-free policies.

The coalition recognizes the importance of youth advocating for a smoke-free society and encouraged this group of students to attend the meetings on a regular basis.

Following the meeting, the students and Student Council Advisor, Jane Garver went to Oleson's grocery store and asked manager Bob Bortlis to move the tobacco products to make it harder for young people to shop lift. Their concern was brought about during the meeting, when they learned that some elementary students recently were caught stealing cigarettes.

Anyone interested in working with the coalition or the youth as they advocate for tobacco-free policies please contact Mary Ann Cox at District Health Department No. 3, 547-6523.

County elections will heat up in summer

by Laurie Lounsbury

County elections will follow the season's weather patterns. The races will heat up over the summer, then cool off after August. Both the challengers and incumbents have filed their nominating petitions as Republicans, so the winners will be determined at the August primary election.

Three Charlevoix County Commissioners are running unopposed. They are Phil Johnson in District 3, Carl Price in District 1, and Jim Behling in District 2. Howard Hosler in District 4 is not seeking re-election.

Former equalization director Joan Blanchard, of 14825 Vernida Ave., is challenging incumbent Don Smith in District 5.

"I've been thinking about doing this for a long time. I believe in county government, and I think there's a need for a woman on the board," Blanchard said.

Blanchard retired last year after working for the county for 30 years. "I think my years as equalization director are a plus. I have a lot to learn about county government from a commissioner standpoint, but I'm willing to take the time and learn it," Blanchard said.

Blanchard doesn't have a campaign platform, but she does have a slogan. "May the best woman win," she said.

The race for the District 4 commissioner seat is between Michael Burr, of 806 Main St., East Jordan and Victor Patrick, of 2025 Ranney Rd., East Jordan. Burr owns an insurance agency in East Jordan. Burr said his reason for pursuing a seat on the county commission was, "I had some extra energy to expend, and I thought I'd expend it towards the betterment of Charlevoix County." Burr sees county funding as the biggest challenge facing the board of commissioners.

Victor Patrick is a retired commercial fishing conservation officer and a part-time police officer for the city of East Jordan. Patrick couldn't be reached for comment before press time.

Shirley Roloff, of 100 Hampton St., will challenge Richie Gillespie of Beaver Island in District 6. Roloff and her husband have owned Charlevoix Canvas for 18 years. Roloff has also worked part-time at the Flight Deck Bar for 15 years, and done volunteer work for the DSS for 21 years. Roloff served on the Charlevoix City Council for ten years. "Everybody's asking for a change (in county government) and I'd like to be a part of that change," Roloff said, adding, "The county seems to be very challenging right now. With a new manager being hired, the board has to be very strong and make sure that person carries out policies. I'd also like to see the people being listened to for a while - the employees, the people in the county."

County clerk Jane Brannon is being challenged by Dolly Louiselle, of 00554 Second St., Charlevoix. Brannon has been county clerk since 1980. Louiselle worked in the private sector as an artist, supervisor and bookkeeper for 22 years. Louiselle chose to run for county clerk because she was ready for a change and thought the county was also ready for change. "When I was getting my petition signed, I got a lot of positive reaction from people," she said.

Charlevoix addresses have to change

by Laurie Lounsbury

Like it or not, hundreds of Charlevoix homes will be getting new addresses. The three county 911 system won't be operable until Charlevoix straightens out its house numbering system. "It'll be up to us to figure out how far to go with the re-numbering. I'm on the hot seat now, since I fought the original address change," said city councilman Robert Timms.

Timms will serve on an ad hoc committee with police chief Dennis Halverson and councilman Gabe Campbell. They will decide which addresses need changing. And their decision will make some people angry.

"If my street changes from Belvedere Ave. to E. Hurlbut St., my property value will go down. I'm not changing my address unless you people change my taxes to reflect East Hurlbut values," Jill Picha told the council.

Timms said that Belvedere Ave. residents will probably have to switch to Hurlbut addresses. "Since there's no access to homes from Belvedere, there's got to be a change," Timms said.

Timms estimated that 300 to 400 addresses will be changed. Homes with half numbers in the address will change, along with homes

Students advocate anti-tobacco policies

Sixth and seventh grade student council members at Charlevoix Middle School met with the Charlevoix-Emmet-Antrim Tobacco Reduction Coalition on May 8, 1996. The coalition has been holding their meetings at area schools to engage and empower youth in advocating for healthy, tobacco-free policies.

The coalition recognizes the importance of youth advocating for a smoke-free society and encouraged this group of students to attend the meetings on a regular basis.

Following the meeting, the students and Student Council Advisor, Jane Garver went to Oleson's grocery store and asked manager Bob Borths to move the tobacco products to make it harder for young people to shop lift. Their concern was brought about during the meeting, when they learned that some elementary students recently were caught stealing cigarettes.

Anyone interested in working with the coalition or the youth as they advocate for tobacco-free policies please contact Mary Ann Cox at District Health Department No. 3, 547-6523.

County elections will heat up in summer

by Laurie Lounsbury

County elections will follow the season's weather patterns. The races will heat up over the summer, then cool off after August. Both the challengers and incumbents have filed their nominating petitions as Republicans, so the winners will be determined at the August primary election.

Three Charlevoix County Commissioners are running unopposed. They are Phil Johnson in District 3, Carl Price in District 1, and Jim Behling in District 2. Howard Hosler in District 4 is not seeking re-election.

Former equalization director Joan Blanchard, of 14825 Vernida Ave., is challenging incumbent Don Smith in District 5.

"I've been thinking about doing this for a long time. I believe in county government, and I think there's a need for a woman on the board," Blanchard said.

Blanchard retired last year after working for the county for 30 years. "I think my years as equalization director are a plus. I have a lot to learn about county government from a commissioner standpoint, but I'm willing to take the time and learn it," Blanchard said.

Blanchard doesn't have a campaign platform, but she does have a slogan. "May the best woman win," she said.

Paint Blitz will benefit many area families

Charlevoix artists, Russ and Sue Bolt, have done their part for the 1996 Paint Blitz. The Bolts are the proud artists of this year's Paint Blitz 1996 tee shirt. "This is a great project and we're really happy to be a part of the Paint Blitz," said Sue, who designed this year's "painting angel" for the Charlevoix Emmet Housing Coalition (CEHC) Paint Blitz.

"All our volunteers will get one of the tee shirts," said Kathy Johnson, chair of the event and CEHC board member. "We're in the process of getting all our volunteers lined up. We have a real need this year for all sorts of volunteers, not just painters. We need volunteers to help deliver food, power wash houses prior to painting, act as runners, and we could really use one person to help with the Emmet County coordination. It's pretty tough for one person to stretch themselves between Levering and East Jordan."

The Paint Blitz was started in 1993 and the number of houses painted has grown from a total of 11 the first year to nearly 30 requests this year. The Paint Blitz will be on June 8, (with a tentative rain date of June 15). The Paint Blitz is designed to paint homes for families who are physically and financially unable to paint. "We're not sure we will have enough painters and other workers to paint all the houses this year," says Johnson. "Last year we had around 325 volunteers in the two county area and we really need all of them and more again this year."

Area restaurants help provide lunches for Paint Blitz volunteers. BC Pizza of Petoskey, Darlene's and Marty's in East Jordan, Subway in Boyne City and Charlevoix and BC Pizza in Boyne City all help provide meals. Last year over 300 meals were served to the volunteers who spent an accumulated total of over 3,000 hours working. CEHC is looking for volunteers who are willing to do any of these tasks and they can volunteer as an individual or as a group. They are also looking for additional restaurants who are willing to provide food. House applications have been tentatively accepted from Levering (3), Conway (1), Alanson (1), Harbor Springs (2), Petoskey (1), Boyne City (4), Charlevoix (3), Bay Shore (2), Boyne Falls (2) and East Jordan (3). Johnson said they hope to paint all the houses currently on their list but a lot more volunteers and food are required to do them all.

Anyone interested in volunteering to work on the Paint Blitz or to provide food for the volunteers should call the Charlevoix Emmet Housing Coalition at 582-2894.

Heigh-ho Hankins!

City officer Scott Hankins will be on horseback this summer

by Laurie Lounsbury

The horse is Handsome, the officer is Hankins, and together they'll be riding through the streets of Charlevoix this summer.

Charlevoix City Police Officer Scott Hankins, an avid rider, dreamed up the idea of having a mounted policeman. Hankins sold the idea to police chief Dennis Halverson four months ago. "I could see that it would have some practical application. On horseback, Scott can ride down through wooded trails and into park areas," Halverson said.

Hankins and his 12 year old Apaloosa gelding will be able to do more than catch bad guys in the deep woods. They will develop a positive rapport between citizens and the police department.

When Hankins took Handsome out for a trial run through town, he was stopped repeatedly by interested passersby. One little girl gazed wide-eyed at the horse, then turned a shy look up to Hankins. "Would you like to pet the horse?" Hankins asked her. The girl answered with a big smile and boldly stepped towards Handsome. Hankins dismounted and held Handsome quietly so the girl could stroke the horse's face. Then the girl proceeded on her way, tossing a friendly wave back at Hankins.

"That's exactly what we're striving for - a positive reaction from the folks," Hankins said.

Handsome needed extensive training to become a member of the Charlevoix Police Department. Hankins and Handsome went downstate for three days of mounted police training with the Detroit Police Department. Handsome had to endure the sound of guns being shot at close range, helicopters landing close by, squad cars with lights and sirens driving right at him, the sight of blazing fire and the acrid smell of smoke. Hankins said that Handsome passed the tests.

Now that Handsome has proven he can handle the direst of emergency circumstances, he needs to train for only one more thing. He has to get used to Charlevoix summer traffic.

Hankins and Handsome will be patrolling in Charlevoix one day a week during June, July and August. Hankins will be decked out in black knee boots with spurs, a riding helmet, police uniform and riding britches. He'll probably be as handsome as Handsome.

Teams need more kids like Mike

by Laurie Lounsbury

A new baseball season is under way, and some talented young athletes are catching the attention of coaches and parents. These athletes, born with natural coordination and strength, are often called sports heroes.

I drive by the ballpark occasionally and watch these kids in fluid motion, pure grace and power connected by sturdy tendons and muscles. I listen to the crackling voices caught somewhere between childhood and manhood, calling out the familiar baseball refrains: "Yo, batter, batter - Easy out, easy out!"

Whenever I get near a ball game, I think about a kid named Mike.

Mike was a sunny,12 year old, freckle-faced kid who hadn't quite outgrown his youthful baby fat. The bent rims of his glasses and the bridge held together with masking tape spoke of his mishap involving a skateboard and a fire hydrant. The lenses were covered with the grime of adolescence. He tripped over his shoelaces even when they were tied. He looked like a kid who should head up the school's audio-visual department. But Mike was devoted to Little League baseball.

One of Mike's ball games is permanently etched in my memory.

When the umpire called, "Batter Up!" Mike stepped up to plate, lifted his chin and waited with breathless anticipation for the ball to whistle down the strike zone. Mike stepped into the pitch, swung mightily - and missed. "Strike One," the umpire yelled.

Mike's team mates whispered loudly in the dugout. "Oh boy, here we go again, another out," they complained.

The opposing team jeered. "Easy out, easy out," they called to their pitcher, who swaggered jauntily on the mound, like a retriever with a bird already in his mouth.

The outfielders blithely disregarded Mike, giving their attention instead to the planes landing at the nearby runway. Infielders assumed sassy poses, gloved hands perched uselessly on a cocked hips. No need to stand prepared for this batter.

Mike was undeterred. He assumed his batting position, thinking this time he'd knock one out of the park. Another swing and a miss.

"C'mon Mike, just hit the ball," his team mates said in weary voices.

The third swing proved to be no more effective. "You're out!" the umpire needlessly told him.

For Mike, a successful time at bat was when he nicked the stitches on the baseball and sent it over the backstop, successfully diverting the ball from its usual straight course into the catcher's glove.

Mike never threw a bat, never scowled or cursed himself. Instead, he politely handed the bat to the next player and took a position by the fence so he could cheer for his teammates.

When Mike's team took the outfield, Mike trotted quickly to his lonely position in right field, stumbling over gopher holes in the grass. Once there, he assumed the proper fielding position with his knees bent, his glove in front of him. He kept his near-sighted vision trained on the batters.

With two runners on the bases, the third batter popped a slow, easy fly to right field.

"I got it, I got it," Mike hollered with glee. But he didn't have it. The ball just missed his outstretched glove and began its rapid roll further afield.

Mike didn't miss a beat. He turned and scrambled after that rolling ball, finally pouncing on it where it came to rest against the outfield fence.

Winded, but not winding down, Mike scooped up the ball and hurled it in the general direction of the cut-off man. "Throw it Mike, throw it hard," the cut-off man yelled.

Mike's throw came off his fingers too soon. The ball lofted into the air, dropped 30 feet short of the cut-off man, and dribbled slowly along the ground.

All the runners crossed home plate.

Mike's team turned to the next batter, dejected, angry. "Way to go, Mike," they said with disgust. "Oh, great. Three runs scored on that play," they grumbled.

"I'll get it next time, guys," Mike promised cheerfully.

Mike didn't get it the next time, or any time after that. He never had a hit all season, just had three foul tips to his credit.

But Mike came to every practice, attended every game, full of good will and enthusiasm.

Mike was my sports hero.

Mike and his family moved out of town the following year. I wonder if adolescence was kind to Mike. I wonder if his grit and determination finally made him a better ball player. I wonder if he got contact lenses.

I imagine that Mike will grow up to be a fine human being, and will make a wonderful contribution to society.

And when the last chapter is written on Mike's life, no one will remember that he couldn't hit a baseball. He will be remembered for his good spirit, his kindness and his sportsmanship.

Charlevoix doesn't need any more good athletes. We have lots of them. We need more kids like Mike.

EDITH GILBERT

by EDITH GILBERT

Linda Mason said, "No, no, no!" the first time Joe Ruggiero called to ask her if she would allow him to video her own home for his national TV show, Best of American Design.

"I want to show our viewers how designers live," he explained. "Designers don't have the budgets that their clients have — which helps foster improvisation and creativity on their part."

Laughingly, Mason retorted, "If we show clients our own homes, they'd never hire us!" This, from a member of ASID (American Society of Interior Design).

Thus a reluctant meeting was arranged last summer, while Ruggiero toured the area filming designer homes on Beaver Island, Mackinaw, Bay View, as well as Charlevoix.

Mason's home is currently being shown on HGTV. If you own a satellite dish, you may see the program locally. Otherwise, just drive by 604 Park Avenue, and you will notice the shake shingle cottage with a large arched window facing Lake Michigan. Architect Hans Wiemer helped Mason carry out her original design concept in this woodland setting. Her goal was to capitalize on the magnificent view of the lake, and to create as much light and open space as possible in spite of the limited square footage in the small, 100-year-old, cottage. The original fir wood floor was nicely refinished, but more matching lumber was needed for the expanded living room. Fortunately her carpenter located the same lumber mill in the Upper Peninsula, still in operation, which milled the original flooring!

Mason's living room walls are white as is the upholstery. Her rug is navy blue and a pair of Firehouse chairs are painted grass green. A needlepoint throw pillow combines the bright palette of all the colors in the room. I questioned Mason about her green shutter over the fireplace, which came from an old Kansas Farmhouse. She told me that she could not afford the expensive painting she coveted, therefore she temporarily hung the weathered shutter over the fireplace while the room was being taped for television. It's still there.

Mason's philosophy is to change our environment as often as possible! Since we spend 75 percent of our time indoors, she feels that leaving our surroundings static is boring. "Let's throw a different color pillow on the couch, add a new lamp, or move a piece of furniture that changes our environment seasonally," she says. She feels that changing our environment with accessories lifts our spirits, just as bringing in a Christmas tree and decorating it with lights lifts our spirits during the holidays.

Mason feels there is a definite need for professional designers and points out that if we can do our own taxes — why do we hire a CPA? She knows only too well that some people are uncomfortable at the thought of hiring a designer, because they think this means they have no taste or talent.

"Not True!" she says. "Designers are resource people, who know where to find the the thousands of items that are available on the market and they can recommend the best product. Not all products are right for every climate or environment. One needs to be aware of temperatures, moisture, wearability and safety found in the myriads of products that are on the market today." She also says that it is possible nowadays to design a home that is chemically free. Most important, a designer is also trained to visualize space and scale. They know

City made mistake buying Parkside Restaurant

Editor,

I have read with interest the comments by Councilman Robert Timms regarding the Charlevoix City purchase of the former Parkside Restaurant. I agree with him 100 percent. I should have spoken out earlier about what I consider an outrage. I am always intrigued how committee action on a matter such as this can sweep forward like a wild-fire, making no sense ultimately. I will attempt to put this in perspective from my point of view: The partnership of restaurateurs who in one fell swoop have eliminated competition and gotten their money back instantly is indeed a masterful stroke. Investing in a business and getting ones' money back in ten years would be a good deal; this deal is exceptional. I don't know how the selling price to the city was established. I would think that upon inspection of the books of the two restaurants (Argonne & Terry's) at least the gross increases shown in their books with the Parkside out of the picture should be deducted from whatever the partners paid for the Parkside. It is clear what the Restaurant Partnership has accomplished. It becomes very unclear what advantage this accomplishes for the city, and its taxpayers. First, the city will lose part of its more valuable tax-base, (the Partnership could pay on an annually adjusted basis the loss to the city ad-infinitum). On a square foot basis, or on any basis, the small park-area increase will be the most expensive grassed over hill in the city. It will be very steep, require a great deal of filling, very difficult to maintain, and it will be impossible to support a picnic table or chairs for park use. It has been indicated that a major portion of the funds will be coming from the state, and maybe federal government. I am sure we all know where the state, and federal governments get their money. So again, we, the red-blooded tax payers, are being asked to buy out a business deal that possible if the city stays out might not make any financial sense to the Restaurant Partnership ultimately. They could lose money. We are being asked to take the risk out of their deal with little or no benefit to the city, only expense.

I'm trusting this describes my thoughts on the subject!

Robert E. Wexstaff

Unhappy student athlete

Editor,

As a student at Charlevoix High School, I see how the youth of today's world is mistreated and put-down on a daily basis. The problems that these young-adults create are not just caused by the neglect of parents or guardians, but also by the coaches and role models of the world.

I am a very athletic student. I play three sports a school year; basketball, volleyball, and softball. Playing three sports a year can be very stressful on anyone, and the stress seems to build up around the end of the school year. Then, to have a coach "verbally bash" a player in front of other players and parents is inexcusable and uncalled for.

The self-esteem or self-confidence of a person can be very fragile, and to have someone shoot down any confidence is a terrible thing. Not only do they jeopardize

by Laurie Lounsbury

If you had a dollar for every time you heard someone say, "I'm going to write a book someday," you'd probably be rich.

Lots of people talk about writing a book but few ever tackle the daunting task. Pat Gaskin is one person who actually did more than talk about writing a book. She took a class called, "Writing and Publishing Your Book," at Brasstown, North Carolina's John C. Campbell Folk School. And when the five day class was over, Gaskin left with a completed book in her hands.

Admittedly, the book is not a massive epic. It's what Gaskin's teacher called a "small book," running about 20 pages in length. The book is titled, "Make The Most Of What You Got."

Gaskin said she always wanted to write a book but was overwhelmed at the thought of tackling a full length book. The small book idea appealed to her. "It became a medium that I felt comfortable with. I was intimidated by big novels," Gaskin said.

Inspired by her classroom success, Gaskin wrote a second book, "Don't Let The Good Life Pass You By," similar in length to the first. Both books detail the folksy living experience in rural Brasstown, North Carolina. In the time honored tradition of storytelling, Gaskin relates incidents that revolve around a business and the special people in the small community. Each book is peppered with poems, song lyrics, and photos. "No matter where we live, we're always interested in other cultures. Rural life always has appeal," Gaskin said.

Gaskin's books will be available for $5 each at the Bridge Street Bookshop.

BEACONS OF BLESSINGS

by REV. BRUCE HAMILTON

If you are really looking, you will be amazed at the places you can find signs from life that show you how God is at work. I uncovered a bit of theology in a most unexpected place on Saturday at the Rotary District 6290 conference in Petoskey. They had a three fold theme that "preaches" beautifully. They just didn't know it. I put it to the story of the Good Samaritan from Luke's gospel.

The first part of the theme was "Act With Integrity." If you're familiar with the story, you may remember that a lawyer was trying to trap Jesus into saying something incriminating that would justify his arrest. He asked Jesus two questions. The first was how he could obtain eternal life. Jesus in essence told him that he was a lawyer. What did the law say to him? He responded that you should love the Lord your God with all your heart, soul, mind, and strength and that you should love your neighbor as yourself. The lawyer couldn't find any fault with the way Jesus had handled him so far so he pushed the game to the next level and asked Jesus who was his neighbor? That's when the story began.

The Master told of a parable where a man was the victim of thieves. He was left for dead on the side of the road, beaten and bleeding. A priest passed by. He took a look at the sight and deliberately avoided getting involved. You see the lawyer challenging Jesus wasn't the only one whose ethics were in question. If anyone should have felt under the obligation to help, you would have thought a priest would. I'm so grateful that even though we ministers are far from perfect, we hopefully are all forgiven. But it's not just lawyers or priests or ministers. Each and every one of us should "act with integrity" in everything we do.

The second leg of the Rotary theme was "Serve With Love." And to that end, remember that a Levite, what you and I might consider a deacon or elder, also saw our victim on the side of the road. Just like the priest, he too deliberately avoided getting involved. Friends, if we have the resources or the talent to make a difference, to help someone in need, love compels us to at least try.

The third leg of the Rotary theme was "Work for Peace." The Samaritan that ultimately came along was the last person on the face of the earth that anyone expected to have offered help. He went way beyond the call too by bridging a gap between him and the victim. He bound his wounds, took him to safety, and even covered all the expenses of his recovery.

When the lawyer was asked, after hearing the evidence, who he thought was being the real neighbor, there was only one answer. The neighbor was the man who had shown mercy, the one who was committed to making a difference. Jesus got in the last word in this verbal chess match. He challenged the lawyer to go and do likewise. Which brings things full circle. I challenge you to act with integrity, serve with love, and work for peace in all that you do too.

Pool receives grant

The drive to build an indoor swimming pool for the Charlevoix area received a boost this week with the announcement of a $60,000 grant to Charlevoix Friends of the Pool from the Frey Foundation.

The foundation previously provided $10,000 which served as "seed" money to assist the group in implementing capital campaign plans. CFOP is one of the few citizen organizations in the United States spearheading a public indoor pool with private funds.

"The Frey Foundation is pleased to again offer its support for this project," said James M. Richmond, president of the Frey Foundation. The grant-pledge would be paid when construction pledges, including the Frey Foundation's $60,000, in-kind gifts toward construction costs and cash on hand total $950,000, the cost to build and equip the pool.

Thus far, CFOP has raised over a million dollars in pledges, grants, site donation, in kind services and materials, cash gifts, and bequests toward both construction and operation.

Approximately $388,000 still is needed to complete the building, according to CFOP treasurer Joanne Curtis. Although the severe winter caused some building delays the organization hopes to have the pool in operation by November, 1996.

"By next winter we'd like to see young children taking swimming lessons and others using the pool for recreation and therapy,' said CFOP president David Strawbridge in making the announcement.

Teen center director grateful for community support

Following is a letter from Scott Kelly, Activities Director for Charlevoix Teen Center.

Open letter to local organizations and Guardian Angels:

First, and foremost, THANK YOU ALL for your support. I am coming up on the anniversary of my first full year with the Teen Center and it has been a pleasant surprise learning that the "great" kids outnumber the "good" kids 1000 to 1, and even bigger numbers of people willing to help than I had ever realized. Charlevoix is a town full of people who quietly get the job done. Thanks again, and yes, I am signing on for another year.

Second, we will be starting our summer schedule on Memorial weekend by changing our weekly dance to Friday night instead of Saturday night - beginning Friday, May 24. Dances will continue to run from 7 p.m. to 10 p.m. every Friday night (except Venetian weekend) until school starts in the fall. We have a couple openings each Friday night for adult volunteers who would like to help run the concession counter throughout the summer while some of our regular volunteers take a breather for the summer. Our Friday night "Adult After-Hours" will continue from 10 a.m. to 12 midnight throughout the summer as well. Everyone is welcome to come and enjoy the healthy, fun atmosphere which you are all helping to maintain.

Third, we are ready to accept used books for the annual sidewalk sales book sale in August. Books can be delivered to the Teen Center each weekday afternoon from 2:30 to 5:30 p.m. during our regular hours of operation. Please do not drop them off when we are not here. We are especially looking for children's books, fiction of any kind and biographies.

Finally, please mark your calendars for Wednesday, June 26 so that you may attend our 2nd Annual Open house. We will be open from 12 noon to 5:30 p.m. with a brief program, board member introductions, and guided tours conducted by teens from 1 to 2 p.m.

I was told by a reliable source that summer would be on June 27 this year. So don't forget to stop by on June 26 for your reminder. Thanks again.

Sincerely,
D. Scott Kelly, Activities Director
Charlevoix Teen Center, Inc.

Letter carrier thanks community for canned food donations

Thank you Charlevoix residents for making the Postal Food Drive such a huge success. Through your generosity, we were able to send three and a half tons of non-perishable food items to Charlevoix food pantries. It is a wonderful feeling to live and work in such a caring community.

A special thanks to letter carrier Jim Boss and window clerks Julie McGhee and Lori Antaya for donating their Saturday afternoons off to help collect and sort food; to Postal Supervisor Glenda Pfeiffer for her help; and also to all of the Charlevoix letter carriers who collected food on Saturday, May 11.

Kelly Morris, Letter Carrier

Food pantry thanks postal workers

Editor,

The Charlevoix Mail Carriers joined the National Association of Letter Carriers and the United Way in sponsoring a food drive on Saturday, May 11. Three and one-half tons of non-perishable food was collected.

The Charlevoix Community gave fine support and many people in the Charlevoix school district will benefit from this drive.

Thank you to the Letter Carriers and the volunteers that helped.

the role that that person has on the team but they also jeopardize that person's role in life.

A coach is someone that should be around to help you improve and "coach" you. Not someone who makes derogatory statements the minute your back is turned. I feel some coaches need to look at the effect that they have on their team and think about whether they are being a positive or negative influence.

Food connoisseurs will sign newly written restaurant guide book at local book shop this weekend

The co-authors of the new Connoisseur Up North, a Food-Lover's Guide to Northern Michigan, will be on hand to sign copies of their book during a reception at Bridge Street Book Shop, downtown Charlevoix, from 2 p.m. to 5 p.m., Saturday, May 25. The book, which retails for $17.95, has been a hot seller since it's release in early May.

In forewords to "The Connoisseur Up North," two of Michigan's premier restaurateurs, Harlan "Pete" Peterson of Tapawingo and Wes Westhoven of The Rowe Inn, cite the authors insight and selectivity. "The Rowe has been written up hundreds of times over the years," Westhoven said, "but no one has ever captured the essence of what we do better than Graydon and Sherri. Believe me, you can trust what they tell you about dining Up North. If you live for food and wine and Northern Michigan as much as I do, you need this book."

Peterson, whose Tapawingo recently was named Michigan's best restaurant by the New York-based Zagat Survey, calls the DeCamps "passionate about great food and wine" and says, "It means a great deal to be included in a discriminating book whose authors make enlightened, articulate observations about fine dining."

The DeCamps undertook their book, according to Sherri DeCamp, "because people who read Graydon's Traverse magazine columns often ask what our favorite is, or want us to suggest where to take visitors or guests. Our book helps answer those questions."

What sets The Connoisseur Up North apart is that its selections are based on merit. "No restaurant paid to be included, as is the case with some other guides and directories. Nor could they have," says Graydon DeCamp. "Everyone has different tastes," says DeCamp, "and trying to pick the best one, or the top five, is like naming the best poems or paintings. We've chosen what we think are the really good restaurants," he says, "and we leave it to the readers to decide which they like best."

Grandvue to get Alzheimer's unit

Grandvue Medical Care Facility will host an information meeting with the governing board and management on May 29 at 7 p.m. Residents, family members and community members are invited to attend and learn more about the new, 20 bed Alzheimer's unit that will open soon. The meeting will be at the Grandvue Medical Care Facility, 172 South Peninsula Rd., East Jordan.

The Grandvue facility has applied to the Michigan Department of Public Health (MDPH) for a Certificate of Need (CON) for a 20 bed Alzheimer Unit. These beds became available through an Addendum for Special Needs Populations when the state allocated an additional 200 beds to be utilized through the State for Alzheimer research. Grandvue, whose CON application was submitted in February, 1994, has received preliminary approval and is now waiting to draft a settlement with the Attorney General.

The new unit will greatly benefit both the Alzheimer and the alert resident. Both groups have different needs and would be better served in separate areas. The converted unit will feature a more home-like environment. There will be a secured garden with a walking path added to help meet the needs of the residents to wander in the early stages of dementia. This garden area will incorporate activities such as: Pitching horseshoes, bird feeding, tending flower gardens, hanging out clothes to dry; all of these designed to provide meaningful activities and rekindle past memories.

As part of the Certificate of Need requirements, the unit will also participate in research.The research chosen by Grandvue is to incorporate and study the effects of music therapy on specific behaviors. This will be accomplished through singing and playing instruments, especially repeated rhythms with drums.

Grandvue currently has 63% of their population diagnosed with Alzheimer's Disease or related dementia.The fastest growing segment of the population in the United States are those over 85 and of those, nearly half will suffer from some form of dementia, according to the Alzheimer's Association.

Soccer begins on new Shanahan Fields

On Saturday, May 18, the new Shanahan Fields were inaugurated by the Charlevoix 4-H Soccer Club under 14 Lady Rayders.

The young women gave the new field its first win in the first game, downing Cadillac 2-1. Scoring for Charlevoix were Erika Kammermann, with an assist by Jill Ramsey, and Jill Ramsey with an assist by Erika Kammermann. Christi Shindorf got the winning goal. Coach Jamie Oppermann praised the effort of his entire team in this win.

Game two action saw Petoskey down Cadillac, 3-2. In game three Petoskey defeated Suttons Bay, 3-2. In game four, Suttons Bay downed Charlevoix 3-1. Erika Kammermann scored the lone Charlevoix goal on a penalty kick. Coach Oppermann credited Lindsey Simmons, Emily Chulick and Lindsey Carland with strong defensive play and Taya Drost, Shannon Nystrom and Abbey Schaperkotter with a strong offensive effort in both games.

Shanahan Fields were totally renovated by the Charlevoix Township and a host of volunteers, showing once again how the citizens of Charlevoix pull together for our youth.

Janenne Irene Froats new Courier editor

Former News-Review reporter joins Courier staff

Janenne Irene Froats

Janenne Irene Froats, 31, hopes her new job as editor of the Charlevoix Courier will give her a chance to connect with the community.

Froats replaces former editor Scott Swanson, who recently purchased the Straitsland Resorter in Indian River.

She has worked at the Petoskey News-Review since 1992, most recently covering the Petoskey area, including North Central Michigan College, the Big Rock Point nuclear power plant and Northern Michigan Hospital/Burns Clinic.

"I'm ready for a new challenge," said Froats, a Boyne City native. "I am not going to make any major changes right away. I want to get to know the community. I want the paper to reflect the town."

Froats said she has worked to establish trusting relationships with her sources and to overcome negative perceptions of the media.

"I love the excitement, meeting new people, weaving words together to make a story that impacts people's lives, and the challenge to be a fair and ethical reporter," she said. "Your sources are worth your best effort to make a story fair and accurate. At the Courier, I am going to expand that from a source to a community."

Her Elders series, which runs twice a month in the News-Review, has received much positive feedback from readers. The stories focus on community members who offer a historical or life perspective.

"I enjoy spending time with people and learning from their life," she said. "I try to slip into their life and have them tell me stories."

The Charlevoix Courier has a small news staff, which will require her to write in addition to her editor duties.

"I look at it as having the best of both worlds - a way to grow and still do the things I love," she said.

Froats has an associate degree from Manatee Community College in Bradenton, Florida, and a bachelor of science in journalism from Evangel College in Springfield, Mo. She worked in an accounting firm in Sarasota, Fla. before becoming a journalist.

Before coming to the News-Review, Froats worked as an intern for the Charlevoix County Press and the Springfield News-Leader.

Boystown Model teaches students good manners

by Laurie Lounsbury

Smile. Use a pleasant voice. Look the person in the eye. Then introduce yourself.

These may sound like trivial social skills, but they aren't. They are just some of the social skills that seem to be overlooked in today's busy society.

The Charlevoix Elementary School has taken steps to rectify the loss of proper social training that some children aren't getting. The school has adopted a series of assemblies from the Boystown Model. The assemblies teach the students good manners in a variety of different applications. Each month, a different social skill is introduced. Introducing yourself, greeting someone properly, taking no for an answer, or resolving a disagreement are just some of the skills they've learned.

Each monthly social skill is reinforced by teachers and staff. When a student uses the proper social skill, they receive a "Sparkle Coupon." At the end of each month, they can redeem their coupons for gift certificates at Subway.

"I was skeptical when we started this, but now I can't believe the results. It really works," said elementary school principal Dick Swenor.

The school is in its second year of using the Boystown Model.

Land Information System will help both tourists and local residents

by Laurie Lounsbury

Have a question about the zoning ordinance in your neighborhood? Ever wonder what your neighborhood looks like from the air?

You'll be able to get those answers from the county with a touch of a finger sometime next year.

The county is developing a Land Information System, (L.I.S.) which is a touch computer system that will give anyone access to an abundance of county land-related information.

The computer system will probably sit in a kiosk in the county building. Users need only touch the screen to activate the machine and gain access to information about soils, erosion areas, sand dune areas, landmarks, and historical information. "You don't need to be a computer wizard to use any of this," said Larry Sullivan, county planning director.

Old, historical photos will be scanned onto the computer. You can see what the county looked like 80 or 100 years ago. Current aerial photographs will give a bird's eye view of the county. Wetland information and land use laws will be available to everyone.

The Northwest Michigan Council of Governments initiated discussion about the L.I.S. system almost four years ago, when the technology was being introduced. Funding for the project comes primarily from foundation grants, with the county kicking in about $6,000 for the project.

This is the information gathering phase of the project. "We have a wide range of people gathering data to put into the program," Sullivan said. Townships and historical societies throughout the county will donate photos and information to the plan.

In Manistee, the L.I.S. provides a historical tour of the area via computer, showing old photos and the locations of the former landmarks.

The L.I.S. should be ready by the end of this year.

Planters, cookers, watchers and eaters work together to make the 15th "Operation Petunia" a success

by Laurie Lounsbury

With the help of 800 rather chilly folks, the Charlevoix Petunias found new digs along Bridge Street. Planting time took less than an hour - probably because everyone was in a hurry to warm their hands over the hot dog grills at the picnic.

Mrs. Charles W. Morris won the early bird drawing for the Friends of the Pool Auction and KCB dinner on August 4. She will be driven to the party in a limousine. It was rather serendipitous that Mrs. Morris won the drawing, since earlier that day she donated a J24 sailboat worth $7,000 to the auction. Bruce MacArthur of the Charlevoix Friends of the Pool said, "We were really happy to see Mrs. Morris win, after she made such a generous donation to the auction."

The picnic was a smooth success, thanks to the hundreds of volunteers who fed 600 people. And just what do all those volunteers do? The women line up behind a long table and work feverishly to serve hot dogs. They function with the assembly line accuracy of a Saturn auto plant. They open up a napkin, slap down a hot dog bun, tuck a hot dog into place, wrap up the bundle and pass it down the line. Other women carry huge boxes of cookies to and fro, or balance pizza boxes over their heads while navigating up and down the hills in East Park. Still another batch of women tend to the condiment table, taking their chances around young children wielding enormous squeeze bottles of ketchup and mustard.

And then there are the Rotarians in charge of hot dog cooking. The cooking of hot dogs is a tremendous challenge, requiring many skilled participants. First, it takes about 96 men to cook the hot dogs. It appears that each man is assigned one specific hot dog to turn at just the right time. Behind the hot dog cookers is a cluster of about 47 men who are the charcoal checkers. They keep a carefully trained eye on the coals, making sure they maintain proper cooking temperature. From an elevated position a few feet up the hill are the grill supervisors. This group of about 89 men supervise the hot dog cookers and the charcoal checkers like hawks, not letting one dog slip past either undercooked or overdone. It's a grave responsibility, so they do lots of chatting with the passers-by in order to cut the tension.

Another group of 15 or 20 men spread out along the waterfront, scanning the waters for any unscrupulous pirates who might try to crash the Petunia Picnic. They cleverly pretend to be looking casually at the pretty boats on Round Lake. This always throws the marauding pirates off guard.

All in all, it takes a great bunch of wonderful people in this community to engineer the Operation Petunia. This 15th annual petunia planting and picnic was as spirited and enjoyable as the 14 that preceeded it.

Tough times make the great stories in life

by Laurie Lounsbury

I was recently asked an intriguing question: "How do you get through the difficult times in your life?"

My answer came quickly. "A sense of humor helps," I said. Then in a vulnerable moment I revealed my private, personal mantra. "I get through the hard times by repeating to myself, 'This will make a great story someday.'"

That mantra has been my secret weapon against bad times since my first painful pangs of puberty, when I kissed another awkward adolescent and our braces locked our faces together. My big brother had to pry us apart. When my embarrassed partner fled the scene, I called after him, "This will make a great story someday."

> Happy times are easy, like coasting down a gentle hill on a bike with a comfortable seat.

"This will make a great story someday," was what I said when my second child was about to make her entrance into the world. We lived in New York City then, and had the misfortune of flagging down a Nepalian cab driver to take us to the hospital. The poor man had given up a dangerous life of mountain climbing for the relative safety of New York cab driving. He'd been in Manhattan only six days when he met us. Every time we hit a big pot hole in the road, the panic stricken cabbie broke into a tearful refrain. "Oh please, lady, don't have that baby in my cab! I don't know nothing about babies!"

My former husband was dutifully paying attention to me and didn't notice when our cabbie headed north for the Bronx instead of east for the hospital. When I looked out the window and saw the grim, scarred surroundings of the the south Bronx, I had an alarming vision of delivering my baby in a heroine-ridden neighborhood with a former Mt. Everest guru acting as mid-wife. "This will make a great story someday," I said between contractions.

When I was a travel director I once found myself standing on the Spanish-Portuguese border with 350 tourists in tow and nowhere to go. The hostile horder officials threw our passports back and forth at one another, unwilling to let us leave one country and go to the next. So I did something unspeakable - I pulled out the last of my American cash and started handing out bribes like they were invitations to a debutante ball. No one was overlooked. I said to myself, "This will make a great story someday."

"This will make a great story someday" has gotten me through high water floods and low income years. It's served me well through two births, a divorce, and the death of my father. (His life is one great, inspirational story.)

Life is filled with great stories. It's the conflict, the adversity we face that gives a story its character and depth. When was the last time you listened, spellbound, to a story where everything went right?

Happy times are easy, like coasting down a gentle hill on a bike with a comfortable seat. It's the hard times in life that turn a breezy bike ride into a breathtaking roller coaster ride.

The Courier staff has been enjoying a nice, gentle bike ride for many years. The terrain is changing now. Scott Swanson left the paper after a record-setting eight years as editor. Our office manager Sally Splitt is leaving after keeping our collective ducks in a row for seven years.

Change is difficult and stressful. But that's okay. It will make a great story someday.

Student praises her former band director, Gary Stutzman

Editor,

In our busy lives, it seems we seldom take the time to thank those who have helped enrich our lives. Why not join me this week by taking the time to thank someone who influenced you? Whether it was a teacher, a coach, a colleague, or a friend, why not take time this week to contact them and say thanks! Here's a special thank you to someone who has influenced many of us in Charlevoix!

Dear Gary:

After seeing "Mr. Holland's Opus" last month, I decided that I was going to take the time to thank you for enriching the lives of so many of us Charlevoix kids. As far as I know, the community has never had a "thank you Mr. Stutzman" day, so till then, here's a few thoughts.

For many of us, our high school musical experiences were a very important part of our lives. Not only did we gain a lifelong appreciation of music, but band gave many of us a sense of belonging that we had never before experienced. Many of us never played team sports, and for the first time we were part of a group that was striving to reach a new level of excellence. I'm afraid that the tapes might show that we accomplished things that we had not yet dreamed.

What a wonderful gift that was to all of us! Last summer at our class reunion, I was struck by the variety of accomplishments made by a group of kids from a small town in northern Michigan. Some of those accomplishments were directly related to music and could be easily traced back to our days in the band room. But for many of us, other non-musical victories in our lives were based on a foundation built when we first felt a sense of being better than we had ever been before. We caught your vision of what we could be, so we got heatstroke at band camp, fainted at parade rest at the cemetery, did calisthenics on the football field, and froze our fingers playing in snowstorms. Many of us took that seed of confidence and nurtured it into the strength we needed to become productive, successful adults.

Thanks for all the fun, the mental and physical exercise, and the training in teamwork. Thanks for putting up with teenage struggles, out-of-tune clarinets, endless bus trips with cranky kids, and our blank stares during sight reading. I don't know how you did it, but you always seemed to smile and keep a sense of humor. Thanks for dedicating yourself to being a teacher and for all that meant to all of us. We really appreciate your sacrifice!

With Gratitude,
Tammy Wieland Leake

Resident questions city's role in 911 address changes

Editor,

On Monday the 20th of May a Special Council Meeting was held in our City because the organization that is supposed to provide our City with 911 service cannot do so. Reason given was 2041 telephones with the 547 Prefix can not be identified with a street address.

The question as to just what the number of phones in this category are within the jurisdiction of the Charlevoix Safety Departments was not answered. Even if the City were to correct everyone of its discrepancies the City will not get 911 service.

Another reason given was that there are too many streets with the same name within the City of Charlevoix. In your newest telephone directory is a map titled Charlevoix. On the adjacent page is a listing by name of all the streets appearing on that map which is 95. Of this 95, 59 are within the City Limits. Of the 59 there are 8 streets which have the same first name. (IE) Belvedere Ave-Belvedere Terrace, Eaton Ave-Eaton Court, Ferry Ave-Ferry Court, Hampton Rd-Hampton court and 5 more. All of these are extensions or accesses only from the first named street. If there are duplications they are because adjacent Townships have used like names. Charlevoix has no authority to change this.

There is a definite plus, according to Administrators of long running 911 systems that Charlevoix gives a 911 Programmer. That is the Compass Directions of our streets. 21 lay in North/South, 38 in East/West. Most of them intersect one another numerous times.

What this does to allow rapid response is best illustrated by how a successful 911 program would be applied. (IE) Need for a 911 response on Lincoln St. Is the location between Bridge St. and May, May and Alice, Bridge and State St., State St. and Grant. If you know a street location you can reduce the area of location to one block. Charlevoix provides this type of discovery throughout the entire City.

911 service calls do not necessarily originate from the Address in need of the service. It can be from a Cellular Phone, a Public Phone, a neighbors phone. The Dispatcher receiving the call has the duty to determine everything they can to direct the responding unit. That requires training and computer Programs that further interpret the information into a correct response.

No one in the City government has told us where and how the people we expect to deliver 911 to us has been trained. No one has told us if Charlevoix intends to purchase its own 911 Computer Programs and how the printouts from a program is delivered to the responding unit. No one has told us if the City is in fact purchasing a Computer Program how the data needs (according to successful operating 911 systems) is to be collected and applied. To date we don't know anything about what we are to get for our money. All we have been told is that we got an Address Problem. Even if we correct it we still got a problem.

If we want addresses lets offer at least two suggestions to our structure owners or residents. You are responsible for the addition of an address to your location visible from the street. Without this the City can not be responsible for 911 response. The City designates that minimum size of these numbers.

According to successful 911 operators lighted numbers are recommended, either solar or structure hard wired. If they are hard wired offer a fixed monthly billing reduction for this. Charlevoix has some sort of a program for Lawn Watering that reduces its cost. A suggestion for the City to recoup this cost is the transfer of Parking Meter Revenue and Fines to the Electronic Department. This at least makes them less onerous in their collection and if this use was someway conveyed by signage to the public collections might increase doe to the knowledge the money is being used in a way to improve safety within our City.

Successful operators of 911 systems know that an address is only one and no one is more important then the rest of the information needed.

Charlevoix has survived to date with the help of very concienciously trained members of our Safety Departments. We can expect no less whether we do or don't have 911 available.

Lets not take the usual Government approach IE. Hurry up and do it, we can always go back and do it right.

C. Papineau

Charlevoix pool needed

Editor,

I have heard some folks around town question what use will be made of the Charlevoix Community Pool now being campaigned for. I think the answer lies in our history. I quote from "Historic Charlevoix," the booklet of the Charlevoix Historical Society, page 24, where there is a description of the fabulous summer resort hotel, The Inn, built in 1897. "The railroad also built a bathing pool called a natatorium between the tracks and Pine Lake, a little south of the railroad station. The pool was 30 by 100 feet and had a depth of from three feet to eight feet. The building was two stories high with 60 dressing rooms along a gallery on the second floor. There was a heating plant for the tempering of the water. The pool was open to the public and was very popular with the local population. People even came by train from Petoskey."

Doesn't this sound like us with our new pool! Ours will be even better, with not only heated water but a large hot tub, instructional area, and ramps for the handicapped. The big difference, of course, is that we must build it ourselves. However, having built the pool ourselves, I think the "tempered" water will feel even more delicious.

Please help build. Consider the value of a financial pledge against the cost of winter escape trips less needed.

Sincerely,
Steven Hansen

Guest Commentary

The following guest commentary was written by Charlevoix School Superintendent Dr. Roberta Jackson

Many people have questions about our facility plans for Charlevoix Schools. I thought it would be helpful to share the following information with your readers.

The current proposal for a new middle school, new high school, and remodeling of the elementary school is the result of a long process that included the following:

I. FACILITY STUDY (1991-92) A mechanical, electrical, structural, handicapped assessment of all Charlevoix facilities was completed by Kingscott and Associates.

II. STRATEGIC PLANNING (1991-92) Completion of a facilities plan for the future was an objective of the Focus on the Future plan developed during the planning process that involved staff, parents, students and community members.

III. A FACILITIES ACTION TEAM (1992-94) The action team was established to carry out the strategic plan objective. The recommendation was finalized in July 1994 with a RECOMMENDATION TO THE BOARD in October 1994 for a new 6-8 middle school, an auditorium and renovations to the K-5 and high school — Estimated total $18,982,000.

IV. Part of the proposal was put up for the enhancement mill election (approx. 1.5 million) on March 14, 1995 and failed 40 percent to 60 percent.

V. COMMUNITY MEETINGS were held on June 5, 1995. Input included questions of "why not consider a new high school instead of a new middle school?

VI. PRINCIPALS ASKED FOR CONSENSUS RECOMMENDATION — Fall 1995: School staff undecided — some want new high school and some want new middle school.

VII. COMMUNITY MEETING — November 27, 1995 input meeting: The need to replace the middle school and the process for moving forward was reviewed.

VIII. TO DO LIST FOR FACILITIES PROJECT was developed by the Superintendent in November 1995 to move the project forward to a September 1996 bond election. In November 1995, there was Board consensus to move forward with an architect selection process and citizens review process.

IX. CITIZENS REVIEW TASK FORCE — January/February 1996 A diverse group of parents, students, and community members met to review the work completed by the Action Team as well as additional options created as a result of input from staff and community. Three meetings were held. The options considered included all previous options (new middle school, new high school, remodeling the elementary to be a K-4 or K-5, auditorium, and bus garage).

X. CONSENSUS RECOMMENDATION — CITIZENS REVIEW TASK FORCE — FEBRUARY 15, 1996: Rather than spending millions to renovate the high school building, the group elected to create an option of their own during the meeting on February 15.

CITIZENS' TASK FORCE RECOMMENDATION FOR CHARLEVOIX SCHOOLS

* New 5-6 / 7-8 Middle School
* New High School
* Remodel K-4 Building
* New Auditorium
* Technology Upgrade
* Transportation Building
Estimated Cost - $26,434,401.

XI. BOARD OF EDUCATION PRESENTATION The Task Force recommendation was presented to the Board of Education on March 18, 1996, with the superintendent's support. The Board approved moving forward with the hiring of an architect for the initial planning (pre-bond phase), for communicating the Task Force recommendation to staff, parents, the community and students, and for conducting a community survey to determine what the citizens would like to have included in the project.

XII. ARCHITECT SELECTION: After interviews and three days of site visits, the Board selected Beta Design Group of Grand Rapids. Their work prior to an election will include meetings with community and staff, initial schematics of the project selected by the Board, and an updated assessment of our facilities. The maximum cost for this pre bond work will be $15,000 — all of which will be deferred until after the September bond election — and mileage, phone, etc.

XIV. CONSTRUCTION MANAGER SELECTION: The board is selecting a construction management firm at this time to work with the architect to ensure that the projected costs for the facilities project are accurate. The firm will not receive any compensation for the work performed prior to the passage of a bond election. The role of the construction manager is to prepare bids and monitor the work of the sub contractors. The board of education holds the contract with the construction manager and all sub contractors.

XV. FINANCIAL ADVISOR: The board has hired a financial advisor, Stauder Barch and Associates, as is required by the State. There will be no charge for their services prior to a successful bond election.

XVI. RANDOM SURVEY RESULTS, ARCHITECT OPTIONS, AND A REPORT ON THE CONDITION OF THE HIGH SCHOOL ARCHES will be presented at a special board meeting at 6:00 p.m. on June 10 in the high school study hall.

XVII. THE BOARD OF EDUCATION DECISION ON THE SCOPE OF THE PROJECT is on the June 17 board meeting agenda.

Questions that are frequently asked include:

Can the bond issue dollars be used for salaries? No

What would happen to the proceeds from the sale of the MS and HS properties? Proceeds would reduce the amount of the bond issue.

As superintendent, I get lots of advice from community members, staff, and students. Many times the advice I get on a particular topic, such as this facilities project, is vastly different depending on the person I'm talking with.

All parents, school staff, students, and interested community members are encouraged to be a part of the process to provide our students with much needed facility and technology improvements. Please call if you have questions.

Sincerely,
Roberta Ann Jackson
Superintendent of Schools

Writer mixed issues in letter about Parkside purchase

Editor,

Having read Robert E. Wexstaff's letter which bashed the City of Charlevoix for the purchase of the former Parkside Restaurant building, we must respond. First, Mr. Wexstaff, if you are "intrigued" by what you describe as "committee action" by the City Council you need to revisit the fundamentals of American government and the democratic process. We, the people, have elected a governing body to make decisions. Mr. Wexstaff, if you dislike the process you are living in the wrong country. If you dislike the decision, you have an opportunity to replace the body during the next election.

Regarding the remark that "investing in a business and getting one's money back in ten years would be a good deal," Mr. Wexstaff we are very grateful that you are not in an elected position to manage our tax dollars with that kind of investment thinking. A ten percent annual return on an investment would be a reasonable deal. Getting only your initial investment back in ten years, well, that would not be very bright.

Mr. Wexstaff, our greatest concern is why people like you continue to criticize Terry Left and Stave Ager for purchasing the Parkside Restaurant real estate. Let's get one point straight; Terry Left and Steve Ager did not eliminate the "Parkside Restaurant" when they purchased the real estate. The owners of the Parkside Restaurant chose to close their summer establishment, retire and sell their real estate after many successful business summers in Charlevoix! If anyone is angry about the Parkside Restaurant owner's decision to retire, then direct your anger appropriately. Displacing your anger toward Terry Left and Steve Ager is grossly unfair. Furthermore, everyone had the opportunity to make an offer on the Parkside real estate during the time it was on the market. We admire Terry Left and Steve Ager for their business savvy. Why wouldn't they act on an opportunity to prevent the possibility of a competing business acquiring the real estate? Mr. Wexstaff, it's simple mathematics, it's free enterprise, it's a smart business decision! Every restaurant in this community benefits from one less competitor. Any "gross increases" in revenue realized by the distribution of Parkside Restaurant's former summer market share will only help those year around restaurants continue to provide excellent year-around services (and year around employment, tax contributions, etc.) to our local community. Mr. Wexstaff, the bottom line is this: service and retail businesses in northern Michigan that stay open all year for the local community do so at an operating loss because of our small year around population. Summer revenue is required to sustain these businesses throughout the year. Again, simple math. competing for revenue, especially during summer tourism, is a business fact-of-life. A very large percentage of summer revenue is swallowed up to offset operating expenses and bottom line losses during the winter months.

With regard to the City's purchase of the Parkside real estate, we support that decision. Who the city purchased the property from should not continue to surface as an issue! Mr. Wexstaff, you expressed confusion about the selling price to the city when you suggested that fair market value should be based on the seller's or prospective buyer's assets. Perhaps you should educate yourself on the practices of real estate transactions. In this case, a fair market price was sought and obtained. Mr. Wexstaff, waterfront real estate in Charlevoix is a very good investment. More government dollars have been spent for less.

We all benefit from public views, parks and waterfront access. And, our beautiful waterfront attracts tourism which generates revenue for Charlevoix. Loss of a few tax dollars? Mr. Wexstaff, take a look around! New homes are being constructed in Charlevoix that are adding substantially to our tax base.

In summary, the Parkside Restaurant holds fond summer memories for many visitors and residents of Charlevoix. When the owners decided to retire after the summer of 1994 many people experienced a loss. What's really sad is that, for nearly two years, so many people have been blaming, bashing and confusing the issues of the past, present and future. Mr. Wexstaff, it's time to separate the issues, recognize the realities of a free country and a free enterprise system, and move forward.

New scout troop grateful for community help

Editor,

Recently, we started up a new Boy Scout Troop in Charlevoix. With much pride, we are Troop 6. This wouldn't have been possible without the faith and support of a few people and organizations.

Thank you to Glen's Market in Charlevoix for being our charter organization, Big Rock for providing us with a fantastic meeting facility and campground, and Dick and Carol Hoffman in East Jordan for providing for Troop 6 and the Michigan flags.

Thank you to Gary Ruehl, Harold Miller, Jeff Riley and Jim Mansen for being our troop committee. We appreciate you for your time, commitment, and emotional support. Thank you to Rick Grosberg and Mike Castiglione for becoming our newest committee members.

Thank you to Wayne Blosh, George Lasater and Bill Parton for being Merit Badge Counselors. We couldn't have better people leading our list of counselors, and we have faith that list will continue to grow.

Lastly, thank you to the boys of Troop 6, their parents, and all our friends who have given us their support in our leadership to continue the scouting program.

Sincerely,

Bobbie Ruehle, Scoutmaster

BEACONS

OF BLESSINGS

by REV. BRUCE HAMILTON

Fingers meet the keyboard on a Friday afternoon just hours before one of the most joyful experiences a pastor can have. I'm getting ready for a wedding rehearsal. Every time I have the privilege of starting a couple out on the road of matrimony is special. But some unions are more unique than others.

The bride and groom are a little older than some of the couples that I marry. Don't misunderstand, by "older" I don't mean ancient. They are chronological contemporaries of mine. They've never been married before and until they met each other, they weren't necessarily sure they would ever find that "special someone."

That's where the story gets special. You see the groom is a Charlevoix boy. Many of you know him and respect him as a genuinely caring and committed businessman. The bride is a registered nurse from halfway round the world in New Zealand. She now keeps the midnight shift at the Petoskey emergency room smiling. Just think about it ... A boy from northern Michigan and a girl from the South Pacific meet in California and find their hearts falling in love. Now who do you suppose could take two people half a world apart and bring them together because they needed each other? GOD!

In over twenty years of ministry, I have seen it time and again. Just when we are ready to think something is impossible or never going to happen, our heavenly Father always seems to find a way. I wish more people would come to recognize that the Lord delights in meeting the needs of His children. I wish more of us would remember that even the deepest, most personal concerns of anyone's heart are things that not only merit His attention, but also give Him delight in looking for ways to resolve.

This young couple loves the water. He has a boat that his bride has already learned how to crew and operate in an able fashion. One of the joys about this time of year is sailing at sunset and oh, have we had some pretty ones in the last few days. It is as if God is doing more than just bringing down the curtain on another day. It is as if He is going out of His way to show us just how much He cares and how much He wants to be part of our lives.

You know how weddings generally go. On Saturday afternoon, family and friends will have gathered together in the church. The nervous groom will stand at the head of the aisle. His eyes will light up and his heart will flutter when he gets his first glimpse of his beautifully adorned bride. They will exchange vows and share rings. I will lovingly talk with them, pray for them and bless them. Then the real adventure begins. Hopefully, they will remember that it was not fate nor an accident that brought them together. I trust they will always remember that God looked down in love and reached out farther than they ever imagined possible to bring them together because He knew that they not only needed each other but that they would be good for each other.

You need to remember that too. God will reach out wherever you may be and lovingly guide you on the path that is best if you will only trust Him. A long, blessed, and happy life together for Joe and Karen Trojanek. God loves you and I love you too.

Funeral was held at 10 a.m. Saturday, May 25, at St. Mary's Catholic Church in Charlevoix. The Rev. Thomas Neis officiated. Burial was at St. Mary's Cemetery in Charlevoix.

He was born June 4, 1904, on Beaver Island, the son of Francis and Hannah (Donlevy) Left. He graduated from Beaver Island schools. In 1926 he graduated from Notre Dame University Law School.

He spent most of his life on the Great Lakes working as a merchant marine officer primarily on cement boats. He retired from Medusa Cement Co.

He was a member of St. Mary's Catholic Church of Charlevoix and the Knights of Columbus Pierre de Charlevoix Council No. 7172.

He married Eleanora Feiereisel and she preceded him in death in 1977.

He was preceded in death by two brothers, Joe Left and Carl Left, and two sisters, Margaret Lagerman and Kaye Diehl.

Memorial contributions may be made to St. Mary School in Charlevoix or the Beaver Island Historical Society Marine Museum. Envelopes will be available at the Winchester Funeral Home.

New Coast Guard buoy tenders will be built

Maintaining President Clinton's commitment to transportation safety and environmental protection, the U.S. Coast Guard has authorized construction of two 225-foot Juniper-class buoy tenders by a Wisconsin shipbuilder at a cost of approximately $50 million.

In addition to fulfilling its primary mission in the care and repair of more than 50,000 buoys, day markers and lights, the buoy tenders will be outfitted with a spilled oil recovery system to respond quickly to incidents of environmental damage. The current buoy tender fleet, which it is replacing, does not have the system.

According to the Coast Guard, the two new buoy tenders, to be built by Marinette Marine Corporation of Marinette, Wis., will employ 520 workers and be delivered in 1998 and 1999. The ships will be christened Elm and Walnut to honor earlier lighthouse tenders of the same names, and replace aging 180-foot buoy tenders currently in service. They bring the number of seagoing buoy tenders under construction at Marinette Marine Corporation to four. A fifth buoy tender, Juniper, was previously delivered by the firm to the Coast Guard in January.

While maintaining navigational aids essential to the safety and welfare of maritime vessels and recreational boats in U.S. waters, the ships also will perform other missions including search and rescue, law enforcement, defense and ice breaking.

The Coast Guard said that home ports for the new ships have not been finalized.

Academy accepting applications

The United States Coast Guard Academy is now accepting and processing applications to the U.S. Coast Guard Academy, Class of 2001. Appointments are bases on the candidate's high school record, performance on either the SAT I or ACT, and leadership potential as demonstrated by participation in high school activities, community service and part-time employment. Most successful candidates rank in the top quarter of their high school class and have demonstrated proficiency in both mathematical and applied science.

Hoskins Manufacturing Company adds $3.2 million expansion

Expansion will create 30 new jobs

Hoskins Manufacturing Company recently announced a $3.2 million expansion of its Charlevoix wire drawing facility located off M-66. Plans call for adding 28,000 square feet of manufacturing space and a new 4,000 square foot office building to the existing facility.

Mike Paliwoda, General Manager of Manufacturing, stated that the expansion will add approximately 30 new jobs to the operation.

Featured in the expansion will be a new EMF laboratory for calibrating thermocouple wire for temperature measuring applications and a new physical properties testing laboratory.

Hoskins is a leading manufacturer of electrical resistance alloys for domestic and industrial heating applications, spark plug electrode alloys, thermocouple alloys, and other specialty alloys.

In addition to its Charlevoix operation, Hoskins has plants in Mio and Hamburg, Michigan, New Paris, Indiana and Mount Carmel, Pennsylvania, and Kildare, Ireland.

New state-of-the-art wire processing equipment will be installed which will enable the Charlevoix operation to process hot rolled rod produced by its Hamburg, Michigan plant to finished wire sizes in a continuous process. In addition to equipment purchased from manufacturers in the United States and Canada, the operation will employ precision take-up and spooling equipment from Germany.

Hoskins has also announced a $750,000 expansion of its Mio Plant. Both the Charlevoix and Mio projects will be completed by November of this year.

According to Jerry Reinke, Hoskins' President and CEO, the Charlevoix plant will be one of the most technologically advanced and environmentally friendly wire processing plants in the world.

High school poets receive honors

To celebrate National Poetry Month, the Charlevoix High School Library Media Center sponsored a poetry contest. On May 8, participants met in the library media center for poetry readings and an announcement of the winning entries.

First place went to Carolyn Selders for her poem, "Trapped," second place to Tim Tebeau for "The Lake," third place to Ron Haggard for "The Wall," and honorable mention to Amy VanGuilder for "the Big Show."

Each participant received a bound copy of all of the poems submitted. Because of the popularity of the contest, a poetry club is being formed at the high school so students can share their poetry.

Twenty-eight seniors receive top honors

Twenty-eight seniors at Charlevoix High School maintained a grade point average of 3.5 or better, qualifying them to be Charlevoix Honor Students. This year's class of 1996 Valedictorian is Amy VanGuilder, who maintained a grade point average of 4.0. The class Salutatorian is Colleen Urban, who maintained a grade point average of 3.974.

Lexalite merges with SUMMA Industries

SUMMA INDUSTRIES (NASDAQ NMS: "SUMX") announced that it has entered into an agreement in principle to acquire LexaLite International Corporation, a privately held company in Charlevoix, in a stock transaction. The agreement is subject to a number of conditions, including the execution of a definitive agreement and the approval of the shareholders of both companies. It is contemplated that the transaction will be treated as a tax-free reorganization in which 1.5 shares of SUMMA's Common Stock will be issued in exchange for each share of LexaLite's outstanding stock, with the shares of SUMMA's Common Stock to be registered for issuance under the Securities Act of 1933. It is also intended that the acquisition will be accounted for as a "pooling of interests."

SUMMA is a holding company whose subsidiaries manufacture industrial components including engineering plastic injection-molded conveyor components. For the year ended August 31, 1995, SUMMA earned $676,000, or $.44 per share, from continuing operations on sales of $10,247,000. For the six months ended February 29, 1996, SUMMA's earnings from continuing operations were $334,000, or $.21 per share on sales of $5,767,000. At February 29, 1996, 1,541,929 shares of SUMMA's Common Stock were outstanding.

LexaLite designs and manufactures injection-molded lighting components (refractors and reflectors) and other plastic products for OEM markets. For the year ended June 30, 1995, LexaLite earned $1,306,000 on sales of $32,797,000. For the nine months ended March 31, 1996, LexaLite's earnings were $1,132,000 of $25,884,000. At May 10, 1996, 1, 447,918 shares of LexaLite's Common Stock were outstanding and held of record by 44 shareholders, including an employee stock ownership trust which held approximately 35% of the outstanding shares on behalf of approximately 300 employees.

First annual "Golf Mania" day to be hosted at country club

by Laurie Lounsbury

It's not often that you get a chance to play a round of golf at a prestigious country club - for free. But everyone in the Charlevoix area will have a chance to do just that on Saturday, June 1, at the Charlevoix Country Club.

Country club golf pro Bruce Sheppler organized a "Golf Mania" day as a way to thank the community for their support and interest in the country club. Greens fees are waived, and the only cost for the 18 hole golf outing will be the $14 cart fee. "This will kick off the summer and the golf season," Sheppler said, adding, "We hope to make it an annual event."

Free golf. What more could you ask for? How about a chance to win a free Ford Taurus? Pat McKeown is sponsoring a hole-in-one contest. Chances will sell for $5. A hole-in-one will get you the new car. The money raised by selling chances will benefit the Northwest Michigan Council for the Prevention of Child Abuse and Neglect.

Sheppler reported that it's not an impossible dream to get a hole-in-one at the country club. "We had two holes-in-one last year on different holes," Sheppler said.

Even after the free "Golf Mania" day, Sheppler said the country club will continue to offer discounts to area residents. "We don't want to price the locals out of the course," Sheppler said. Residents of Charlevoix and Emmet County get 20% off the standard, day rates. Twilight rates of $39 begin at 3 p.m.. Tuesdays are Ladies' Days, and Thursdays are Men's Days, with a round of play costing $50. Kids aged 17 and under play for half price if they're accompanied by an adult.

The "Golf Mania" day is expected to draw 250 golfers from the area.

Six junior golfers win scholarship to summer golf camp at Ferris St.

The Charlevoix County Junior Golf Association has announced the recipients for their first scholarships awarded to area youngsters to attend a five day golf camp this summer at Ferris State University. Tuition, room and board scholarships were awarded to six junior golfers who participated in last summer's Junior Golf program. Jennifer Rowe, Tyler Lieberman, Chad DeKorte, Jonathon Sell, Ben VanGuilder and Jason Vincent all were selected for their golf skill and potential, citizenship, maturity and enthusiasm for golf. Director Dean Davenport reported that the Selection Committee had a very tough time because there were so many highly qualified applicants. "We finally had to get permission from the Board to increase our selection from five to six, because it was so difficult and there were still deserving youngsters we had to eliminate," Davenport said.

Recipients will be attending either the early session at Ferris State from June 9-14 or the second session from July 21-26. The university is one of only three in the country offering a curriculum in Professional Golf Management and has enjoyed a highly successful summer camp for young golfers.

The second year of the junior golf program is set to kick off Monday, June 17 at the Belvedere Golf Course.

Little League Results

The Little League baseball season is under way, in spite of construction going on all around the ball field. Here are the results of last week's games. Work and Play beat Round Lake Lodge 11-6. Pitching for Work and Play was Matthew Himebaugh. Pitching for Round Lake Lodge was Nick Cole. For Work and Play, Brad Hice had 4 RBI's. Dustin Sikavitsas scored four runs for Work and Play.

Work and Play also downed the Lions, 10-8. Pitching for Work and Play was Landon Brown. The Lions' pitcher was Jordan Nystrom. Mike Sullivan played well defensively at first base for Work and Play, while Brad Hice did a good job in the outfield. The Lions' Kyle Dobrowolski had an "in the park" home run, while Dennis Avery had a double and a triple. Jordan Nystrom stole six bases.

American Legion beat the Lions 20-5. The pitcher for the winning team was Joe Grubb. Pitching for the Lions was Matt Sheldon.

Lake levels above average for month of April, should continue to rise into the month of July

During the month of April precipitation was above average on all of the Great Lakes basins. For the year to date, precipitation is about 19 percent above average for the entire Great Lakes basin. The net supply of water to all of the Great Lakes basins was above average in April.

In comparison to their long-term (1918-1995) averages, the April monthly mean level of Lakes Superior, Michigan-Huron, and Erie was 1, 1 and 1 inch above average respectively. Lakes St. Clair and Ontario were 8 and 2 inches below average respectively. Lake St. Clair's April mean level was lowered by ice accumulation in the St. Clair River. Shoreline residents are cautioned to be alert whenever adverse weather conditions exist, as these could cause rapid short-term rises in water levels. Should the lakes approach critically high levels, further information and advice will be provided by the Corps of Engineers.

Lakes Michigan-Huron at the end of April were at elevation 579.30 feet (176.57 meters) above the mean water level at Rimouski, Quebec, or about 22 inches (57 cm.) above Chart Datum. The April monthly mean level of 578.94 feet (176.46 meters) was about 1 inch (2 cm.) above the long-term average for April. The lakes were about 30 inches (77 cm.) below the all-time high April monthly mean level, which was recorded in 1986. The forecast shows that the May monthly mean level of Lakes Michigan-Huron will be about 6 inches (16 cm.) above what it was at Mid-April.

The lakes are expected to continue their seasonal rise into July. The water level in Mid-October 1996 is expected to be about 6 inches (15 cm.) above the long-term average for that month, or about 7 inches (18 cm.) above what it was at the same time in 1995.

Charlevoix's WalkAmerica raises money for March of Dimes

Charlevoix's WalkAmerica on Saturday, May 18 raised over $9,500 for the March of Dimes Campaign for Healthier Babies. It was the biggest walk ever for Charlevoix. The eight mile walk began at 9 a.m., starting and finishing at Alexander's. The day was hot and sunny, but the extreme spring temperatures didn't stop 85 walkers from participating.

The Top Walker Award went to James Soulliere, with a total of $1,324 raised for the campaign.

The Top Team Awards in Charlevoix went to: Local UAW #1403, with $1,611, Barb Lane Interior Design with $1,511 and Weight Watchers with $1,155.

WKPK was there providing music for the walkers and Candy Smith from the Charlevoix fitness Center led the warm-ups for everyone before the big start.

Special thanks to our generous sponsors for doing check points along the route: Charlevoix Rotary, Subway, Charlevoix Area Hospital, Medusa Cement, and Local UAW #1403.

Also thanks to Glen's Market from Charlevoix and Boyne City, who gave cookies and chips, McDonald's, who donated refreshments and Alexander's, who generously provided hot dogs for all the participants after the Walk.

A great thank you to all the volunteers who donated their time and effort for the Walk, without their help WalkAmerica would not be possible:

The March of Dimes is a national voluntary health agency whose mission is to improve the health of babies by preventing birth defects and infant mortality. Through its Campaign for Healthier Babies, the March of Dimes funds programs of research, community services, education, and advocacy. Funds raised for the March of Dimes are applied to community service programs, public and professional health education and support a local grant line which services the northern 22 county area.

9-1-1 forcing city action on addresses

By Janenne Irene Froats
Courier editor

9-1-1 can't think.

It needs a logical progression of house numbers and unique streets to function.

The analogy of the mindless emergency response system came from Charlevoix's police chief, Dennis Halverson.

The newest estimate, compiled by the chief, shows that 334 addresses need to change before the city will be acceptable to 9-1-1. This is more than a fourth of the addresses in the community. And 400 changes shy of setting the town up for a 9-1-1 grid system.

If locations within the 547 exchange do not comply with 9-1-1 standards, all of Charlevoix County could be held back from using the system when it begins to operate on Monday, June 24.

The Petoskey News-Review reported Monday of the urgency for Charlevoix to allow changes or temporarily bump the entire county out of 9-1-1. Some board members feel as though they'd been given an ultimatum to act.

"I didn't read it as a threat," said Charlevoix resident, Bill Supernaw, "but as reality."

Supernaw said the council has a lot of egg on their faces for not acting on the issue before this point.

"You've got to get firm on this," he said.

For months, there have been community members adamantly opposed to having their addresses change. A resolution was passed that restricts the council from taking action on approving address changed.

However, the city has also committed to cooperating with 9-1-1.

"Its not an easy solution," said councilman, Alvin "Butch" Russell. He proposes taking time to thoroughly think through the changes and not vote out of reaction.

But in response to the time crunch, the city did what was thought to have already been done. It formed a committee

New schools main issue for candidates

Jerry Owen

A challenger is trying to oust one of two Charlevoix school board members in the Monday, June 10, election. New schools are the main topic of discussion between all three candidates.

Jerry Owen, 42, said he plans to make a difference if elected to the board in place of either Larry Levengood or Stephen Czerkes.

Owen said he would be more open with the public and school staff regarding sensitive issues, and encourage the board to take a stand on issues such as the pending millage to build one or two new schools.

"The public will always know where I stand," he said. "They'll never have to wonder."

Owen believes the district should build a new high school and move middle school students to the current 9-12 building.

Larry Levengood

The board has recommendations from two facility committees, both of which included representatives from the community.

The first group backs building a new middle school and renovating the other two schools. The newest committee supports building new high and middle schools, and adding onto the elementary school.

The board can either go with one recommendation, or vote on an entirely different approach to update the schools. It is expected to vote on the scope of the construction project Monday, June 17.

Intermediate district asks for vo-tech millage

By Janenne Irene Froats
Courier editor

Reading, writing and arithmetic doesn't deliver all the answers to the employment quiz.

The Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District hopes that voters entering the polls June 10 see increased vocational technical training as a way to better prepare students for the working world.

The district board is asking taxpayers to approve a .75 millage proposal for five years to bring more vocational classes to students.

The millage means that property owners will pay 75 cents for every $1,000 of their taxable appraisal. Property is valued at half of the market value. For example, a taxpayer with a home that could sell for $75,000 will pay $56.25 more a year if the millage pass-

Charlevoix should proceed.

"I feel the two school proposal is too ambitious," said Levengood, who's been on the board for eight years and currently serves as secretary. He said the board hasn't tried to be secretive with the public. It's just waiting on results from a community survey and an architectural report on the condition of the high school gym arches before deciding how many millions to ask voters to approve.

Amounts of $19 million, which includes a new middle school and renovations to the other schools, and $26.5 million, for two new schools have been discussed. Both amounts include a new auditorium. Personally, the three candidates agree that asking taxpayers to fund two new schools at the same time is too much.

Czerkes said two new schools would be nice, but he thinks building a new high school should be a priority. Middle school students could then move into the high school after the necessary repairs.

Levengood said building a new middle school and remodeling the high school would be the most efficient move. However, he is open to converting the high school to a middle school.

The community, Czerkes said, should have looked into building a new school 10 years ago. This would have staggered the need. And building two new schools now would place the community in another bind down the road when the buildings are again needing to be replaced.

Levengood said the second facility committee didn't consider community acceptance when it proposed building two new schools at the same time. And, he doesn't agree that the current schools should be abandoned and the new schools built at different sites.

For example, he said, the field house at the high school is only seven years old. He recommends that a long-term building plan be formulated to guide the community through future school building improvements.

Char-Em asks voters for millage

es.

A .75 mill tax for the two counties generates about $1.7 million per year. Local school districts would get 90 percent of that money, with 10 percent staying at the intermediate school district, said Naomi Singer, director of vocational-technical education.

The millage proposal will be on the ballot with Charlevoix's school board election. .

Examples of vo-tech programs already offered in Charlevoix are construction trades and three computer courses that cover manufacturing technology, computer assisted drafting, accounting and other business training. A health occupation program is expected to begin this fall, said school superintendent, Roberta Jackson.

If approved, millage money will be distributed to school districts in the two counties through grants. The money can be used for equipment and technology, instruction and classroom materials, career counseling, curriculum development and teacher training.

Without the millage, money for such programs would either come from schools' operating budgets or state funding. Many schools are currently paying for the programs through enhancement millages, which will expire next year.

All 11 school districts have passed resolutions backing the plan to bring vocational programs to students instead of building one central center.

Concentrated road patrols to up safety

The Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office is offering concentrated patrols of specific roads to reduce accidents in Charlevoix County.

Citizens who have a concern over traffic safety on a certain roadway can contact Sheriff George T. Lasater for patrol consideration. The concern can be speeders, careless or reckless drivers and drunk drivers.

Deputies in marked and unmarked patrol cars will be assigned to patrol the area for designated time periods. The citizen will be given a written report on the number of citations issued, traffic stops made, arrests and number of patrol hours spent on the problem area.

When the citizen is requesting this service, please provide the following information: specific roadway, nearest cross road, types of violations the citizen has observed, suspects if any (type of car, etc.), time of day and day of week violations take place.

This program will be in addition to regular sheriff's department patrol activities.

Request for this service may be made to Sheriff George Thomas Lasater at 547-4461.

Heels and hose.

The Charlevoix High School Class of 1996 marched up and down the commencement aisle Sunday afternoon to become Rayder alumni.

Graduation was filled with appreciation for friendships, encouraging words for the future and chuckles at the past. Even Dr. Seuss had his say:

"Congratulations. Today is your day. You're off to great places. You're off and away. You have brains in your head. You have feet in your shoes. You can steer yourself any direction you choose. You're on your own. And you know what you know. And you are the guy who'll decide where to go."

Class valedictorian, Amy VanGuilder, read these rhyming words to her classmates, who sat in purple and silver robes, itching to turn their tassels.

"Well, we made it," VanGuilder said, who lead her class with a 4.0 grade point average. "Now it's off to bigger and better things. This is not the end, but only the beginning."

The beginning for 71 of the 109 graduating seniors is attending college — from Petoskey to England, said elementary school counselor, Gayle Gennett. University initials dotted mortarboards as they topped students' heads.

Gennett credited the Class of 1996 for having 28 honor students and a number of accomplished athletes.

"You have wit, charm and intelligence," she said.

Class salutatorian, Colleen Urban, challenged her classmates to not only have fun with friends at the all-night bash Sunday, but to connect with people outside their regular group.

"With a little help from our friends, we can conquer the world and put our mark of peace on it," she said.

Although VanGuilder recognized that the Class of 1996 would soon be split, she encouraged her Charlevoix friends to be committed to their dreams and beliefs.

"Follow your dreams, wherever they lead you, until they come true," she said. "Don't ever give up, because as someone once said, 'Shoot for the moon, and even if you miss, you will always be among the stars."

The wise words of Dr. Seuss were allowed to close VanGuilder's address: "Wherever you fly, you'll be best of the best. Wherever you go, you will top all the rest. You're off to great places. Today is your day. Your mountain is waiting. So ... get on your way."

Melissa Knapp adds her clarinet to the symphonic orchestra during graduation Sunday as the musicians take time to play a final selection for their families and friends.

City adds downtown parking

By Janenne Irene Froats
Courier editor

Mary Towsley has found a new place to tuck her car away while she volunteers at the Rainbow Thrift Shoppe.

The city has opened up the back yard of the Dewitt house to add 19 public parking spaces.

Cars and trucks have already been pulling onto the grassy area just off the alley, behind the house. However, the city plans for two rows of parking that will run perpendicular between the alley and Park Street.

According to city manager, Mike Wiesner, the lot is open for public use now. City workers have yet to gravel the yard.

The city owns the house, which is more than 100 years old and the property on which it sits.

At a public hearing May 29, the downtown development authority listened to citizens debate over which was more important — more parking or a historic character.

"History cannot be recreated once it's diminished or demolished," said Karla Kirkland, noting that the authority needs to proceed carefully in determining how to best maintain the character of the residential neighborhood.

"We have to be very careful we do not take away the reasons why people come here," she said.

Letting cars park in the yard is a compromise to demolishing or moving the century-old house and paving the area for a total of 28 spaces.

Mayor Josh Barnes said the city shouldn't consider moving or demolishing the house now because it will lose parking spaces during construction.

"If you want to demolish that building right now you would have the worst parking problem you have ever seen," he said.

At least until fall, the house will remain on the property, as decided by the authority.

Towsley is grateful for the parking. The elderly woman usually walks at least a block to get to the store. She said she would hate to see the house go, but more parking spaces are badly needed.

If the city sold the Park-Street house, officials are concerned that the business put there would add to the parking space shortage on that block.

Some downtown business owners are frustrated with a parking problem they feel negatively affects their businesses daily.

"We have to have customers," said Susan LaButt, who owns Michelle's of Charlevoix. "I think there's a misunderstanding of what our needs are."

To LaButt, the community needs more business and more tourists to make them boom. She said she has to make enough in the busy summer months to justify providing a year-round service for the town.

Linda O'Leary owns The Acorn Cafe next to the house. Even though she, too, speaks for the need of more parking, she's temporarily satisfied with the compromise of using most of the property for parking.

Whether to move or demolish the house will be discussed in the fall.

Students deserve passage of Char-Em millage

Local schools can no longer assume that they are preparing students for college.

They can no longer count on higher education as being the step between high school and careers that need to support families. Jobs that were once available to untrained students directly out of high school no longer pay salaries that can support families.

According to Mark Eckhardt, superintendent of the Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District, only 25 percent of high school graduates earn a bachelor's degree.

Students need hands-on training to either pursue blue-collar jobs or have backup skills in case the job of their choice falls through.

Money is needed to fund programs to provide vocational education to students throughout Charlevoix and Emmet counties. Monday, June 10, voters have an opportunity to say yes to a .75 millage proposal for five years to improve such programs for the area's 11 school districts.

Saying yes to the millage means saying yes to giving young people practical tools with which to succeed beyond high school.

Currently, Charlevoix schools depend on state funding for improvements to its four vocational programs. Superintendent Roberta Jackson said each year the district expects funding to end. Guarantees for continued funding are so sketchy that the district doesn't even spend promised dollars. It waits until the check is in hand.

If passed by the majority of voters in the two counties, the millage will be used by schools to update computer labs, train teachers, provide career development and add new programs.

Charlevoix currently offers manufacturing technology, which includes computer aided drafting, business applied technology, construction trades and management technology. An applied health services program will begin this fall.

Rather than ask for money to build a vocational education center that would require students in outlying districts to lose learning time for travel, Char-Em has decided to bring more programs to the individual schools. This enables the millage to be spent on education, not bricks and mortar.

Eckhardt hopes that all students will have opportunities to attend vocational classes, which sometimes isn't possible in smaller schools located farther from the Petoskey center.

Schools are busy expanding local vo-tech programs to meet their students' needs. The money will encourage and help with that effort.

Traditionally, students have been separated into two groups: college bound and the questionable. If a senior wasn't busy deciding between college or the armed forces, their future was considered in jeopardy.

Local employees have made it clear that many of the students leaving high school are underqualified for available jobs. It's our responsibility to better prepare our students so the attitude that young people have to leave home to make a living will perish.

Letters to the Editor

Why the hurry to spend money for construction help at schools?

Editor:

To the taxpayers of Charlevoix District Schools:

The school board and hired help seem to be in a terrible hurry to spend your tax dollars. They met with four construction management firms. Two firms met with only four members. Two firms met with six members. One member wasn't there at all and two members didn't hear half of the construction firms' presentations. Yet all six members voted.

Several members were uncomfortable with the hurried nature of their vote and they should have been. When you taxpayers see the members, ask them why they voted at all until they were completely and totally satisfied. Hurried and haphazard are two words never used in conjunction with millions of dollars.

It seems the Beta Company (architect) changed the superintendent's mind into hiring a construction manager earlier than had been intended because they didn't have enough knowledge to prepare a realistic estimate of the cost of the project. Now isn't that tough cookies? What's the big, fat hurry? Right now is a builders' market and waiting until all seven members are on board, with all their ducks in a row, seems to be the number one priority. This is to the taxpayers' advantage and we don't need the hired help running interference or causing it.

The problem is the possible waste of tax dollars. The board voted to enter into an agreement with the Christman firm from Lansing to act as construction managers for the proposed building program. This firm proposed a fee of from $1,290,000 to $1,380,000, (4.9 percent to 5.3 percent of $26,000,000.) The board was presented with proposals from other firms they interviewed with fees as low as 3 percent to 3.5 percent. This is a difference of $598,000 any way you look at it.

Let's assume the board could negotiate the Christman firm down to their lower figure (4.9 percent) and the other best deal came in at (3.5 percent) the difference would only be (1.4 percent) or a measly $364,000. Can the board and the hired help make that look like a positive for you taxpayers? So we say again, what is the big, fat hurry?

A resident taxpayer called our home to report a conversation she had with the superintendent of schools. The taxpayer asked why, if more space was needed, couldn't the high school be extended towards Garfield Street and do away with the portable classrooms. Her answer was in the form of a question, "Then where would the teachers park their cars?"

Isn't it heart-warming to know the highest paid administrator has the education and welfare of our children as the number one priority at all times? We rest our case.

Thanks for your time.

EDITH GILBERT

Most people think that living on Michigan Avenue is like living in the city. Wrong! It's still country. We are surrounded by living creatures who want to move right in with us.

To be perfectly accurate, they were here first and we've moved in on them. I respect that. For example, my neighbor, Don Voisin, spotted a raccoon coming out from the top of my chimney yesterday. The raccoon looked around the tree tops and then, giving a long stretch, returned down the chimney. Perhaps he or she wasn't used to our daylight savings time and was waiting for dark. Who knows for sure. How can I tactfully ask him to leave? What if he is a she and has a nest of baby raccoons in my chimney? That complicates the issue even more.

Real live bunny rabbits hop across my lawn in the spring, and friendly deer have eaten all my tulips again this year! I should have known they are multiplying fast because last summer, I encountered a doe with triplets on Mount McSauba Road. They were still nursing, and didn't mind my watching.

Speaking of deer, there were five or six of them at dusk last fall on my neighbor's lawn right across the street, coming up from the beach. By far the most entertaining sight I've ever seen was a deer strolling up Michigan Avenue, head held high, on our people sidewalk! Oh, for a camera for that scene!

Admittedly, John McKeown still has the best Charlevoix deer story yet. It happened at the Edgewater Inn. The front desk was alerted that there was a commotion in the pool. The head housekeeper, Rita Sletcher, checked it out and found a deer taking a swim in their indoor-outdoor pool! The excitement of the astonished guests frightened the doe and she leaped out of the pool and over the wire fence. She bolted down the hill and jumped into the safety of Round Lake and swam across to the other side. That's the last they saw of her.

Not to be outdone, Jack Uhrick reports that he, too, had an unusual check-in at the Lodge Motel. While manning the desk in the lobby, he heard a loud crash. A maid reported a broken window on the upper level. When Jack walked into the room, he was surprised to see a wild turkey sitting on the bed! Leaving the door open, he hoped the turkey would leave, but the turkey wasn't ready to check out. Jack tried to chase him away, but instead, the 12-pound turkey flew all around the room. Finally, Jack threw a blanket over him and with the help of Don Voisin, who had just happened by, they both tugged on the bird and accidentally pulled off about 70 of its feathers. Finally, they were able to get a solid hold of the creature. With care they dropped him out the window, and to their surprise, the turkey flew away, in spite of all the missing feathers. I'll bet that turkey won't decide to check into the Lodge again after such a harrowing experience, even if the motel sign says "Vacancy."

Back to my raccoon visitor. It was suggested that I call the sheriff's department, which I did. They told me that the animal control officer would be in touch. It will be interesting to see how he solves the problem.

Businessmen made sound decisions on Parkside building

Editor:

This is a tough letter to write, never having responded to your column, but I think it's time that something is said on behalf of Steven Ager and Terry Left and the fiasco that has resulted from their purchase of the former Parkside property. The "Terry and Steve bad guy routine" has gotten out of hand and is unfair. They did what every property owner (whether personal property or real estate) intends to accomplish when they decide to sell, obtain your price. They set a price, the city paid it. This should be the end of discussion as pertains to Terry and Steve.

They did NOT approach the city; the city of Charlevoix contacted them to buy the property, negotiated a price and closed on the deal. Terry and Steve are out of the picture. Whether they made or lost money is not relative to the issues of the city now owning the property.

If anyone has a problem with the city buying this land, take it up with your elected officials - Steve and Terry have been the scapegoats on this deal for too long. Enough is certainly enough.

They didn't pass the vote to pursue the grant application; they didn't submit the documents to obtain the funding; they didn't twist the collective governmental arm to close on this deal. They owned something of value that the city wanted, an offer was made, accepted and the deal closed.

If you are mad about the Parkside not being in business, direct your anger at Gladys and Leo, the former owners. If you're mad about the city buying the property, direct your anger at city council. In any event, it's time to lay off Terry and Steve; they got stuck in the middle of something they did not control.

Although I've worked for both of their businesses over the course of the last 18 years, I don't believe my opinion is biased. Too many vocal individuals have lost sight of the facts of this transaction; it's always easier to blame someone you envy. We all had an opportunity to buy the property during the years it was offered for sale. If anyone had a better idea for this land, they should have acted sooner. If you want to blame these two for anything, blame them for being good businessmen that have shown a real interest in this community by providing year-round employment for our friends and families.

Parkside loss is that of history

Editor:

What both Mr. Wexstaff and Kit and Diane Foster failed to point out is the loss of not The Parkside Restaurant, but the loss of a particular structure, one that helped to define the personality and identity of Charlevoix. The building also served as a funeral home and as a physician's office. The building itself represents "a sense of place."

The Parkside is being torn down to allow a better view of the lake. (Too bad no one thought of that when all those condo's went up). What of a view to the history of this city? The essence of a resort town that is so inviting that people wish to remember it, otherwise Russ Bolt would not have a painting of it in his gallery.

Change is constant and can be good, but a "view" of what Charlevoix was in the past, of what gives it a particular character and charm is being destroyed.

In Chicago, on Michigan Avenue, where real estate prices are sky high and where they could have erected a sky-high mega-buck rental building, they left the water tower as a reminder of what "was", of what Chicago stood for and to give it a particular "sense of place."

Since the earth is made up primarily of water, I imagine there are numerous places with water views, condo's and franchise establishments. In other words, ordinary "rubber-stamp resort areas."

The most significant structure in Charlevoix will one day have a picture done of it, Medusa Cement Plant, I won't buy one.

Millage for vocational education is money well spent

Editor:

Getting a good job in this day and age is difficult enough. Without a good vocational-technical program, our students simply do not have the competitive edge to prepare themselves for the future. On June 10, 1996, we will have the opportunity to help our students in this regard. Please join me in supporting this issue.

As taxpayers we want to know that our tax dollars are being well spent and that students actually benefit from special funded programs. As a superintendent of schools for 30 years, it was my observation that vocational-technical programs gave students an excellent education for the amount spent.

Char-Em Intermediate School District (ISD) is the logical agency to coordinate programs such as special education and vocational-technical education. After all, the local boards of individual local districts could not operate certain types of programs cost effectively by themselves.

Many of us can remember the day when you could find a decent job by simply graduating from high school with a general diploma. That day is long gone.

Let's give the students in our school district a better chance for success in the future by voting "yes" on the vocational-technical millage on June 10.

Camp McSauba is ready to go

Editor:

It is once again summer and time to think about Camp McSauba. We are hoping to have one of our greatest camp years.

Camp McSauba is a day camp located in Charlevoix at the Mount McSauba Recreational Area. Campers ages 5-13 attend weekly sessions starting June 17 and running eight sessions through Aug. 9. Camp begins each day at 9 a.m. and runs until 3:15 p.m. Thursday is our camp overnight. The campers arrive at 9 a.m. and stay through the night. Friday morning includes a breakfast of delicious pancakes. The camp week is concluded with an awards ceremony which is held Friday at 11 a.m.

Camp activities include arts and crafts, BB gunnery, archery, recreational games and activities, beach activities, nature hikes, and campfire programs.

We once again have an excellent camp staff. Amy Parrish returns as a third year counselor. Amy is attending Western Michigan University where she is studying to be an elementary teacher. Jeff Boss is returning to camp for his second year as a counselor. Jeff will be attending North Central Michigan College this fall. Katie Shields and Don Jess are our new counselors. Don is going to be a junior at Alma College and is currently taking classes in business and communications. Katie steps into this position after filling a part-time position last summer. She will be attending college at the University of Dayton in Ohio and taking basic freshmen classes. Bruce Harger comes to us this summer as a part-time counselor.

We are really looking forward to this summer at camp. Our goal once again is to ensure that kids have fun! To sign up for camp you can call the Charlevoix Recreation Department at 547-3253. The cost is $55 per week; scholarships are available.

A pool is part of Charlevoix's history

Editor:

I have heard some folks around town question how much use will be made of the Charlevoix Community Pool now being campaigned for. I think the answer lies in our history. I quote from "Historic Charlevoix," the booklet of the Charlevoix Historical Society, page 24, where there is a description of the fabulous summer resort hotel, The Inn, built in 1897.

"The railroad also built a bathing pool called a natatorium between the tracks and Pine Lake, a little south of the railroad station. The pool was 30 by 100 feet and had a depth of from three feet to eight feet. The building was two stories high with 60 dressing rooms along a gallery on the second floor. There was a heating plant for the tempering of the water. The pool was open to the public and was very popular with the local population. People even came by train from Petoskey."

Doesn't this sound like us with our new pool? Ours will be even better, with not only heated water but a large hot tub, instructional area, and ramps for the handicapped. The big difference, of course, is that we must build it ourselves. However, having built the pool ourselves; I think the "tempered" water will feel even more delicious.

Please help build. Consider the value of a financial pledge against the cost of winter escape trips less needed.

BEACONS OF BLESSINGS

To the graduates, 1996

For those family and friends who have asked for copies of Sunday's graduation poem, here it is. My heartfelt thanks to the members of the Class of '96 and the high school administration for asking me to be involved.

- Pastor Bruce Hamilton

Good afternoon members of the Class of '96
Yes, the big moment has finally arrived.
It is my joy to stand before you,
And remind you of some of the things that you've survived.
You see in a day and age where you have to be cautious
In just uttering my boss' name,
I hope you'll always realize
That He's been with you just the same.

He shared the pride of your parents
When you took your first school bus ride.
He watched every spring musical,
Especially when that first dance partner stood by your side.
And, oh, the fun of middle school.
Remember Mr. Robinson?
Just ask Jenny and April,
They will never forget him.

But it's here at dear old Charlevoix high
That each of you have made your mark,
And just in case the adults don't know it,
This school year was no walk in the park!
No other group has broken in more new teachers;
From Miss Lurch in publications to Mr. Conway across the hall,
Don't forget Miss Statsick's government crew
And you still haven't heard it all.

There's twenty-eight honors students
And that was no small feat
P.A. took first in Ishpeming
M.F. thought that was sweet.
I still haven't quite figured out,
How a blue dune buggy got in the gym.
Warden Sally must have been off that day
Or she'd have made heads swim!

Oh here's to Evan Vogel,
Who's a hero in his own way
Because he made it in to class,
You got out of an extra day.
Who can forget your wrestling giants,
The tenacious Ron and Bruce;
And look out Calvin College,
We'll soon turn Amy VanGuilder loose.

There's so much more that could be said,
About the talent in this distinguished crew,
But the time has come for other things,
That I know you really want to do.
So, Colleen will start coming up here.
Get ready for her nod,
For the last verse of this graduation epoch,
Is really not so odd.

Your families really love you.
Your teachers and staff care too.
We wish you all nothing but success
In everything you do.
So its my Boss' turn to prompt me,
In light of all that you've been through,
Blessings and Peace Class of '96,
From me and YOU KNOW WHO!

Religious poems sought in free contest

A $1,000 grand prize is being offered in a free poetry contest, open to everyone in the Boyne City area. There are over $3,000 in prizes, and the deadline for entering is July 12, 1996. Winners will be announced on or before October 1, and a winner's list sent to all entrants.

"Poems must be written on a religious theme such as love," says Daisy Rudge, Contest Director of the famed New York Poetry Alliance. "Poets are the brief chroniclers of our time. In a world so full of hate, we'd like to see what poets say on a spiritual level. We feel this contest will produce exciting results and, as such, reserve the right to publish the winning poems. Beginners are welcome!"

To enter, send one poem 21 lines or less to: Poetry Contest, Box 1588, New York, NY 10116-1588.

New farm program

May 20 through July 12 is a farmer's one and only opportunity to sign up for the new market transition commodity program that replaced USDA's old farm commodity program as a result of the 1996 Farm Bill.

If producers do not enroll in the Market Transition Program before the end of the sign-up period, they will be excluded from the program for the next seven years. The only exception to this will be for producers who wish to enroll land coming out of the Conservation Reserve Program during the seven-year life of the program.

The 1996 Farm Bill changed the commodity programs that farmers have worked with for the past 60 years, replacing most of these with a seven-year market transition program that pays producers a fixed — but declining — payment based on land enrolled in previous USDA commodity programs.

During the transition, farmers are free to plant what they want, with limited restrictions on fruits and vegetables. In addition, producers are not restricted to farming their non-contract acreage, although they must continue to comply with conservation and wetland restrictions.

Farmers are eligible for the market transition program if they participated in the wheat, corn, grain sorghum, barley, oats, upland cotton, or rice program at least once in the last five years. Farmers who reported acreage to the Farm Service Agency as part of past commodity programs but did not participate can enroll those lands in the program as well.

Payments are limited to $40,000 per person per year throughout the life of the new seven-year program, and the three entity rule applies.

Each producer can determine how many acres he or she wants to enroll in the program, up to the total 1996 crop acreage base established for the farm.

SCRAPBOOK

Quilters are part of Norwood tradition

by Nancy Ritsema

A dozen or more Norwood area women gather each Wednesday at the old Norwood schoolhouse to hand quilt. Needles; thread and thimbles are carried in everything from zip lock bags to small boxes. Cathy "Cappy" Lord however carries hers in a 100-year-old hand-crocheted drawstring bag. Cappy's Aunt Ruby Alward carried her needle and thread in the same bag a century ago when young women and matrons gathered in Norwood to hand stitch and sell quilts and "comfortables" to help support the Norwood Methodist Church.

"A 'comfortable' was hand-sewn and the layers tied together with yarn at evenly spaced intervals. A quilt was hand-pieced into block patterns and then the layers were stitched together with fine even stitches. A good quilter stitched 7 to 12 stitches per inch. The women earned 25¢ to $2.25 for finishing a comfortable in 1890.

One of the Norwood quilters, Francis Jolliffe, has taught hand quilting classes over the years in Charlevoix, Elk Rapids and at her centennial farmhouse east of Norwood. She learned to quilt from her mother-in-law as a young bride.

"Every Wednesday Uncle Mike Richardson would hitch the team and sleigh up and we'd ride with him to Norwood to quilt. At four o'clock he'd pick us up and bring us home. We'd tie comforters or quilts at the Norwood Town Hall and have a big potluck at noon," Francis recalls.

In the 1920s and 1930s the Norwood women charged one cent a yard to hand quilt. They finally increased the price to 5¢ a yard. "Mrs. Gray from Petoskey thought 5¢ a yard was too much so she quit bringing us her quilts," Francis laughingly remembers.

Early quilts were pieced from scraps of cotton fabric, wools and even gunny or flour sacks. The scraps of material pieced together to form patterns often reflected pioneers' journies and experiences. Quilt names such as Rocky Road to Kansas, Prairie Rose and Indian Hatchett tell their own stories.

Quilts were an important part of Norwood's pioneer life. Family quilts were packed around dishes and fragile household goods on the journey by ship or by horse-or oxen-drawn wagons to the northern wilderness. Quilts padded the hard wagon seats. When a small pioneer log house was finally erected, quilts hung across openings until doors and windows were constructed and installed.

Completing a quilt requires hours of patient stitching. Each quilter usually enjoys one part of the process more than another. Francis Jolliffe loves to quilt "because it's quiet, peaceful and creative work." Cappy Lord enjoys the piecework more. "I really don't like to hand-quilt," she adds, "it hurts my finger. I'd much rather sew the small pieces of fabric together into interesting patterns."

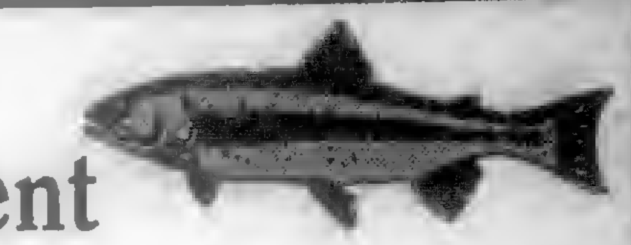
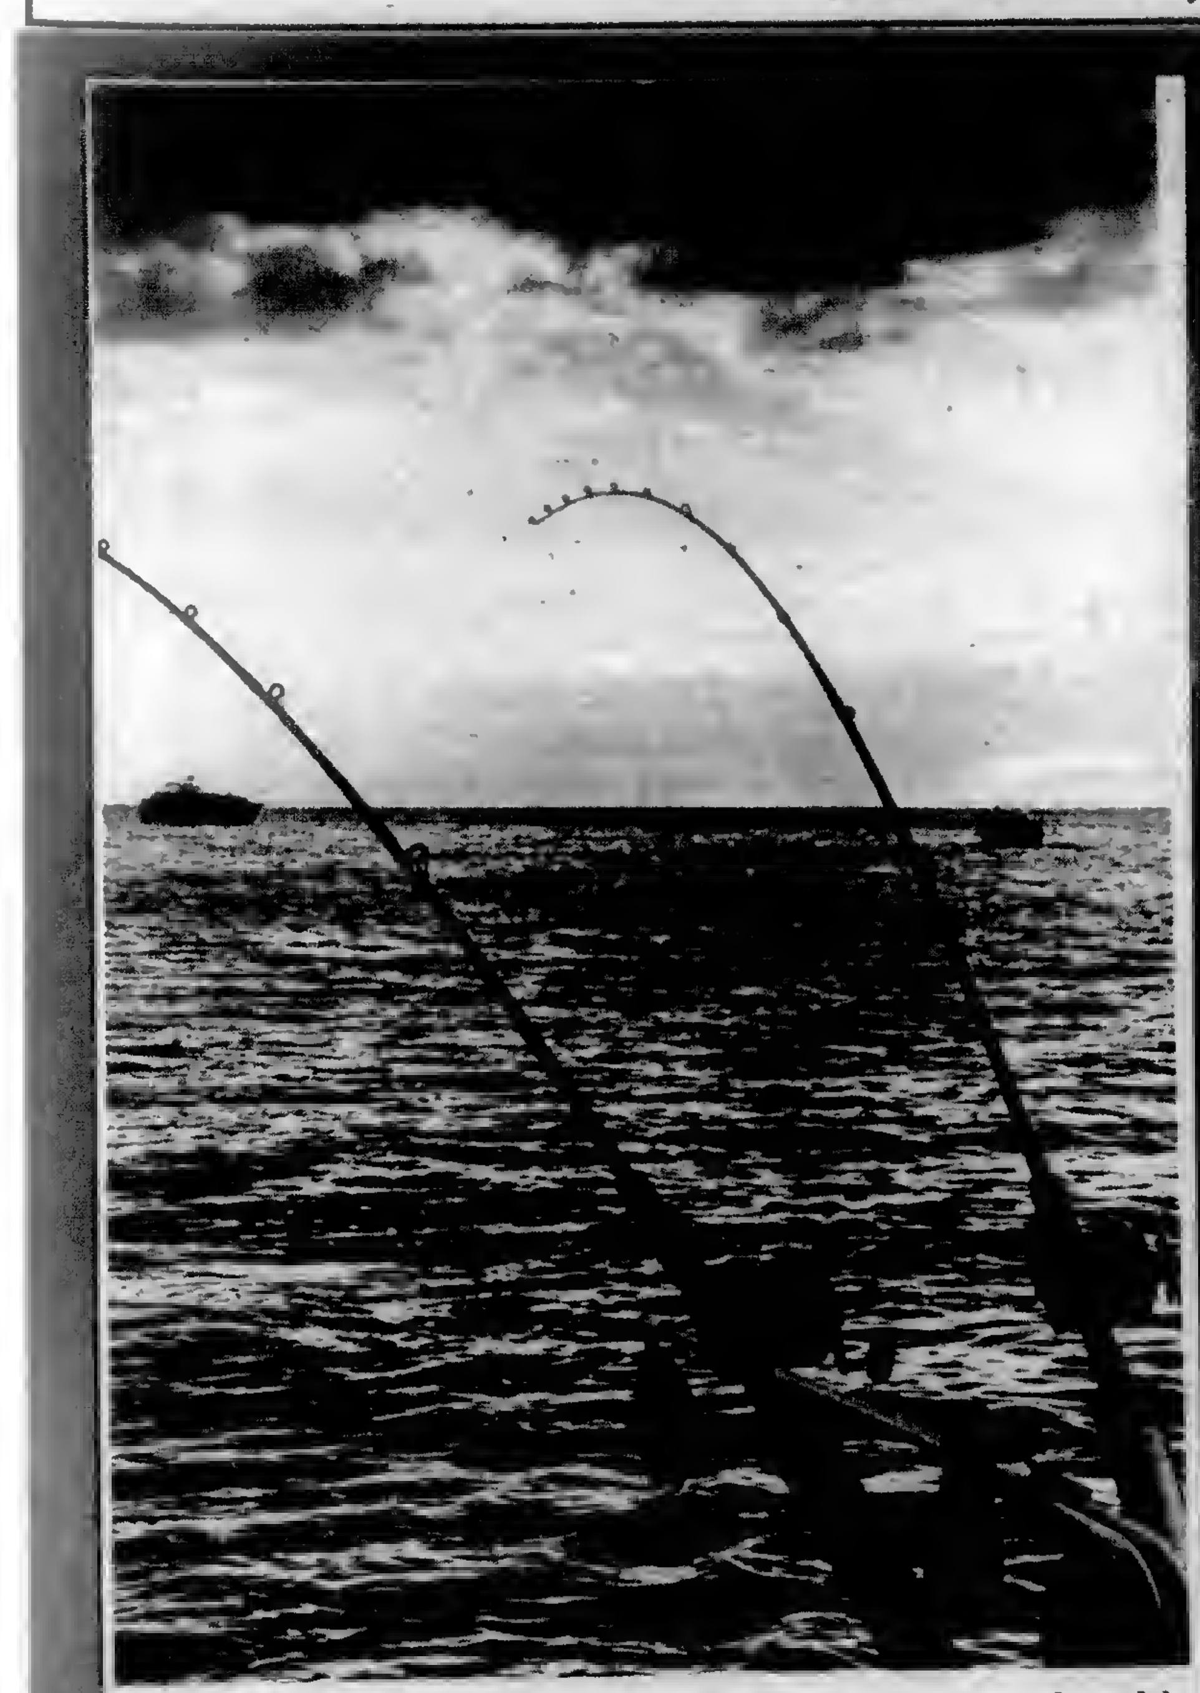
12th Annual
Lake Charlevoix Area Trout Tournament
June 7, 8 & 9 • 1996





Many fishermen will be peering over their poles this weekend as they hope for a big catch in this weekend's trout tournament.

Annual tourney sends fishermen reeling

The fish are biting and there's a possibility something very unusual could happen at the 12th Annual Lake Charlevoix Trout Tournament. Rumor has it that salmon have already been biting.

"If that's any indication we should have a few salmon caught during the tournament this year, " said Dean Mikulski, a director of the Trout Tournament. That's generally not the case in the contest where brown trout, lake trout and steelhead are the typical finds.

Even if anglers don't net a salmon, Mikulski said there's still a chance they'll take home a prize from Sunday's 1 p.m. awards ceremony. Mikulski estimates that one in eight of the registered anglers will take home prizes, even if they don't catch a fish. Prizes include cash from $25-$1,000 in each category and trophies. Captured fish must meet the minimum size limits of 24" for lake trout and 18" for other species.

Mikulski said nearly 900 people participated in the 1995 tournament, and this year should be just as popular.

"Most people treat it like a second opening of deer season," Mikulski said. Offices close early and family and friends come to Charlevoix for the weekend festival to enjoy barbecues and all the family activities.

The 1995 festival brought registrants from Sault Ste. Marie, Canada, Tennessee and Maine, to name a few. About half of the fleet comes from within 100 miles of Charlevoix, Mikulski said, but the other half could be from anywhere.

A highlight of the festival, as always, will be the kid's pond, Mikulski said. The free-for-all event for kids begins at noon Saturday and will continue through the afternoon. Mikulski said 300 rainbow trout will be in the pond. Anglers will be charged $1 per fish caught from the pond.

This year's festival will follow the traditional program, Mikulski said. Categories and prizes, and registration fees have not changed in the dozen years the festival has taken place.

Registeration is from 11 a.m. to 8 p.m. Wednesday-Thursday, June 5 and 6 at the East Park bandshell.

The fee is $20 for adults and children over 14. Children 6-14 may register for $5, which includes a hat and lure, and children under 5 are free, but must be registered in advance to be in the boat during the tournament.

World premiere set for movie

Film was shot in area

The U.S. premiere of "Straight to the Heart" will be held on Thursday, June 13, 1996 at the Gaslight Cinemas in Petoskey. This premiere will be followed by a run at the Gaslight theater starting Friday, June 14.

The full-length feature film from the Santa Fe Film Co. Inc. was directed by Eric Vaterlaus and produced by William Macomber and was shot on location in Petoskey, Harbor Springs and surrounding areas of Emmet County in September 1994.

All proceeds form the premiere will benefit the Little Traverse Civic Theatre, Crooked Tree Arts Council and Association for Harbor Arts. The premiere will be followed by a reception at the Crooked Tree Arts Center. Tickets are $20.

The producer, Will Macomber, will attend the event and will be in the area promoting the film premiere and the subsequent booking of the film. Macomber intends to have the film shown in the region's theaters.

"The premiere run in Petoskey will be a great kick-off for this wonderful love story," Macomber said. "I envision us playing from Traverse City to Cheboygan throughout the summer months and then we will take the film downstate in September."

This quirky drama, set in a Midwest town, revolves around a love triangle. At the center is Alice, drawn back to the town by her family ties and a desire to return to her childhood home. Leon, a rising small town lawyer, has been courting Alice and is planning his future with her. His plans center around a grand old house he intends to make theirs upon marriage. Jack, a poker hustler, returns after years away in order to quickly sell the house and leave.

Everything gets reshuffled up when he and Alice are introduced.

School board considers plans for building in the future

The Board of Education got an idea of what new or renovated schools might look like in the future at its regular meeting Monday.

Board trustee Allen Telgenhof said the presentation from Beta Design Group, an architectural firm, and Christman Company, the project manager, both from Grand Rapids, was intended to demonstrate what could be done with the square footage the school will end up with under several options under consideration.

Schematic drawings for five options were presented: a new high school, a new middle school, a renovated elementary school, a renovated high school for high school use and a renovated high school for middle school use.

The board has made no decision on the alternative it will pursue in the proposed building improvement plan.

Board secretary Larry Levengood said a similar, more detailed presentation will be made at the special board meeting Monday; June 17. The board also will learn the results of a community survey by Kathy Feaster. Members of the community are encouraged to attend the special meeting.

Local kids win Kmart contest

The Charlevoix Kmart announces the local winners in the "It's A Snap!" photo contest. The photos were taken by students who participated in the "It's A Snap!" program, which taught second graders about photography and the environment using a curriculum developed by Kmart and Kodak.

Steven Holden was the grand prize winner in the "Beautiful" category and Amber Smith won in the "Needs Improvement" category. Both winners will receive a Kodak Photo FX Camera Kit.

The two winners are second graders at Charlevoix Elementary School and will have their photos entered into a contest of more than 4,000 nationwide. For the national contest two grand prizes of $5,000 savings bonds will be awarded. Cash value is $2,500. Bonds mature in 11 years.

During the week of May 12, the Charlevoix Kmart will exhibit the photos in celebration of national photography month and Kid's Week at Kmart.

The "It's A Snap!" instructional manual highlighted environmental and photographic lessons that encouraged students to look at the world around them and think about the impact they can have on it.

Lessons like "Identifying My Beautiful World", "Reuse and Recycle" and "How Nature Recycles." Adopt a Tree" promoted creativity and taught the children to be more aware of environmental issues like recycling.

(Below) Amber Smith didn't look for beauty. She shot pollution. Both second-graders will have their photos entered into a national competition.

Charlevoix charges in for a run Saturday during the Class C District Softball Championship. The Rayders fell to East Jordan in the second round of play.

Rayders bid farewell to even season, split at districts

The Rayders softball team ended a 17-17 season Saturday with one win and one loss at district competition. The conference champions for the past two years fell to East Jordan in the second round of play.

The Rayders defeated Boyne City in the first round. The momentum carried through to the third inning of the second game against East Jordan, but then "the wheels kind of fell off," said assistant coach Bob Eveleigh.

Jenny Eveleigh's pitching was a big factor in the first win, the coach said. Eveleigh struck out 10 batters, walked four and allowed only five hits. She contributed three singles offensively, teammate Christi Kaczynski had two and Amanda Eaton hit a triple for the Rayders. Singles were earned by Lisa Boss, Lisa Wheat, Lyndsay Blechel, Aprille Pischner, Jenni Swenor and Liz Coen.

Boyne City captured an early 2-0 lead, but Charlevoix came back hitting the ball and earned four runs in the fourth inning, five in the fifth and six in the seventh.

"Once we got the lead in the fourth inning it sort of took the wind out of Boyne City and we were tough to stop from that point on," Eveleigh said.

The story changed at about the same point in the contest against East Jordan. Eveleigh said the team seemed to wear down in the third inning just as East Jordan went on a 10-run streak and never looked back.

Eveleigh said the team is better than their record shows. There have been fewer practices and some injuries. The team, which loses six seniors, had four members honored for their softball skills..

Christi Kaczynski and Jenny Eveleigh were named to All District and All Conference teams. Amanda Eaton and Kris Blanchard earned honorable mentions by the All Conference committee.

Track slips off state winning spree

A fumbled baton shattered hopes for a fifth consecutive state title for the 3200-meter relay team. None of the Charlevoix track and field contenders in the state finals meet at Comstock Park High School Saturday placed among the top eight finishers.

"We just didn't have a very good day," said coach Hal Evans.

Two shot putters failed to qualify for the final round, the two-miler placed 15th and neither relay team placed among the top eight.

Evans described the performance as "not up to our normal expectations."

Throughout the season the team maintained a winning pace while facing adversity from bad weather, Evans said.

Although losing five seniors, E.J. Ranville, Jason Firman, Dan Keehn, Justin Davis and Seth Kilander, Evans said he has a strong core of underclassmen returning in the fall.

"We're looking forward to next year already," he said.

Senior Seth Kilander has been his most valuable track runner this year, Evans said, and he will be missed as he heads for Michigan State University this fall.

Baseball team falls to Boyne

The Rayder baseball team lost to Boyne City 9-8, in the first round of district play Saturday.

"I thought the team played extremely well," said coach Brian Certa. "They came to play and they played hard and put their hearts into it. We played some extremely good defense.

"It's hard to lose by one run," he said.

Certa's team led 8-4 until the bottom of the fifth inning when Boyne City hit the grand slam homer which tied the score. Boyne's winning run came in the bottom of an extra inning.

Steve Speigl and Mark Boss led the team with two singles each. Joe Grundman contributed a three-run home run, and Chris Mikulski, Jason Terryberry and Dan Pardee each had singles.

The team finished its season with a 17-7-1 record.

Youth golf courses beginning

The second year of golf instruction for area youngsters is set to kick off with a registration and orientation session scheduled for 10 a.m. Monday, June 17, at the Belvedere Golf Course. Parents are asked to register their children at the orientation session.

Director Dean Davenport announced that the teaching professionals form last year's successful program have all agreed to return this year. Joan Waha, Bruce Schepeler, Dave Poquette, and Steve Braun will lend their talent and interest to give youngsters 7-17 years of age the best exposure to golf fundamentals and etiquette. Lessons will be $3 per session with some scholarships available for families where the charge may provide a hardship. Clubs will also he provided for children who don't have their own.

Lessons will be at: Belvedere, Charlevoix Country Club, and the City or Municipal Course. More intensive instructional will be available twice a with tournaments interspersed to give youngsters a taste of competition.

Davenport announced that adult volunteers will be needed to accompany youth foursomes as they play a couple holes after each lesson. For more information 547-6433 or 547-6418.

to discuss what changes should be made.

Phil Johnson, 9-1-1 board chairman, said Charlevoix should be past the committee stage.

"The rest of the counties and cities have worked hard to get this done," Johnson said, noting that nearly $1 million of taxpayers money has been spent on the system. "And now we're just sitting here waiting.

"We've got to get that numbering done before we can start."

The 547 exchange makes up about one-third of Charlevoix County. A 25 percent fallout rate (failure to work with the system) has been found with current numbering.

"It's unfair that Charlevoix can't go with the other two counties," Johnson said.

Even if the committee makes a decision later this week, Johnson said he doubts the corrections can be made in time for the system's first day operating.

A committee of Halverson, Bob Tims, Gabe Campbell and city manager, Mike Wiesner, will meet to discuss the city's next step.

However, time is running out for anyone living within 547 to continue numbering debates. And Charlevoix residents make up just over half of those people, said city mayor, Josh Barnes.

Poll: No to two new schools

By Janenne Irene Froats
Courier editor

Charlevoix voters aren't ready to approve a millage for new schools.

These are the words of Kathy Feaster, of School Public Relations Consultant Services. Feaster's firm conducted a public survey of 364 taxpayers in May to determine their attitudes on updating school buildings.

"They're not ready to put anything on the ballot yet," Feaster said, following a presentation Monday on the survey results."Here, nothing is going to pass right now. It's a strong no."

Through the findings of two community facility committees, the school district has been pondering a building proposal that could include one or two new schools, and renovations.

Previously, superintendent Roberta Jackson said the board planned to make a decision on how extensive of a proposal to pursue and then hold a September bond election.

The survey included voters from throughout the district's area. Names were obtained from the county clerk and calls made by Feaster's company in Menominee.

About 79 percent of the survey participants said that, overall, the middle school is in good to fair condition. About 71 percent believe the high school is in the same shape. However, the middle school, is recognized as being in poor to fair shape.

Up to a third of the people polled didn't know what shape the schools are in.

More than half — 54 percent — said they believe it's "very important" to build a new middle school: However, more than half said they wouldn't vote for a bond issue.

The majority of the voters, 53 percent, said they would vote against a $26 million bond issue, which would mean a 5.15 millage for 20 years. This proposal includes building new high and middle schools at the same time.

Only 34 percent of the voters polled said they would vote for the most expensive plan. About 12 percent were undecided.

The bond issue for both schools, however, no longer rests at a $26 million figure. Beta Design Group presented plans for the district's various options that could mean a bond issue of up to $35 million.

The firm estimated the cost of a new high school at $13.8 million, with another $4.3 million for teacher training rooms, an auxiliary gym and large auditorium.

The cost of a new middle school has estimated at $11.4 million, which includes $250,000 that was added onto the original price for a music suite.

9-1-1 address changes approved

By Janenne Irene Froats
Courier editor

At least four public streets in Charlevoix are being renamed. And about 350 addresses will change, hopefully by Monday, said city police chief, Dennis Halverson.

The streets being renamed are: two sections of Central that are naturally split will be named Fairway and Eagle drives, the south end of Lincoln Street is being named Whitley Street, Old Norwood Road will be a continuation of Sheridan Street, Robinson Street — off Bridge — is changing to St. Mary, and W. Wood Street is being changed to Crain Street after a former resident.

In addition to new street names, homes that are accessed from one street and have house addresses on another will be changed, including those on Belvedere, Halverson said.

Although city council has allowed a committee to determine necessary changes and take them directly to 9-1-1 central dispatch — without review at a public meeting — executives at 9-1-1 are still frustrated at late-coming decisions.

Gordon Neihardt, system executive director, hopes the 547 exchange will be included in a June 24 start-up of 9-1-1. However, it is doubtful that getting the information early next week will give Ameritech enough time to have the exchange ready.

Neihardt said he needed the changes by Tuesday, June 11.

If the 547 exchange doesn't make a final deadline, the rest of Charlevoix County will be included in initial service, Neihardt said. Boyne City and East Jordan officials pressed to be included in the start-up, stating it wasn't fair for them to be left off when they completed their address changes in time.

However, even if 547 isn't ready in time, the exchange can be included in the system within days.

Levengood, Owen on school board, Char-Em gets funds

One incumbent retained his position on the Charlevoix School Board and another will be replaced by challenger Jerry Owen.

Voters voted Monday to reelect Larry Levengood and Owen, narrowly ousting incumbent Steven Czerkes from the board.

Owen, 42, a manager at J.C. Penney Company, could not be reached for comment Monday night and was unavailable Tuesday. Czerkes, 42, left town for a few days before the election ended Monday. Czerkes is a pharmacist at Kmart in Charlevoix.

Levengood, 47, is pleased with the opportunity to continue representing the community and students, but is disappointed that his team member, Czerkes, was not reelected.

Levengood, county supervisor, District Health Department No. 3, said in his third consecutive term on the board he will continue with the proposed facility project and complete the board policy manual. Those projects are two goals Levengood has set for himself, but that is not his true job.

"Our job is to represent the community and students and you certainly have goals in mind that you want to do, but that's (community representation) still the bottom line of what you want to accomplish," Levengood said.

Vo-tech millage passes

Vocational-Technical education will improve at schools in the Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District. Voters approved .75 mills for five years, 3240 yes to 2562 no.

Schools within the district will receive 90 percent of the $1.7 million generated by the millage. Ten percent will pay for administrative costs of Char-Em. Funds will be distributed through grants. The money can be used for equipment and technology, instruction and classroom materials, career counseling, curriculum development and teacher training.

Without the millage, money for such programs would either come from schools' operating budgets or state funding. Many schools currently pay for these programs with enhancement millages which soon expire.

also presented plans for renovations for all three schools. The high school could cost $5.5 million; to switch the high school to a middle school, $2.5 million; with renovations to the elementary school at $1.7 million.

Each proposal has areas of expense that can be cut. With the community survey and the drawings and cost estimates in the board's hands, it is left to choose which option, if any, they will take to the polls.

The school board is hosting a community round table 7 p.m. Monday, June 17, in the high school study hall. Plans for construction options will be available for review.

Levengood was the highest vote-getter with 544; Owens received 480 votes and Czerkes earned 447. According to the Charlevoix County Clerk's office, 864 people in the school district voted.

"I'm always disappointed more people don't get out and vote, it's their opportunity," Levengood siad. "I think sometimes being on a Monday people tend to forget."

9-1-1 address changes coming soon

Council member, Bob Timms, said the current changes are far better than the "original grand plan that would have disrupted everyone in town."

The original plan estimated that more than 80 percent of the city's addresses should be changed.

"We built a new house from an address standpoint," Halverson said. "I'd call this a remodel."

Timms said he believes the community will accept these changes because they are what's needed to get a 30 percent error down to acceptable levels for 9-1-1 to operate effectively.

"Get rid of the half numbers and inconsistencies," Timms said, "that's really all the council wanted done originally."

Although city employees worked throughout the weekend, the changes are taking longer than expected to finalize. Halverson said there are catches such as addresses where the movie theater used to be. He said where there was one address, there now needs to be three to cover the retail shops now in that space.

Halverson said the city is leaving room for future expansions in the middle of some blocks to avoid having to renumber entire blocks when a similar situation happens again.,

Businesses and residents facing changes will be notified by postcard early next week, Halverson said. Ameritech, the post office and utility providers should receive the changes about the same time.

Library goes district

Charlevoix Public Library will make the transition from a school-supported library to a district library in 1997. An informational meeting is scheduled for 7 p.m. tonight at the library.

Cynthia Faulhaber, an attorney with Miller, Canfield, Paddock and Stone, will outline the steps required in becoming a district library.

The change is required by the school finance reform package in Proposal A. School districts can not levy millage to support a public library after 1996. This means voters in the library district will essentially request a renewal millage, except the money will go directly to the library instead of being a separate account in the school district's books. The millage amount would be subtracted from the school millage levy.

The library will be required to form a District Library Board, which must include representation from each municipality within the district. Like the school board does for the school, the new library board will decide how the funds are used to provide library services.

The public library currently benefits from school support services, such as bookkeeping and financial assistance. This is a service that is paid for with the library millage allocation. The transition library board will learn tonight if a similar contracted service is allowed under the new law.

Handsome off on wrong foot

Everyone wants to get off on the right foot on their first day of work. You might say the newest addition to the Charlevoix Police Department got off on the wrong foot, literally.

Handsome, the 1,200 pound appaloosa, is hoping his first day doesn't set a precedent for the rest of the summer.

Handsome, the horse which will carry officer Scott Hankins through the parks and trails of Charlevoix this summer, shifted his weight last Thursday and landed on the foot of TV 7&4 reporter Jeni DiPrizio. The misplaced hoof caused a little bleeding and a bruise the size of a tennis ball.

DiPrizio was filming the horse's first day of work and stood a little too close to its hind quarter.

"It was an uncomfortable incident that was fairly unusual," Hankins said. With the heavy camera on her shoulder, DiPrizio couldn't anticipate the horse's move, Hankins said. "Most people aren't going to be that close."

DiPrizio said the combination of rain and the unfamiliar camera caused the horse to be skittish. DiPrizio is viewing the incident with humor. "What's funny is I have it on tape." She's even toying with the idea of sending the video to America's Funniest Home Videos. DiPrizio said, and you see the horse come close, the camera gets bumped and then a horrible scream is heard.

DiPrizio said her foot still hurts and she can't fit into her penny loafers yet, but she doesn't anticipate any lasting emotional scars.

Handsome has been trained to work with conditions of gunfire, helicopters, sirens and flashing lights and Hankins is sure the incident was purely accidental. Handsome recently visited 30 students at St. Mary catholic school and "was as quiet as can be," Hankins said.

Chief Dennis Halverson agrees the horse would not intentionally hurt anyone. "If we would have thought that, we wouldn't be doing it," he said. "If it would have kicked her that would have been one thing," Halverson said, but added there's no indication that was the case.

Venetian candidates vie for crown

The Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce will again sponsor the Miss Charlevoix Venetian Scholarship Competition. This year's competition will award a scholarship of up to $1,000 to the winner and up to $350 to first runner-up. Candidates must be between 16 and 22 and must have primary residence in Charlevoix, or have graduated from Charlevoix schools. Entry forms will list other qualifications or entry requirements.

Following the format established in 1994, candidates will participate in an interview with judges from outside the Charlevoix area, with the decision of the judges being based on the candidate's knowledge of Charlevoix, the Venetian Festival, poise, ability to express themselves and general presentation. This year candidates will also be observed during scheduled activities in the four weeks prior to the competition.

Competition will be held Thursday, July 25, at a location to be announced. Coronation will take place during intermission at the Venetian Festival Drum and Bugle Corps competition Friday, July 26, at Charlevoix High School's Kipke Athletic Field. Applications are due by 5 p.m. Thursday, June 20. They are available at the chamber office on Bridge Street. If additional information is needed please call 547-2101.

War over address changes taints benefits

Tradition isn't worth lives.

The cost of stationary and numbers for the front of the house or business is not worth lives.

Charlevoix city council has finally approved changing about 350 addresses to take the three-county 9-1-1 emergency response system one step closer to start-up.

Verbal wars have slowed the process, dimming people's enthusiasm for a system that has helped save countless lives.

There is no question whether Charlevoix has a good emergency response team. However, the technology offered by 9-1-1 will expand opportunities for help.

There's comfort in knowing that three numbers is all that separates you from paramedics, firefighters or police — no matter where you are.

Most Charlevoix residents know how to reach the fire or police department in town. But what if they are in Petoskey shopping or Boyne City for business when an emergency arose. Would they know what numbers to dial?

It's unfortunate that 9-1-1 has been scarred by address wars.

While city council took the political approach to a difficult decision — putting it off — residents tried to step in and make the decision for them. The delay went past listening to constituents concerns.

Some residents claim the system is a waste of money. Others want it operating yesterday.

Possibly, part of the community wouldn't have been shocked into apprehension if city leadership had recognized that a change-all proposal would find resistance.

People avoid change. And suddenly proposing that more than 80 percent of the city's addresses be changed is drastic. Especially when 350 seem to be acceptable.

After treading lightly on some voters' wishes to defy address changes, city council ended up moving the topic into committee and passing it on to the 9-1-1 dispatch center without properly informing residents of what changes were sent north.

All original intentions of keeping the community involved were set aside in the rush of getting central dispatch a plan. Phone calls were made to verify changes that are needed. Notices are being sent to the involved addresses.

Citizens are not getting a chance to attend an informational meeting on which addresses are being changed. They should be allowed to see maps and hear explanations of how and why.

Other communities handled changes this way. But the flurry of going from slow-paced to brusbing by without a city council meeting is a brash way to end a high-interest, high-intensity topic.

City officials are elected and should fairly represent their constituents. We recognize that final decisions are entrusted within their votes.

There will always be those who don't agree with council action. But in a small town, they shouldn't be left to hear issue outcomes of such an issue on the streets, through the media or a mailed notice.

Engineer questions need for new schools

Editor,

An open letter to Charlevoix taxpayers and voters:

I attended the open house at the Charlevoix High School, took the tour and listened to the presentation for a new high school and middle school.

But to start with, I got into the wrong room and listened to the person who had already been hired to do a "survey." One of her sample questions was, "How large should a K-4 school be?" I soon found out that she didn't know how many students are currently in our K-5 school, nor how many it was designed for, nor how many would be left if grade five is moved to the middle school, leaving K-4 at the present building, nor how many classrooms would be freed up by the move. The answer was three classrooms and was given by someone else. This gives some insight into the survey and surveyor.

During the tour of the high school, I asked the man who is most knowledgeable about the physical condition of all 3 schools, what is the condition of the middle school. The answer was, "It's built like a tank." The same response was given by a knowledgeable individual in the county government. The main problem at the middle school is access for the handicapped.

We were shown the questionable arches supporting the high school gym roof, and the cracks in the corners of the gym wall. The concrete floor, about 10 feet square, on one classroom is crumbling. The wall is cracked near a main entry way due to poor footing. Some of the classroom ceilings must be replaced due to asbestos regulations. The classroom air circulation controls have been removed by some prior consulting firm in the interest of heat conservation, which now creates an air quality problem.

The bottom line, being advanced by superintendent of schools is the replacement of both the middle school and high school for 26 million dollars worth of bonds. However, that is not the whole bottom line. Those bonds are going to cost 22 million dollars in interest. The whole bill for us taxpayers is 48 million dollars!

There is nothing in the middle school and high school that cannot be properly repaired, replaced or added on, to extend their lives another 20 useful years, and the cost would be a lot less than 48 million dollars.

The high school gym can have a steel structure placed inside to support the roof and curved wood beams removed. Any portion of a concrete floor in a classroom can be removed and replaced just as is done on concrete highways. Faulty foundation footers can be corrected where needed. Asbestos ceilings can be replaced in the remaining classrooms requiring that it be done. The classroom air units, considering their age, probably would be better replaced than repaired.

The middle school can have handicap access added, as well as additional classrooms if the 5th grade is moved in.

After the schools have been repaired and updated, a millage should be sought to build a fund so that 20 years from now the school board will have some cash on hand to start new buildings in a new location. Granted prices will increase in that time, but reduction of interest costs is helpful to taxpayers.

The school board meeting, June 10th, expects the public to comment. I cannot be there due to an out-of-town commitment, but I certainly hope several taxpayers are there to voice their comments. As a professional engineer and former member of large corporation managements, I know the difference between salesmanship and a snow job.

Provide a happy home for a cat

Editor,

In many ways, a cat is the simplest pet to live with. He needs little space, learns quickly and is easy to care for. All pets need exercise to help prevent boredom and maintain good health. Cats can keep fit indoors just by leaping up onto window ledges or batting pencils off desks. They spend much of their day grooming themselves or napping in a sunny soft spot. They do not like dirty food and water dishes or litter boxes.

Cats enjoy a quiet indoor life. In fact, indoor cats live an average of 16 to 18 years. With little effort, you can make indoor life as much fun as the great outdoors. Simple things - paper bags and boxes to explore, a scratching post, a window to perch in and some safe kitty toys.

Cats are very affectionate, intelligent, curious and they are also independent. It is true that cats cost less to take care of then dogs, however, they still need affection, regular veterinary checkups, and vaccinations.

Cats love to explore in the house, garage, and yard. Your home should be thoroughly kitty-proof before bringing a kitty home.

1. All cleaning chemicals, medications, poisons, antifreeze, weed killers are especially lethal to your cat. Keep them somewhere that kitty cannot get to them.

2. Keep garbage cans closed, cats can be seriously injured by bones or sharp objects.

3. Knives, tools, scissors, etc. should be kept out of leap range.

4. Yarn and string should not be given to your cat to play with and make sure he stays away from electrical cords and outlets.

5. Running motors, fans, washers, dryers, etc. entice cats to check out the action.

6. Cats love to chew on greens. Some plants are poisonous while others cause nausea or harm to delicate membranes.

People will tell you that cats can't be trained, but they can. When you bring a kitten home, place his litter box in a private place. Put him in it. Usually, this is all it takes, but to be sure, put him in it first thing in the morning, last thing at night and every time he eats.

Your kitten can be taught to walk on a leash. Pet supply shops sell harnesses especially designed for cats. Put it on him for a few minutes until he gets used to it. Then using a light weight leash gently jerk it a bit and walk around the house. Soon he will walk with you and you can take him for a short walk outside.

If your kitten climbs drapes, jumps on counters or other behavior that you do not approve of, have a squirt gun, filled with water — catch him in the act and give him a squirt. A few times of this and he will stop. Try it — it works.

There are way too many cats being born that can't possibly get homes. In seven years, one female cat and its young can produce 420,000 cats. Cat overpopulation is a problem you can help solve. Please spay/neuter your cats. Being a responsible cat owner means making this important choice for your pet — a choice that saves lives.

Charlevoix the beautiful gets raves again

Editor,

Charlevoix, Michigan, is my favorite town in the whole world. Everything about it, the sights, the sounds, and, of course, Lake Michigan, I love.

Charlevoix is a quiet, little town on Lake Michigan. This place is where my dad was raised and my mom taught high school. It is also where my grandparents live. Everything there is peaceful and calm.

The sight is magnificent! You can see endless green pine trees sitting on top of the rolling hills, water, a shade of blue which matches the sky, and you are never sure where the sky starts and the water ends. The soaring seagulls dive into the water to catch the fish. It is like being in Heaven.

The sound of the crashing whitecapped waves is roaring. The constant waves and the gentle breezes of the wind blend like music. At night, the thundering whitecaps change into the most peaceful waves that make my heart relax. I close my eyes and drift silently to sleep. The waves never stop. When I leave and get back to Cincinnati, I always wonder, "Where did those waves go?"

Charlevoix is my favorite spot in the whole world. I wish Charlevoix would stay the way it is now, forever. It is truly a magnificent place to live and visit.

Technology camp for kids opens

By Janenne Irene Froats
Courier editor

Summer camp can he more than swimming and sailing lessons.

It can mean building rockets, planes and bridges, and hooking into NASA through the Internet.

A select number of 8 to 13-year-olds from Charlevoix and Emmet counties will be spending three-hour blocks at Techno-Kids Camp in Charlevoix.

The camp sports sessions in rocketry/aerospace, engineering and flight.

"When there's interest, there's motivation," said John Twichel, who is found in the camp with Theresa Noirot.

Both teachers are pioneering a camp where they expect kids to excel. The camp is divided into week-long sessions that last three hours a day, Monday through Friday.

Twichel and Noirot are both teachers in East Jordan school.

The ratio of students to teachers will be eight to one.

The program has been set up to help students no matter what level of technology experience they have, Twichel said.

Success to the students will be learning from whatever level they begin. In addition to computer time, there will be hands-on projects in each class. For example, engineering will allow kids to analyze data and manipulate variables involved in bridge building before constructing their model.

In the flight class, students will study the principles of lift and thrust and how airplanes defy gravity through test controls of an eight-foot plane.

Rocketry will show kids how rockets work and show NASA's role in the continued development of the space program.

Twichel and Noirot consider the program a challenge for themselves. They are hauling computers into a tanning business and using a room next door for all hands-on projects.

Each session is $80, with the exception of rocketry, which is $85 because of extra supplies. There are multiple weeks from which to chose.

Engineering is being held in four sessions from Monday, July 1, to Friday, July 12; flight from Monday, July 15, to Friday, July 26; and rocketry from Monday, July 29, to Friday, Aug. 9.

Separate classes are held in the morning and afternoon.

For more information or registration, call 547-3457 or fax 547-0999.

Thanks to school volunteers

Editor,

As the school year comes to a close, we would like to acknowledge a group of volunteers who have worked faithfully all year as "Reading Buddies" to first and second grade students at the Charlevoix Elementary School. The "S.T.A.R." (Success To All Readers) Program enabled 31 students and 38 volunteers to work together each day to improve the reading skills of the students.

The success of this program is a direct result of the dedication and commitment of the volunteers who gave of their time and talents. As teachers of the children who worked with reading buddies this year, we can't say "thank you" enough. The growth in reading skills, in self confidence, and in enthusiasm has been wonderful to watch. The individual attention this program has provided to our students has given them such a boost. Thank you, S.T.A.R. volunteers, you have really made a difference!

BEACONS

OF BLESSINGS

by Rev. Bruce Hamilton
Charlevoix Community Church of God

Saturday afternoon was too beautiful to spend in an office in front of a computer keyboard. I did something I hadn't done in a long time. I decided to write the old-fashioned way. I got my Bible, my legal pad, and my fountain pen and headed for Ferry Beach. There in the shade of Pavilion Number 3 I settled in for a few hours of exploration and discovery.

It isn't hard, when you are surrounded by blue skies, inviting waters, and the joys of nature to turn in on what God might be trying to say to your heart. The words seem to come to the paper almost on their own. I was in the midst of such a furious burst of inspiration that I was startled by a woman with binoculars around her neck as she hustled through the otherwise empty pavilion.

There had been a bird singing his own natural aria in the trees and while I had been enjoying it, I hadn't paid that much attention to it. This dear lady began earnestly scanning the branches for it. Curiosity finally got the better of me and I asked what she was looking for. "It's a Tennessee Warbler," she said. "They're only here for a few days on their way south and I was hoping to spot it."

The wind was really stirring up the leaves making her task a hard one. I finally asked her if she'd like an extra set of eyes and joined her. The leaves were hiding our quarry but when he jumped from one tree to another, I spotted him. The broad smile on her face said so much as she shared, "Patience always pays off."

How long has it been since you have had the patience to go outside and just sit with your Bible, a pen, and some paper and see if God might have something special to say to you? We are so blessed to live in northern Michigan with all the changes of season and varieties of wildlife that surround us. Make no mistake about it. God is here and He is not silent. Perhaps He's simply waiting for you to slow down the "busy-ness" of your life long enough for Him to reach down and touch your heart?

After finding the illusive warbler, I happened to notice a plaster owl that had been perched on top of the pavilion. I suppose that wise looking fake is there to scare off some critters that might pester picnickers. Most animals or birds wouldn't risk a close up examination to see that it was no threat.

Did it ever occur to you that a lot of things in life that might frighten us are powerless if we take a close look at them. God has a lot for us to learn in each season's change. Be sure you take time to get outdoors for some quiet time and just listen Like David the Psalmist wrote, "Be still and know that I am God..."

Irene de Castro

Irene de Castro of Charlevoix died Friday, May 17, 1996, in Lakewood, Colo. She was 90.

Mrs. de Castro moved to Boulder, Colo. in 1989 to live near her daughter. She graduated from Charlevoix High School and attended County Normal (teachers college) for two years.

She co-owned and operated "The Hip Shop" with her sister Helen Balding and friend, Pollie VerWys from the late 1950s to the late 1960s. Mrs. de Castro taught knitting and sold yarn and knitting supplies. The shop was named for the first letters in their first names.

She belonged to Christ Episcopal Church in Charlevoix, where she was a former president of the church guild and active on many committees. She was a member of the Eastern Star and White Shrine in Charlevoix. She worked as a volunteer teacher for the blind, served on the Charlevoix Hospital Guild and was active in many organizations.

Born on May 23, 1905, in Charlevoix, she was the daughter of Samuel Halverson and Mary Hanson Halverson.

She married Frederick de Castro on Jan. 27, 1923, in Milwaukee, Wis.

Mrs. de Castro was preceded in death by her husband; three brothers, Sander, Martin and Helmer Halverson; and five sisters, Helen Belding, Geraldine Gillette, Alma Fairweather, Lydia Orvis and Sadie Bartlett.

Survivors include one son, Fred de Castro and his wife, Carol of Hot Springs Village, Ark.; two daughters, Louise Smith and her husband, John, of Clearwater, Fla., and Susan de Castro McCann, of Lyons, Colo.; one sister, Vera Zillmer, of Charlevoix; five grandchildren, Jenny White, Dana Anderson, Dawn de Castro, Tony David de Castro and Terry de Castro; and one great-grandson, Luke de Castro.

Memorial services will be held at 1 p.m., Aug. 3, at Christ Episcopal Church in Charlevoix with graveside services following. The Rev. Lander Carter is officiating.

Memorial contributions may be made to the National Federation for the blind in care of Ahlberg Funeral Chapel, 326 Terry St., Longmont, Colo. 80501.

Local charter school readies to open

While many area students are involved in "schools out" festivities, some students and parents are making enrollment plans for next year at the new Northwest Academy in Charlevoix.

Open enrollment for the charter school is through Friday, June 21. The academy will offer classes for middle and high school students starting in September.

Several other important organizational activities are planned during that period. All are required by its sponsoring institution, Saginaw Valley State University, as part of the chartering process.

At 7 p.m. Monday, June 17, the board of directors will hold parent-student-teacher night at the Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District offices on Mercer Blvd.

Anyone interested in meeting staff or board members, or acquainting themselves with curriculum and some of the planned technology, is welcome. A layout of the school building, planned in the former Bartlett's furniture store on Hurlbut Street, will also be displayed.

Northwest Academy will use technology on an extensive basis, allowing teachers to work with individual or small groups of students.

Curriculum will emphasize science, mathematics and technology, as well as offering instruction in English, social sciences and the arts.

Organization of the academy began in Spring of 1994, after the Michigan Legislature's passage of Public Act 896, which authorizes the chartering of public school academies. Northwest Academy is a public school open to residents of Michigan, and does not discriminate on the basis of race, color, creed, religion or sex.

Anyone interested in obtaining application forms for Northwest Academy can pick them up at the upcoming meetings, write to the academy at P.O. Box 424, Charlevoix 49720, or call directors Sandy Malewitz at 547-9175 or Gerald Chase at 547-5147.

Eighth-graders take the plunge to high school

By Janenne Irene Froats
Courier editor

The Class of 2000 encircled their parents, diplomas from Charlevoix Middle School in hand

The 114 eighth-graders graduated Thursday.

The sanctuary of the Community Church of God was filled as teachers handed out awards and parents proudly watched their children take the first step to high school.

"You people will be the trailblazers into the new century," said middle school principal, Dennis VanGuilder.

School superintendent, Roberta Jackson, presented the Class of 2000 with a challenge to consider and work toward the future.

"Look into your crystal ball — Class of 2000," she said. "What does it say? What do you want to do? What kind of career do you want? Where do you want to be?

"You really can do whatever you want to do."

Instructor, Josh Block, encouraged the students to take risks to obtain their dreams. He shared this poem he found while a student in college:

"To laugh is to risk appearing a fool. To weep is to risk appearing sentimental. To reach out for another is to risk involvement. To expose feelings is to risk exposing our true self. To place our ideas, our dreams before the crowd is to risk loss.

"To love is to risk not being loved in return. To live is to risk dying. To hope is to risk despair. To try at all is to risk failure.

"But to risk we must — because the greatest hazard in life is to risk nothing. The man, the woman, who risks nothing, does nothing, has nothing, is nothing.

"They may avoid suffering and sorrow but they can not learn, feel, change, grow, love, or live.

"Chained by their certainty they are a slave. They have lost their freedom. Only a person who risks is free."

Many students in the Class of 2000 are already taking risks. They were honored Thursday for their accomplishments in art, computers, journalism and physical education. Classmate Dena Sheldon played a flute solo for all.

Kirsten Brendtro, Laurel English, Tiffany Fisher and Tyler Lieberman were recognized as the class' top four students by the Charlevoix Rotary Club.

A student gives her instructor a thumbs up when she received her middle school diploma Friday.

Future stars, it's time to shine

Future stars of the stage will have a chance to be discovered during two week-long sessions under the instruction of Mindy Noirot, of Charlevoix.

Noirot, a senior at Oberlin College in Ohio, offers the program for the third season. A voice major at Interlochen Arts Academy, and currently an occasional performer at the Oberlin Conservancy, Noirot enjoys coordinating this annual program to give Charlevoix youths exposure to proper singing and stage presence techniques.

Children ages 6-9 will be registered for the first session, July 8-12. Daily sessions are from 9:30 a.m. to noon at the Charlevoix Theater. The group will give a performance at noon, Friday, July 12.

Older children, ages 10-13, will register for the second session July 15-19. Daily sessions are from 9:30 a.m. to noon at the Charlevoix Theater, also with a performance at noon, Friday, July 19.

In addition, both groups will have the option of performing at the Venetian Festival. Poems by Shel Silverstein and themes from Disney productions are incorporated into the program.

Registration is $55 and includes a t-shirt for performances. To register call 547-2432 or mail the fee to Mindy Noirot, 316 W. Garfield St., Charlevoix. Include the child's name, address, telephone number, age and which session they will attend.

Rainbow Shoppe reaps its millionth dollar

The Rainbow Shoppe has grossed its $1 millionth dollar since opening its doors in 1983.

The policy of the non-profit resale store is to offer clean saleable merchandise at nominal prices and share its revenue with other non-profit organizations.

The store originally opened with 1,000 square-feet of space to display the articles the community donated to the store. From that humble beginning, the Rainbow Shoppe has grown to 10,000 square-feet.

After 13 years of being in business, the board of directors, employees and 189 volunteers are celebrating the million dollar milestone.

"I'm sure Joe Spurgeon is flapping his Angel wings about now," said Rita Orlowski, vice president of the store's board. Spurgeon was the manager for 12 years before he died last year.

From the $1 million grossed, the store has given more than a quarter of the money to other non-profits.

"We are very proud of our past performance, and with the continued cooperation from the community, we look forward to our next million dollars," Orlowski said.

The 27-year-old is a 1987 graduate of Charlevoix High School. She continued her education at Adrian College, where she received a bachelor's degree in English and journalism, and Willamette University College of Law.

She has been a law clerk at the Charlevoix firm since October.

Barnes is the daughter of mayor, Josh Barnes, and Janet Geary, of Harbor Springs.

While at Adrian College, Barnes said she was preparing for a journalism degree. But when having problems finding a decent job her senior year, she decided to pursue law, an idea she'd entertained since childhood.

After eight years of studying and being away from Charlevoix, Barnes came home to be near family. She knows that as an attorney, her home town will appear differently than it did years ago.

Also, she's interested and secure in her career.

"Everybody will at some point in their life need a lawyer," Barnes said. "I'll meet a lot of people and see all kinds of problems."

Four members of the Charlevoix Rayders' girls' softball team recently received all-conference recognition. They are (from left) Christi Kaczynski, Jenny Eveleigh, Kris Blanchard and Amanda Eaton.

4 named to softball all-conference

Four members of the Charlevoix High School softball squad have received All Conference recognition for their accomplishments on the field.

Christi Kaczynski and Jenny Eveleigh were named to both the All-District and All-Conference teams. Amanda Eaton and Kris Blanchard earned honorable mentions by the All-Conference committee.

Kaczynski accumulated a batting average of .455 for the 1996 season. She has been the top batter for the Charlevoix team for three years in a row. This is her second year to be named to the All-District team. She has also earned All-Regional team honors in past seasons.

"She's one of our most consistent players and we could always depend on her to get on base for us," assistant coach Bob Eveleigh said.

Kaczynski, a senior, was team captain and has played on the varsity squad all four years of high school. Kaczynski has been accepted for a walk-on tryout for the Michigan State University softball team.

Eveleigh also had a high batting average of .482. The junior was named to both teams in the pitching position. She has made both teams for three years, and All-Region last year, as an outfielder for Charlevoix. Eveleigh contributed 48 RBI for the season and was another team captain.

Kris Blanchard was named an honorable mention to the All-Conference team. A senior outfielder, Blanchard earned a batting average of .328. Blancbard was named to the All-District team in 1995 as well.

Sophomore Amanda Eaton has received her first honorable mention to the All-Conference team. She earned a batting average of .289 and was considered the team's "on base specialist," by coach Eveleigh. "She found a way to get on base whether she got on base or got hit," Eveleigh said. With the team in need of a catcher, Eaton stepped in and took over all year. "We're looking forward to having her for two more years," Eveleigh said.

Priest names Charlevoix

Charlevoix is named after an early pioneer — Peter Francis Xavier de Charlevoix.

He was born in San Quentin, a French province in Picardy.

In 1698 Father Charlevoix entered the Jesuit Novitiate in Paris. He gained his first knowledge of the new France when he was assigned to teach at the Jesuit College in Quebec.

In 1719, after his ordination to the priesthood, the French government gave him a royal commission to determine the historic boundaries of Acadia, which was lost to the English by terms of the treaty of Utrecht.

In 1720, Father Charlevoix was sent on a highly secret mission to gather information about the long sought passage to the pacific. During his two-year journey — with two canoes and eight companions — he inspected missions stretched from Quebec to the Great Lakes and down the Mississippi to New Orleans. It was during his long journey that Father Charlevoix visited the Indian settlements along the west shore of Michigan.

Little did he dream that the white man would someday found a town — to be called Charlevoix — to be called the beautiful.

The above information was gathered by Mary Geiken from "Bob Miles' Charlevoix." The article is a courtesy of the Charlevoix Historic Society.

School board: new high school up for voter approval

By Janenne Irene Froats
Courier editor

A new high school it is — the school board hopes.

After years of research, surveys, community committees and price estimates, the Charlevoix school board has decided to ask taxpayers to pay for a new high school, turn the present high school into a middle school and add onto the elementary school.

The board concurred that this plan is "what's best for students."

Preliminary price estimates from architects and engineers tag the project at about $22 million, which includes land purchase and construction.

However, the board has a shopping list of options that can be cut if it follows through with a public request to get the proposal below $20 million. Interest from investing the bonds and sale of the middle school site are also expected to decrease final expenses.

Other options considered by the board at Monday's meeting include building a new middle school only, building a new middle school with renovations to the other buildings, or presenting the auditorium or elementary school improvements as a separate proposal.

There will be one proposal. And the board is still looking toward a September election. It passed a resolution authorizing Beta Design Group to present an election request to the Michigan Department of Treasury.

Pete Gorkiewicz never has been afraid to dream. He never thought of the possibility of failure when he decided to build his own boat with his father, Bob Gorkiewicz.

Boy paddles channels in Typhoon

By Janenne Irene Froats
Courier editor

Pete Gorkiewicz is planning a Huck Finn summer.

The 11-year-old will paddle Typhoon through Round Lake's channels on his boyhood adventures.

"I like being outside in the wild," the Charlevoix boy said.

Typhoon is the boat Pete and his father, Bob Gorkiewicz, built from scratch. Its blue, hardwood bottom and gray, nylon canopy recently drifted past the Acacia.

"It was kind of intimidating," Pete said, his eyes widening at the memory of his four-foot wide craft next to the buoy tender.

Pete, however, was never intimidated about building his boat. He got the "wild idea" from the American Boy's Hand Book. Within those pages, he found patterns for boats.

He took the dream to his father.

"Dad didn't take me seriously at first," Pete said.

Upon second request, the duo decided to act.

Pete combined the best of two plans in the hand book. Father and son sketched the flat-bottom boat. They made a shopping list of materials and set out to spend.

Then came the sawing, drilling, screwing, piecing together — and the patience. The process took after-school commitment for three long weeks.

The hardest part of the project wasn't using the power saws. It was the process. There were times, Pete said, that he wanted to blow up and scream because the boat wasn't finished.

"We stuck with it day after day,"he said.

Final touches involved choosing colors to paint the boards, making an anchor by filling a two-liter pop bottle with sand, bowing the nylon across the front of the 10-foot-long boat for occasional ducking from the sun and installing the rows.

Pete chose to name his summertime companion Typhoon. His sister painted the lettering on the canopy, just above the full cheeks of the "storm spirit" about to blow up a mean breeze.

"I don't want him to work while I'm out," Pete said. "I picture swimming and fishing off this."

The boat is equipped with removable seats so Pete can lay on a slightly wet bottom and catch rays while drifting as far as his pop-bottle tether will permit. A milk crate to keep his lunch — maybe even milk and cookies — dry sits in the canopy's shade.

Pete's reward for all the planning and building came Memorial Day when he launched Typhoon on Round Lake. He rowed, and rowed and rowed.

"I got home and I collapsed," he said.

Typhoon safely carried Pete home. The boards swelled as expected and few leaks found. Half a plastic milk jug is on hand for necessary bailing.

With exploring, fishing and swimming on his mind, Pete planned his vessel's Christening. He dented a coke bottle containing milk.

Shattering a champagne bottle, Pete said, wasn't appropriate for a kid.

Beaver Islander hangs with world leaders

By Janenne Irene Froats
Courier editor

Bill McDonough isn't any more Irish today than he was last week.

But he's more in touch with his birthright than ever.

McDonough met Ireland's president, Mary Robinson, Thursday.

"It adds another little piece of pride to my heritage," he said, just before boarding the Beaver Islander for home Friday. "'Where it goes from here, God only knows."

McDonough

McDonough's experience will go into the memories of his family and friends — and congressman Bart Stupak, who invited him to Arlington, Virg., for the welcoming ceremony.

He stood amid elected officials and military generals, heard the bang of a 21-gun (cannon) salute and watched smoke billow from their barrels. National anthems of America and McDonough's homeland rang through the morning air.

In addition to meeting "her excellency," McDonough shook the hands of President Bill Clinton and first lady, Hillary Rodham-Clinton.

"I shook the hands of the presidents of the two greatest nation's on earth," he said proudly.

Although McDonough was invited to attend the ceremony for

McDonough surprises Ireland's president with Galac greeting

Robinson's arrival, their introduction was impromptu. As the diplomats passed, he assertively and respectfully offered her an Irish greeting: "Dia Duit (pronounced Geeah Dute.)"

"She was visibly surprised," he said. "She had the warmest smile when she returned it."

McDonough's Irish isn't fluent enough to understand the president's response. He mailed her a letter asking for it's meaning.

Before leaving the fifth-generation Beaver Islander, Robinson carried a tape of McDonough's father's Irish tunes and a mug from America's Emerald Aisle.

McDonough's family moved from one island to the other in the mid-1850s, about the time of the potato famine. Since then, the family has lived on their "little Ireland."

As the grocery store owner boarded his boat home, a program of the event enfolded miniature American and Irish flags — red white and blue, and green, white and orange.

Like the place of the flags, McDonough is pleased that the United States is involved in negotiations that hope to end generations of fighting in Ireland.

The fighting is more than news reports to McDonough. He's visited his homeland five times, and receives reports from friends on the actual progress that's being made.

McDonough was told by a friend in Donegal that for the first time in his life, he feels a burden lifted through efforts to find a resolve between the two factions. Tanks, armed soldiers and barricades are disappearing. There is a new freedom to travel between north and south sections of the island.

McDonough's Charlevoix County home is 3,340 miles from Ireland. But the hope for ending the conflict is close to his heart.

And although his 25-hour trip to Arlington has ended, stories of the adventure have just begun.

Bill McDonough takes pictures as president Bill Clinton introduces Ireland's president, Mary Robinson, to nation delegates Thursday in Arlington. He was a guest at the welcoming ceremony, which is part of America's efforts to end fighting in McDonough's homeland.

School board sees K-12 benefits in decision

said the high school is well suited for a middle school, and the building will last longer with the younger grades occupying it.

When discussing the proposals, the board determined that asking for a new middle school was the safest millage proposal, according to the recent public survey that was conducted by an outside firm.

The question was whether the high school proposal would pass, not whether it was the best investment for the district.

"The kids that we got here deserve better," said Dale Boss, during public comment. He encouraged the board to decided on one package and work on selling it.

"You've got to have a little faith," he said. "And you've got to agree."

When the roll-call vote was taken, two board members — Allen Telgenhof and Ardith Weiland — said no. They each expressed apprehension that the proposal would pass. But they did say yes to a resolution that declares unified support of the proposal being sought.

Reasons for deciding on asking for a new high school included wanting the new auditorium at the high school and gaining more square footage for the investment.

According to John Stevenson, vice president of Christman Construction Services, the proposal the board adopted is $712,000 more than building a new middle school and renovating the other two buildings.

The high school could be 124,450-square feet, have two main entrances and two academic wings. The middle was planned to be 83,338-square feet.

Board member Sulane Hamilton said it makes sense to elevate the high school students to a new school, and the middle school students to the high school. And the auditorium would be located at the high school where, she said, it needs to be to provide daily use for those students.

Middle school principal, Dennis VanGuilder, said he would love to have a new middle school. But he supported moving his students into a renovated high school, saying that he would gain the building and parking space he needs.

Specifics of the school board's proposal:

— A new high school at a new location. Teacher training rooms, an auxiliary gym and large group instruction auditorium are options worth $3.7 million that can either be include or left off the project.

— Renovations to update the high school and make it a middle school could total close to $3 million. However, options of up to $702,000, including replacing the roof for $220,000 are listed in addition to the $2.2 million price tag.

— The auditorium included in the estimated $22 million total on the proposal will cost $3.2 million and will seat 600.

— Each school would need electrical updating for computer and science labs.

Alano club celebrates long-standing open door

By Jan Korthase
Courier special writer

Friends of Bill W. know what awaits them at 104 Mason St. in Charlevoix.

For 10 years, Bill's friends have had a place to hang a coffee cup and bend the ear of Alano Club manager Ed Heise.

Bill W. is the founder of Alcoholics Anonymous. Although not affiliated with AA or other 12-step programs, the Alano Club is a haven for the 12-step members needing a non-threatening environment in which to socialize.

Heise, the former owner of the building, sold it a decade ago with the stipulation that an Alano Club be formed. The anonymous founder asked Heise to stay on a couple of weeks and keep the coffee on and the door open. That two weeks has lasted 10 years. Heise continues to man his post six days a week at a small wooden desk inside the door, the club's hotline near his fingertips.

He describes the phone as one of the most important tools of the club, putting users and their families in touch with the programs that can lead to recovery.

"I'm alcoholic. I need to be here," Heise explains.

"You're never cured of alcoholism, you just put it in remission." Alcohol-free for 32 years, Heise said he hasn't been tempted to drink for years.

"I like sobriety," he explains. "It hasn't been all perfect, but it's a damn sight better than the last 25 years."

On the wall of the "First Step Room," the lobby of the Alano Club, is a picture of two recovering alcoholics trying to sell the idea of recovery to a practicing alcoholic. Heise says the picture symbolizes the beginning of the process every alcoholic must go through to reach the remission stage.

People think AA meetings are very mysterious, said Bud K. The common misconception is of an alcoholic in the gutter with a brown bag grasped in his hand. People see someone stumbling out of a bar and think nothing of it, but they won't set foot inside the Alano Club for fear of being seen an alcoholic.

Rich B. has been coming to the Alano Club for seven years. He describes it as a safe haven where recovering alcoholics find hot coffee and fellowship with others who have been "hit in the head with the same club."

"Ed's a link to recovery," says Scott K. Alcoholism is a disease, yet people view it as moral or sin-based. Alcoholics come from all walks of life, both genders and all ages, he said.

Ten percent of the drinking population would be considered alcoholic, according to Scott K. The 12-step programs are the most effective known treatment.

Alcoholism still has some stigma associated with it. Heise and other Alano Club members are hoping an open house planned for June 25-29 will bring in community members and broaden their understanding of the recovery process. Although AA and Al-Anon meetings are closed, the club is always open to anyone in the community. But the open house is a special effort to increase awareness. Open meetings will be scheduled throughout the week where recovering alcoholics will explain what shoes they've worn on the path to the Alano Club.

"The AA program has given me a whole new life," Heise said. "The biggest thing I got out of AA - besides sobriety - is I have a certain amount of serenity in my life that wasn't there previously.

"We never give up on anybody," Heise said. Some people start the program then go out to test the waters. But they'll be back, he said. "Once you taste recovery, it spoils drinking for you."

It's often Ed Heise on the line when you call the Alano Club. He also recieves calls for AAA. "We're even thinking about getting a wrecker and making a little money," he said with a laugh.

Biggest win ever at Rotary 50/50

Attending Rotary has been the talk of the town. After 52 weeks running, the 50/50 jackpot was finally won Thursday.

There was excitement in the air as the last card of a deck was drawn to determine the winner of a pot worth $599. This is the first time the drawing has increased in value for a year.

Each week, club members buy tickets to determine who will attempt to draw the two of hearts. Thursday, it was the only card left as Gordon Van Wieren reached for the draw.

Van Wieren is using his winnings to sponsor his wife, Susan, to become a Paul Harris Fellow. Rotary members become fellows through a $1,000 donation to the club. Actually, the win cost Van Wieren the extra $401 it will cost to complete the donation.

The money raised through the other half of the 50/50 drawing is going toward Rotary's Foot In the Door Scholarship for area students to attend North Central Michigan College.

Charter schools just add educational options

EDITORIAL

Education is changing.

Public schools are diversifying.

For the first time, traditional K-12 systems are having to consider tuition-free competition — charter schools.

While Charlevoix students and teachers adjust to summer vacation, a new board of directors for a local charter school was forming.

Friday, 7th Probate Court Judge, Frederick Mulhauser, held a brief ceremony to swear in Northwest Academy's newly elected board of directors.

The board is leading efforts to operate a science- and technology-based middle and high school, the first in the area. Boyne City and Petoskey charter schools emphasize the arts.

Competition. Supply and demand. They have been considered the basis of a thriving business environment since the beginning of our country. It has provided consumers with options. They can shop for quality and the best investment for their hard-earned money.

In sports, competition brings out the best effort of the athlete. As it moves into northern Michigan schools, it should also bring out the best efforts of instructors and students.

Allowing families to chose where their students attend school — and not just those who can afford the tuition of a private school — will force educators at all the schools to continue to strive for the best teaching techniques and how to involve students.

Students who decide where they want to attend classes are more apt to apply themselves. Of course, this won't effect every student's attitude. But hopefully, it will influence those who live in homes where discussions explore available options.

Not all students learn the same ways or at the same pace.

Satellite schools that offer a particular focus can only benefit the students who excel in those areas. More time can be spent on that particular subject or area.

The evolving system parallels that of trade schools, community colleges and universities. Between the different options, students can find a school to meet their educational and social needs.

Going to a charter school can be considered like moving to the small town of education. The larger schools looking more like the universities.

There are benefits to each place of learning. And their effectiveness depends on the needs of the student.

Some children will respond better to the smaller environment. Some will thrive at the larger school where sports and after-school clubs abound.

The choice frightens some public school officials. But change is often scary at first.

Some traditional K-12 schools have had a difficult time adapting to the new concept because their dwindling budgets reflect the loss of students. Each student's state funding goes to whichever school they attend.

K-12 schools which once housed most of the students within their districts faced an unexpected loss of revenue.

Like in business, however, if a competing business moves into town, you adapt and find a consumer niche. Schools are having to do the same.

Rest assured, there are niches to be carved.

Most importantly, students will have a better chance of finding their niche before they find themselves wandering aimlessly around a school that is costing them thousands of dollars a year.

Teen center provides fun hangout

Dear teens:

Now that summer vacation is here, if you find yourself saying there is nothing to do, remember the Teen Center is open every weekday afternoon and for Friday night dances.

Right now at the Teen Center there are many activities that we can participate in. From pool tables to computers, there are things to do all week long. Every Friday during the summer (Saturday during the school year) there is a dance from 7-10 p.m. Every weekday you can come in between 2:30-5:30 p.m. and play some air hockey, ping pong or play someone in a game of chess.

During the dances, we can dance in the dance room which has a disco ball, strobe light and many other accessories, or play with the Nintendo. Even though there may be a lot going on, we can just relax and watch a movie or read a book on the furniture in the lounge area. We can play basketball in the back room on rainy days or in the parking lot on nice days, and even get some dinner or just a snack at the concession counter.

The Teen Center is open for teens age 11 to 18 from any town. The facility we use is run by some grant money, but mostly public donations. I'm proud that I live in a town that has one of the only teen centers in this area. Thank you to all the people who have kept this going.

Student program helps tourism survey

Editor:

We wish to thank the more than 600 students who participanted in the Student Survey for Tourism and Economic Development. That is an excellent example of what is right with our schools today. Thanks, too, to their teachers and administrators.

The student survey was distributed in each public school in Alba, Boyne City, Charlevoix and East Jordan, and St. Mary's classes in Charlevoix. Chris Brilinski, of Boyne City High School, echoes other educators' comments with, "Teachers view this as another example of how to bring their students into the Community Decision Making Process."

The purpose of the survey is to build a data-base of our unique local assets that we all see as making our part of the world so attractive. We discover: 1. What are our natural assets; 2. What are our man made assets; 3. What our future needs and concerns might and/or should be. That basic inventory of respondents will be available to officials to help make judgments about our future tourism and economics policies. The answers may also lead to openings for entrepreneurs.

Principals in Charlevoix who organized the surveys were: Gary Grundman in the high school, Dennis VanGuilder in the middle school, Richard Swenor in the elementary school and superintendent sister Margaret at St. Mary's. Other superintendents are: Ron Moulton in Elmira, Roberta Jackson in Charlevoix and Chip Hansen in East Jordan.

The survey was a working tool at the Second Annual Confab for Tourism and Economic Development. It is still available to the general public.

We thank each student and each school official for their role in making the survey a useful, ongoing, measurable planning tool.

Sincerely,
The Student Entrepreneur

The Charlevoix network is alive and well!

Picture yourself in Washington, DC, at the Arlington National Cemetery. It's a beautiful spring day and all the trees and flowers are in bloom. The entire eighth-grade class of the Charlevoix Middle School is assembled here. Well, almost. Out of 114 youngsters, 106 were able to take advantage of the annual trip.

Chris Meredith and Jenny Wojan have been chosen to lay a wreath on the tomb of the unknown soldier. A marine officer has given the two youngsters detailed instructions in the proper way to walk and present the wreath, and the rest of the class has been instructed on the proper etiquette during the patriotic ceremony. The first female officer ever appointed for this duty is on guard for the two o'clock presentation.

Leading the group on this fifth annual trip is middle school principal, Dennis VanGuilder. He is standing on the steps in view of the Potomac River, wearing a white shirt with an emblem on the pocket. The Raider emblem says "Charlevoix Middle School." He suddenly feels a tug on his shirt from a gentleman wearing glasses.

"So where are you from?" Van Guilder is asked.

VanGuilder points to his shirt and says, "I'm from Charlevoix."

To which the stranger replies, "That's my hometown! I'm Jim Bowman. I taught school in Charlevoix years ago and was invited to give the commencement address at the high school graduation a few years ago. I'm now athletic director at the United States Air Force Academy in Colorado, and am here today with my cadets. The football team received an award and we've been to the White House and met the president."

VanGuilder says, "The Charlevoix eighth-grade students

Change can bring more beauty

Editor:

I have thought for some time to answer critics who deplore the loss of so many landmarks in the area of Charlevoix. I have seen hundreds disappear in my lifetime (I am 92) and most have been replaced by panoramic views or beautiful architectural structures. But they have heen preserved in photos or articles now resting in our museum.

Look around you, take a slow walk or drive around the city, see the stately mansions, the cute cottages, the beautiful condominiums, our well kept beaches, beautiful well kept lawns, tennis courts and golf courses. I commend the city administrators for their far reaching views of the future. I also commend Mrs. Douglas of the Chicago Club, who imported two swans from England that were the progenerators of the hundreds of swans that fill our small lakes, rivers and streams.

Now look back to the past, when Round Lake was lined with two fish packing houses, fish offals decaying in open barrels, the odor offensive and the open sewers emptying into Round Lake, breeding typhoid fever that I caught, but was cured by Dr. Armstrong. My father's boatyard that existed for 50 years on the shore of Round Lake and not a thing of beauty, now replaced by a beautiful condominium called "The LaHarve." It was in those days that Dr. Frank Wilkenson coined the phrase "Charlevoix-The-Beautiful" but he foresaw the future, not as it then existed.

I deplore the loss of two landmarks that their projects failed from lack of funding: "Boys City" that was located where "Pine Point" now exits. Some of the cottages rest on foundations erected by the boys. Judge Brown of Chicago brought 200 boys from the slums of Chicago and established a city of boys administered by the boys themselves, with a mayor, councilmen and police force. (This was a decade prior to the establishment of "Boys Town" by Father Flanigan. The Boys City Band was an annual event in our Fourth of July parades. There was little crime in those days. It could have competed with Boys Town in its efforts to educate the youth of America.

The other project that failed was the "Castle Farms" youth oriented educational institution located on the old Albert Loeb estate that I witnessed the construction of in the early '20s. On the old Paddock farm Bill paddock and I traveled by rowboat weekly to view the construction. It was a loss to Charlevoix.

From a person who has seen Halley's Comet twice and weathered two world wars and believes in the future of Charlevoix-The-Beautiful.

Surplus county furniture coming back for auction

By Janenne Irene Froats
Courier editor

Used furniture left the courthouse without official permission.

And one Charlevoix County Commissioner is taking the blame.

"It was a misunderstanding on my part alone," said commissioner, Richard Gillespie, of Beaver Island. "None of us are above mistakes. And I'm willing to correct it by any means required.

"I probably should have asked for more information."

At a full board meeting Wednesday, commissioners voted to have the surplus returned for public auction. There had been $1,265 collected from sale of items, mostly to county employees, said county clerk, Jane Brannon.

Money is being refunded.

Commissioner James Behling said he thinks the sale was illegal. He wants the surplus to be distributed in a positive way.

Mostly, air conditioners were sold for between $50 and $100, said county treasurer, Joan Balch. Remodeling of the courthouse included center air and the wall units are no longer needed.

The Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department was given five air conditioners, and it will keep those.

Gillespie bought a map cabinet — for almost twice what the county paid for it years ago. Commission chair, Phil Johnson, bought three chairs.

Traditionally, old furniture has been passed to whomever needs it. After that, it's taken to a storage room in the county building until it is either sold or thrown out. Gillespie said the confusion has come because there has never been this much excess furniture.

County employees will still have a chance to bid on the items. But so will the general public.

An update on whether all the items have been returned will be given at the next commission meeting later this month.

County director job still open

The Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners has decided to relax its qualifications for an administrator. Three candidates have turned the job down before being hired.

The board is starting over.

Commissioners James Behling, Carl Price and Phil Johnson are reviewing applications to determine if any of the remaining candidates should be considered for the position under the new mindset.

Commissioner Don Smith said that the board's qualifications and what it's offering to pay do not match.

"You're asking too much for what we wanted," he said, adding that the desirable candidates have been overqualified.

A report on how to proceed to fill the position will be given at the board's next meeting.

Members of the Board of Directors for Northwest Academy charter school in Charlevoix were sworn into office Friday by Probate Court Judge Frederick Mulhauser. Being sworn in are: (from left) Jackie Hice, treasurer; James Malewitz, secretary; Gerry Chase, president; Mark Muniak, vice president; and Patty Sitzema. Not shown is board director Dr. James Stewart who will be sworn in by Judge Mulhauser at a later date.

Mulhauser was chosen to perform the swearing in as an official having the most to do with children in the community.

Republicans meet Thursday

Charlevoix County Republicans will meet at 7 p.m., Thursday, June 20, in the Charlevoix County Building. They will discuss the July 7 picnic at Whiting Park and other matters.

BEACONS OF BLESSINGS

by The Rev. Bruce Hamilton
Community Church of God

I have come to appreciate a very special fellowship of people that I met via computer. The group is known as The Rural and Small Church Forum or RASCals (for short) on the Ecunet religious system. We RASCals come from all parts of the United States and Canada, and we talk about everything, pray about all kinds of things, and share ideas in the unique field of ministering to small town America.

A dear brother in Christ was cleaning out his desk (the sign of a truly busy person may just be how excavation has to be done to get to the bottom of things) and he ran across something that I think will make you smile. Have you ever thought about the sermons your pastor preaches? Consider some of these ...

The Cotton Candy Sermon: "Very sweet and full of air, When bitten into nothing there."

The Stuffed Olive Sermon: "Pleasantly fashioned, pleasingly tart, Stuffed with intellect, but no heart."

The Jello Fruit Salad Sermon: "Shaking, prancing, quivering, preaching, Lots of action, but low-calorie teaching."

The Poached Egg Sermon: "Soft, safe, sentimental food, Soothes every mind, calms every mood."

The Leftover Turkey Sermon: "Meat they suspect you've served them before, But disguised just enough for one Sunday more."

The Hot Tamale Sermon: "Full of fire, not hard-sell, Pious hate, threatening hell."

The Strawberry and Whipped Cream Sermon: "Summer surprise, memorably bright, Light in weight, but what a delight."

The Roast Beef and Potatoes Sermon: "Familiar fare, but always good, The Gospel preached in words understood."

As one who has been honored to preach the Lord's word for 23 years, I've seen them all and engaged in more than a few over the years. The No. 1 thing for you to remember is that each and every time your minister ascends the sacred desk, whatever they offer is supposed to have been steeped in prayer and love to encourage you in your faith in every way possible.

God's call on your pastor's heart is to equip you to share your faith in every situation you face. Sometimes it may take cotton candy to get the point across. Sometimes there's no substitute for roast beef and potatoes. Whatever the fare, it is always offered with love and with your best at heart. Encourage your pastor in their preaching endeavors this week.

Charlevoixians meet

are here today to lay the wreath on the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier. There's Dale Meredith, one of the fathers, taking a video for us. Excuse me, but the ceremony is about to start."

After the brief and very moving ceremony (for which Chris and Jenny performed perfectly), Bowman turns to VanGuilder, who is wiping tears from his eyes, and says, "This is one of the greatest days of my life! Here I've been to the White House to meet the President of the United States, my football team has been recognized for our outstanding season, and then we visit the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier to pay our respects, and I see my hometown middle school principal and the eighth-grade class perform the wreath laying ceremony." Bowman is emotionally overcome and sobbing with heartfelt sentiment. The two men, both deeply moved, throw their arms around each other.

Then Bowman takes a deep breath and says proudly, "I want you to meet our head coach and tell the cadets about the kids from my home town!"

But that's not all.

After VanGuilder arrived home, his wife, Dianne, greeted him with, "I know what you are going to tell me!"

How did she know already? It seems Jim Bowman called his former Charlevoix teacher, Max Novak, on the telephone to share the thrill of the day. Then Max, in turn, immediately called Dianne to inform her about the unexpected meeting in Washington, DC.

Shortly thereafter, VanGuilder spoke to the graduating class and repeated the coincidental meeting for the benefit of parents and guests who were present at graduation. He was more than pleased to remind the students how proud Charlevoixans are of their hometown and told the youngsters, "It's a pride you will always carry with you for your entire life."

Weeds plague petunias

"Killer weeds" growing among the thousands of petunias along Charlevoix's main street are being routed by quick response teams in an effort to stave off a repetition of last summer's near disaster.

Weeds flourishing in last year's extremely hot, dry weather almost overwhelmed the petunias planted earlier by Keep Charlevoix Beautiful volunteers.

The organization was forced to spend thousands of dollars to recruit weeders to combat the weed explosion and save the flowers.

And this year's weedless soil is still producing the pesky petunia stranglers.

A partial solution to this year's weed control is being provided by using Charlevoix County jail inmates for weeding.

"It would help if property owners who have weeded in past summers continue to weed," said Keep Charlevoix Beautiful president, Bruce MacArthur. Project originator, Dale Boss, said it would also help if property owners would mow completely to the edge of the petunia beds.

Charlevoix County Jail inmates help keep Charlevoix out of the weeds. Weed-free soil isn't proving powerful enough to fight back the petunias' enemy.

Timing, cooperation critical for 9-1-1 changes

By Jan Korthase
Courier special writer

All residents of Charlevoix will be able to dial 9-1-1 Monday, June 24.

However, the 350 addresses that are changing to make the response system more efficient will continue to be problematic until phone numbers, street signs and the emergency response database are all changed, according to City Police Chief Dennis Halverson.

"We're trying to bring about 10 things together at once and have it all work out," Halverson said. "We're on a timeline that's going to require a lot of cooperation between residents, utility services and the city. Timing is import."

Halverson said the phone number changes and physically changing house numbers are priorities for the affected residents on Old Norwood Road, Central, Sheridan and Robinson streets. Lincoln Street will not be affected as previously reported. The phone company data will backfeed to the 9-1-1 database. But, if an emergency occurs and house numbers haven't been changed, valuable seconds or minutes could be lost trying to identify the right house. City officials are making new signs which will go up soon after residents have received the letter indicating their address has changed.

City officials have been working with MichCon and with the city data to make the changes for residents. Because these services are address based, it has worked out. The phone company, however, is phone number based. Names and phone numbers are required in addition to street number changes, Halverson explained.

Because owners and occupants of homes are often different, pulling the information together for residents would be a long process. The city determined, Halverson said, to make the gas and city service changes and leave the phone number changes to residents.

Everything required of residents will be outlined in a letter Halverson hopes to have in the mail this week. This letter will replace the postcard which was originally planned. The longer format is needed to address statements requested by MichCon and emphasize the importance of acting quickly on changing the phone company database and house numbers.

Residents will also be responsible for notifying the cable company, Secretary of State, and companies they do business with personally, Halverson said.

Officials at the Petoskey dispatch center know these changes can't be implemented overnight, Halverson said. People are busy or out of town, some are summer residents.

"They're (9-1-1 officials) cooperating with us," Halverson said. "We're all going to go up together Monday. We're just going to be pecking away at these."

Emergency calls change

If you have an emergency Monday or later, you must call 9-1-1 to request police, ambulance or fire fighters.

City Police Chief Dennis Halverson said residents calling 547-3255 for police assistance, or 547-3266 for the fire department will receive a recording telling them to dial 9-1-1 for emergencies.

Administrative numbers for the departments also will change and the numbers you're used to dialing will be abandoned. The new administrative number for the police department will be 347-3258 and the number for the fire department will be 547-3279.

Firefighter hiring debated

Another study of the needs of the fire department is in Charlevoix's future.

City Councilman Robert Timms asked Monday if dispatching of fire departments through the CCE Central Dispatch will reduce the need for four full-time employees at the city fire hall. There currently is a vacancy in the department and Timms suggested a review would be prudent before a replacement is hired.

Timms said after the meeting that the responsibility of the on-duty fireman is to answer calls and set off the alarm. Volunteers then join in to fight the fire.

City Manager Mike Wiesner said filling the position is an administrative matter, not a decision of council. He indicated, however, the last study conducted by the city revealed less than $10,000 savings between having three and four full-time firefighters. The study also showed many negatives including difficulty in providing 24-hour service with only three employees.

Mayor Josh Barnes added that the question considered previously

Home schooler gets summer scholarship

Amy Kujawski, 17, of Charlevoix, will depart in July to live with a volunteer host family and attend school in Germany for one year. Kujawski is a junior home school student with Clonlara Home Based Education of Ann Arbor. She is the daughter of Paul and Debbie Gelderblom.

A volunteer at the local hospital, Kujawski has worked in food services and with children, as a waitress, cook and caterer, and has been a part-time nanny.

After graduation, Kujawski wants to become a secondary education teacher overseas, ideally in a school for missionary children.

Kujawski is a recipient of the Congress-Bundestag Youth Exchange Program scholarship.

She was selected from approximately 1,150 applicants nationwide.

Council revisits who should hire

was a change from a full-time department to a volunteer department, rather than a question of three versus four staff members.

Councilman Bruce Reid did not want to open the discussion again.

"We hashed, hashed and rehashed this for years and I haven't seen anything that's changed," Reid said.

Councilman John Cross III agreed council should let staff fill the vacancy but indicated his preference for a local person to be hired. Weisner said given equal qualifications between two candidates, a local person would be selected.

Barnes closed the discussion asking staff to provide a study of the issue considering the 9-1-1 dispatch issue. He said the study was not a priority until major city projects - such as Bridge Park - in progress are completed.

Another issue claiming the attention of Council Monday was the loading station at the Total Station north of town. The loading station was incorrectly installed last fall - using a plan denied by the planning and zoning board instead of an approved alternate plan.

Barnes said he would like to make sure the mistakes are corrected, but council has no authority to intervene until the property owner refuses to take action on the directives of the zoning board.

In other action Monday:

Great Lakes Title Company received authorization to expand its building, with the stipulation that three parking spaces would be leased from the neighboring American Legion hall.

Andy Poineau received approval for a site-plan amendment, allowing an elevated roof section on a boat house on Round Lake for use as an observation room.

A public hearing during the July 1 city council meeting is scheduled to hear comments regarding the requested abandonment of an alley between 204 and 206 Alice St. by David and Brenda Gudritz.

Historic festival in Petoskey

The Little Traverse Historical Society will once again host their festival on the waterfront Saturday, June 22, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Activities will include "Taste of the North," children's games, a midway bazaar, food booths and walking tours.

The Epsilon Jazz Quartet will make a special appearance. Money raised from the festival is the museum's primary source of income, and is used to preserve the artifacts the museum displays. For more information on the festival, you may contact the museum at 347-2620.

Local marine center undergoes name change

All things nautical await customers of The Marine Center, located in Charlevoix's Oleson Plaza.

If the store looks and feels a little familiar, don't be concerned. John and Lisa McDonald originally started the business last year under the name Up Country, Inc., and were located near Foster's Boat Works. John McDonald said the business offers the same services and supplies but it's more convenient for many customers and the name immediately identifies the store's purpose.

Racks, shelves and pegboard walls bear clothing, lines, hardware, charts, flags and other equipment in demand by avid boaters.

Opening the marine outfitter is something McDonald has always wanted to do, he said.

When he and Lisa, a Charlevoix native, moved back to the area he started working for another outfitter. Soon, the McDonalds decided it was time to open their own shop.

"I just enjoy it. I enjoy the people and helping people solve their problems with their boats," McDonald explained.

The Marine Center serves walk-in traffic as well as customers who have bigger projects in mind.

"We can handle either one," McDonald said.

Equipment not in stock can be special ordered, and referrals for engine work and boat maintenance and cleaning are available.

McDonald said he'd like to spend some time sailing, but fortunately, or unfortunately, business has been too good to allow him to get away. With their combination of marine and retail experience, the McDonalds are able to fulfill the needs of every customer.

If it's not already on the shelf, rack or wall, the Marine Center will special order a product from one of their suppliers.

"We can get virtually anything," McDonald said. He also encourages boaters to come in to check out the Marine Center's rigging equipment, which McDonald anticipates will be a big factor in the store's success.

The Marine Center is open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Saturday, and 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Sunday. Those hours will expand on demand through the summer months, McDonald said.

Charlevoix hospital inspected

Every nook and cranny at Charlevoix Area Hospital was inspected last week by a nurse and a physician from the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Healthcare Organizations. Also, all hospital policies and procedures are reviewed and personnel interviews held. The hospital scored very high in preliminary reports. The official report will be received in about 90 days. The survey is done every three years. Hospitals that are not accredited cannot participate in the Medicare or Medicaid programs.

Tid bits for business

Prudential names new representative

Randy Handwerk has been named as a representative in Prudential's Greater Northern Michigan Agency, 2202 Mitchell Park, Petoskey.

Randy now serves clients in Petoskey, Harbor Springs, Charlevoix and surrounding communities.

Randy and his wife Mary, live in Petoskey. They have 3 children.

Secretary of State visits Charlevoix

Secretary of State, Candice Miller, visited Charlevoix's branch office Wednesday to meet with employees and customers.

"In just over a year, I have visited 152 of our 180 Secretary of State branch offices," Miller said. "Each visit gives me an additional perspective on the need to continually improve our customer service."

The Charlevoix office processes about 35,000 transactions each year.

"Just as importantly, these visits have given me the opportunity to meet staff and see just how challenging their jobs are day in and day out," Miller said.

Recent changes instituted by Miller to help employees with customer service include placement of fax and copy machines in branch offices, more staff hours for serving customers and the purchase of additional computer terminals.

Grandvue recognized for wellness program

Grandvue Medical Care Facility earned honors in the first annual Healthy Workplace Awards, given jointly by the Michigan Chamber of Commerce and the Governor's Council on Physical Fitness, Health and Sports.

Awards were announced June 7 by the Chamber of Commerce and the Governor's Council. Grandvue Medical Care Facility achieved a Gold award for its wellness program.

"These awards demonstrate that businesses care about the health of their employees," said Charles Kuntzleman, chairman of the Governor's Council. "Healthy employees benefit everyone. We applaud their efforts."

The different award levels (Platinum, Gold and Silver) are based on duration and comprehensiveness of the wellness program as well as the degree of employee participation.

The Healthy Workplace Awards honor businesses that begin wellness programs and have made long-term commitments to wellness activities. Applications were evaluated by a panel of fitness and workplace wellness experts on the basis of innovation, creativity and documented success.

Meghan Vogel, 12, drives past Alby Schaperkotter Friday while a foursome of Charlevoix girls practice hoops in preparation for Saturday's Gus Macker tournament in Gaylord. The players teamed up with Kelly Dreyer and Leslie Hoffman.

Charlevoix fields fixed

Improvements at the city ball fields are about a month behind schedule but the games go on.

City Recreation Director Ike Boss said spectators and players will have to walk in the dark for a while longer until the lights are up. In the "also not finished" category are bathrooms, paving of the parking area, the dugouts, sidewalks and many of the projects slated for improvements.

But it was rain, and not the construction, which delayed the first scheduled games Monday night. Teams still will be playing ball nightly on the fields while construction continues. Boss said games are scheduled for Sunday through Thursday, with Friday and Saturdays available for make-up games. Sundays are free as well on the kids' fields, Boss said.

The $600,000 project began the first of October 1995 and was slated for completion May 15. Many factors, including the length of the harsh winter, contributed to the delay, according to Boss.

For the second year, Pitcher Jenny Eveleigh (left) and first baseman Christi Kaczynski were named to the All Region Team by coaches. The recognitgion may lead to additional invitiations to play at exposure camps for colleges this summer.

School board splits bond issue

By Janenne Irene Froats
Courier editor

After days of crunching numbers with the architect, the Charlevoix school board decided to put two bond proposals before voters Sept. 23.

Originally, the board planned one $22 million proposal that included a new high school, renovations to make the current high school a middle school, upgrades to the elementary school and a new auditorium.

In an attempt to reduce the cost of the project, and make it saleable to taxpayers, the board voted Thursday to bring a $17.9 million proposal for school improvements and a $3.1 million option for a new auditorium.

To raise the money needed for the proposed improvements and new construction, millage requests will be for 3.49 mills for the schools and 0.61 mill for the auditorium. Both would collect for 20 years and one month.

To the taxpayer owning a home worth $100,000 on the market, a valuation of $50,000, they would pay about $205.45 more each year to the school district.

Before voting to separate the two bond issues, the board went through a shopping list of expense, deciding where to cut back. It was decided that the middle school would take some of its used furniture and computers to the new building, a savings of $263,000, and new windows wouldn't be installed there. However, while savings were being found in some areas, costs were added to complete asbestos abatement and replace the roof at the current high school.

The breakdown of costs within the main proposal is $14.8 million for a new high school, $2.4 million to renovate the high school into a middle school and $1.4 million to add onto and upgrade the elementary school. Included in the cost of the new high school is $1.5 million for the purchase and preparation of land.

The district was given direction by the board to look for a large enough piece of property to possibly be used for a second new school in the future, similar to what was done in Petoskey when the new middle school was built behind the high school.

Calculated into the costs of the projects before setting the millage rate presented to the Michigan Department of Treasury was the expected interest to be earned between the time the bonds were sold by the school and the money was spent. The interest could offset costs by $640,000 for the schools and $110,000 for the auditorium.

School budget passes at $9.9 million

By Janenne Irene Froats
Courier editor

The Charlevoix school board has approved a $9.9 million budget for the coming year, which begins Monday, July 1. This is up only slightly from the 1995-96 budget.

Local, state and federal taxes are expected to funnel $9,920,290 into the general fund. The bulk of the money — $5 million — comes from state provisions that are based on $6,638 be provided for each student. An additional $4.7 million is generated through local taxes.

The board expects to spend $9.85 million and save $847,064 by putting it into the fund balance. This would bring the schools emergency back-up account to $1.67 million by the fiscal year end, according to numbers presented by district business manager, Judy Boss.

In the coming year, Charlevoix expects to get a 2.4 percent increase on its per-student foundation grant through the state aid bill. However, superintendent, Roberta Jackson, expects the increase to be less by the time the check arrives.

"The advide we're getting is not to count on that," she said.

The projected revenue increase is $98 per year, per student. The school currently receives $6,638 per student, per year. While the foundation grant will increase, the number of students in the district is expected to decrease.

There were 1,420 students in Charlevoix classrooms during the 1995-96 school year. About 1,395 students are expected to attend this coming school year,

9-1-1 system finally up and working

Yes, dialing 9-1-1 works.

"It's been a busy place in the dispatch room," said CCE Central Dispatch Authority Director Gordon Neihardt.

CCE Central Dispatch Authority dispatched personnel to 113 complaints as of 2:15 p.m. Monday, according Neihardt. The center opened at 7 a.m.

Five dispatchers and support personnel from area fire, police and emergency medical teams staffed the dispatch office Monday and Tuesday.

Beginning today, the five dispatchers are handling all activity in the office.

Typical complaints were filed Monday, from car-deer accidents to missing persons reports. No major obstacles have been encountered, Neihardt said, although callers using cellular phones have had some challenges describing their locations to dispatchers.

Neihardt said not many people have called to test the line - and they shouldn't call unless there is an actual emergency.

"We've done a lot of testing ... and we know that it works," Neihardt said. Callers hanging up on the dispatchers will get a call back, Neihardt said.

As a matter of policy, dispatchers must clarify that there is no emergency at the address from which a call was placed.

Reigning Venetian queen readies for Cherry Queen contest

By Jan Korthase
Courier special writer

Erin McNamara-Wright was shocked June 15 when her name was called as a finalist for Cherry Queen.

"I was shocked - I couldn't believe it. I didn't think I had a chance," said the reigning Venetian Queen.

After three days of interviews, appearances and activities, five of the 18 candidates for Cherry Queen made the final cut. McNamara-Wright's name was the last called, and the experience left her with mixed feelings.

"In the end it doesn't matter (what order names were called in) but I felt bad because I took the last spot," she said. "I took the last opportunity.

"I filled the last chance for the other 14 girls standing there with me."

On the other hand, being called last made it all the more exciting, McNamara-Wright said. "It took me a long time to get over the high."

Now that she's gotten used to the idea of competing for the new title, McNamara-Wright is focusing on putting her best foot forward in the week preceding the Cherry Festival. Unlike the preliminary competition, the judging during festival week is all secret. Candidates do not know from event to event when or who is being judged.

"I'm not concerned," said a poised McNamara-Wright of the secret judging. "I'm just planning on having a good time."

McNamara-Wright, who is sponsored by the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce, said not being intimidated in front of people nor by being in the public eye will benefit

Chicago Artist moves to the north

Marion Shea-Light, a noted Chicago watercolorist, now lives and paints in the Village of Norwood in Charlevoix County. A mother and former nurse, her studio, a small barn next to her house, reminds her of the Keweenaw area, her childhood home. In September of 1995 she became Norwood's newest working artist, specializing in watercolors of both local and exotic flowers and animals.

Some of Shea-Light's paintings are botanical in that the relative size of the parts of the plant is precisely measured. While others are more lyrical. All paintings represent true color and detail.

Recently, Shea-Light's work was accepted into the Northwest Michigan regional exhibit, held annually at the Dennos Museum in Traverse City. This exhibit will run throughout the summer. Also, her artwork has been accepted into the annual Portside Art Fair, which is a juried show and sale, held on Elm Pointe in East Jordan.

Shea-Light's Studio can be visited on July 17, as part of the Jordan River Arts Council's second annual tour of area studios.

Currently, her work can be purchased at the Handiworks Gallery in Alden.

Steve Gurd of Aarow Electric, Petoskey, snips down the old ceiling grid in the Commissioners' Room of the Charlevoix County Building. The renovation adds 11,000 square feet to the county building court system and another 4,500 square feet of additional space for offices, mechanical rooms, storage and employee break rooms. Completion of the project is expected to be mid-July.

her in the quest for title of Cherry Queen. The downside to winning the national title is that she'll have to pass the Venetian crown to 1995 first-runner up Amy Phillips before the 1996 Venetian Queen is crowned.

"It's hard to believe it's been a year. But at the same time it's time to turn it (the reign) over.

"I've had a great time representing Charlevoix. I'm not quite ready to give up the fun and excitement," said the 20-year-old Charlevoix native. The scholarship competitions will be the springboard to greater opportunity to represent Charlevoix around the country.

"This is one of the greatest opportunities I have to represent my hometown and show it to others," she said.

While McNamara-Wright is planning to enjoy the experience, no matter what the outcome, she still would like to capture the title and go on representing her home town. If she wins the national title in Traverse City, McNamara-Wright will take the next step and compete for Miss Michigan.

She's learned about a lot of towns and people throughout Michigan, having represented Charlevoix in parades from Lansing to St. Ignace through sun, sleet and snow. Her personal goal after completing her marketing degree at Hillsdale College is to travel and learn about other cultures and sharing the American culture with others. Paris, Italy, Slovakia, the Ivory Coast of Africa and the North Pole are destinations on her agenda.

The Venetian scholarship competition will stay close to her heart, no matter where life takes her, said McNamara-Wright. She is currently working with Diana Phillips to broaden the exposure of the Venetian Queen. Not everyone in Charlevoix knows or recognizes the queen, McNamara-Wright said, and they're working on changing that.

Charlevoix summers rejuvenate New York pianist between shows

By Jan Korthase
Courier special writer

She started pounding on the piano at her aunt and uncle's Ellsworth farm when she was three years old. This summer, New York singer and classical pianist Kathleen Landis will be cutting her first compact disc.

Landis, a long-time Charlevoix summer visitor and member of the Whitley and Veenstra families, finds herself continually drawn to the shores of Lake Michigan.

"I'm always drawn back to the lake when I need spiritual replenishment," Landis said. The soothing shores have given her the strength to return to New York for 15 years to meet the challenges of being a one-woman show.

"I just realized the other day, when I'm away from it (the lake) I'm longing to get back to the lake," she said.

Her annual pilgrimages take her to the Sleeping Bear Dunes where she has recorded the 20-year sculpting of "petrified" trees by the wind, and to the big lake for a night swim alone.

"It cuts you off with almost everything else," Landis said, the stars, the planets, the water. "It's like a baptism. It puts you really in tune with the big aspects so you can go back and survive the petty things."

Meeting challenges is nothing new for Landis. Her mother, Hilda Whitley, of Charlevoix, always taught her to take one more step. Landis recalls the thrill of making it to the next sandbar, and swimming to Fisherman's Island for the first time. She credits her mother and the tranquility of Lake Michigan with giving her the strength to face the aggression and negativity which come with some aspects of city life.

> "It (Lake Michigan) cuts you off with almost everything else," the stars, the planets, the water. "It's like a baptism. It puts you really in tune with the big aspects so you can go back and survive the petty things."
> — Kathleen Landis

Although she can't be in Charlevoix as often as she'd like, Landis and a partner have compromised by renovating an 1840s era methodist church in Staatsburg, NY, into a recording studio and performance center for the tiny community.

Trained as a classical pianist, Landis has spent 11 years performing at the Cafe Pierre in New York. Her mission is to bring romantic music to a generation of Baby Boomers who missed out on Gershwin, Porter, Arlen and Mercer. Her repertoire ranges from romantic ballads to the tango to classical dinner accompaniment.

She performs both as a one woman show, accompanying herself on piano, and with the Kathleen Landis Trio where big band arrangements have been re-arranged for three pieces.

When she's not performing at the Pierre, mapping out the recording of her Gershwin compact disc this summer, or traveling to her beloved Charlevoix, Landis finds time to teach 10 students a week in her New York apartment.

Landis specializes in teaching coordination of the fingers to her elderly pupils.

It's never too late to fulfill a dream of playing piano, Landis tells her students.

Her personal dream is to stay at the Pierre some of the time, hut also to free up her schedule to continue recording, to perform in Cabaret houses around New York, and to accept occasional invitations to Europe.

Landis will record her disc this summer and will return to Charlevoix for a visit near the end of August when the project is completed.

Quality schools training in Charlevoix

The Charlevoix teaching staff and administration attended a five day training June 17 through June 21. Support staff joined them June 21.

The training opened with a presentation on brain-compatible learning. The focus was how the brain processes and organizes information. This was followed by modeling techniques to identify curriculum concepts. This conceptual approach simplifies curriculum and organizes information for students. Teaching conceptually increases student learning.

Staff identified concepts in instructional areas from kindergarten through twelfth-grade. Staff used the concepts to organize curriculum by grade level and courses.

Quick, no-fault divorces should be delayed by law

EDITORIAL

Michigan lawmakers are looking at a bill that would increase the difficulty of getting a divorce.

Although laws will never end the breaking of marriage vows, it can set a standard that has long been ignored in our country.

Divorce is destructive.

As a nation — as human beings — we must take responsibility for persevering the consistency and safety found in most two-parent homes.

Before a young person is legally allowed behind the wheel of a vehicle, he/she must be taught the rules of the road, and the importance of safety. Why? Because reckless driving kills.

American law demands that people wait a certain number of days before applying for a permit and receiving a gun. Why? Because guns kill.

A divorce isn't often directly identified as the case of death. But it does slay a lifestyle, a union that began with a solemn vow and continued in love until a shroud of selfishness, unforgiveness and communication barriers moved in.

The devastation of divorce often festers, unseen and undetected until the former spouse realizes they're having a hard time committing to someone or a child is counseled through failing school grades or outburst of vindictive behavior.

"People have to face their commitments," says Michael Bowman, of the Capitol Resource Institute, a conservative family policy group in California, "It shouldn't be easier to destroy a family than to end a business partnership."

In some states, angry couples can file for divorce at a kiosk, print out the paper work and take it to the courthouse for finalizing.

At least 18 states are reviewing divorce guidelines. Most of the tentative changes involve slowing down no-fault dissolutions.

According to USA Weekend, Michigan's reform currently involves:

— Proving fault: When one spouse opposes the divorce, the other must prove a fault, such as adultery or mental abuse.

— Family therapy: Required for all couples with children in uncontested divorces, at the discretion of the court in contested cases.

— Planning ahead: Divorcing parents must establish a plan for their children's physical care and financial future.

— Counseling: Marriage licenses are available sooner for couples who attend an educational program.

People need to pause. Life in the 1990s is too full of the microwave mentality — instant gratification. Counseling should be required before marriage and divorce.

Changing the law will never end divorce. But it could give people the space they need to think about what is happening. When people get hurt, they often just want to end the pain instead of work through it.

Between 20-25 percent of divorces are attributed to easier, no-fault laws, according to David Blankenhorn, author of "Fatherless America."

What isn't realized that ending the marriage isn't ending the pain. Sometimes, especially for children, it's just the beginning.

Requiring a waiting period before final resolution of a divorce is granted could help disgruntled spouse(s) take a look at what they plan to leave behind.

Many marriages end because a spouse begins to think of the so-called greener pasture next door, or across town. Once out of the pressure caused by bitter bickering, a person can take time to review the cause — and the solutions — to the situation.

Some people will never stop blaming, pointing the finger and venting hatred on their spouse. Others, however, do.

Making divorces harder to get isn't necessarily going to make families better. But it is a way of telling a nation that marriages shouldn't be thrown away like a worn pair of shoes.

People's feelings are worth more than $39.95.

Letters to the Editor

Myriad of local issues addressed

Editor:

I have been a regular reader of the Courier for the past 20 years while working all over the USA on management consulting assignments. Almost every week something comes up that I would really like to write you about to state my opinion, but I always hold back and keep my peace. But, now I am writing as a couple of items have come up which I would like to speak about.

1. The need for changing house numbers so the 9-1-1 emergency system can start operating. I don't know where your area is getting the system from, but I have been in a large number of communities that have had the system, and I can tell you that some have had really mixed up streets and numbering systems and they did not have to do all of the re-numbering like what is being requested for Charlevoix.

Examples here in Tucson: We have streets that will go for a few blocks and then dead-end. Then the street will start again and go for a distance and stop again. We also have cases where a street may go north for several miles and then dead end at a cross street. If you take that cross street and go left for 1/2 mile then you will see the original street start again headed north off the cross street. We have streets that go west and their numbering system may be like 5420 W., and then do a right angles and change numbers to 6890 N.

We also have cases where a street may be named "First Avenue" and stretch south to north for 10 miles going through the city and into the county and then stop. About three miles further north and a mile west you will find another street with the same name, "First Avenue" which will meander mainly north for several miles. Our emergency crews don't seem to have any trouble with these conditions and 9-1-1 works just fine.

Metro Tucson stretches for 45 miles from the southeast to the extreme northwest, and there are several; police and fire departments that use the 9-1-1.

I think someone is trying to sell you a bill of goods in order to change your streets to the way that they prefer the system.

2. I have been watching the school building plan news where some want the citizens to tax themselves for three new buildings, or two, or maybe just one and remodel one or two? Wow! I pity the poor local tax payers. Why is it when when governmental forces have tax money to work with they want to build huge monuments. And, schools at all levels seem to be an area where they really want to go over board. Then I compare this to private schools where tuition may be higher and some have at the college level huge endowment funds to work with, but they never seem to build new buildings. Some examples are Yale, Harvard, Columbia, American U., Princeton and Stanford. I have attended and/or taught at management seminars at some of those schools and many if not most of the buildings were turn of the century in age, give or take a few years. I then have been at Michigan State, University of Michigan and Central Michigan and there always seems to be new construction under way, because they are using public funds.

The reputation of public schools all over the country has slipped considerably for the past 30 years. The more money we spend, the smaller the class sizes, the more we pay the teachers and the more the quality falls. I would like to see Charlevoix remodel, repair and if necessary add on to existing buildings and then figure out how they are going to improve the quality of education. Don't throw away the big dollars on new buildings. Let's go back to the olden days and make the kids wear uniforms; don't let them drive cars to school; add an extra class hour to each day; require a passing mark to move up to the next grade; make the teachers work a full day in their classes and do spend a little money to bring in modern computer equipment.

3. I am sad to say I have seen a gradual disappearance of the use of The Beautiful, in conjunction with Charlevoix in print. I have seen real estate ads and chamber of commerce brochures that no longer use it. It is unique and there should be a big push to use it again.

4. Looking at the Courier issue dated June 5, the newspaper is doing the same as big city papers all over the country have been doing for several years. There are 10 pictures in the issue where I can distinguish people and six of them features females, two feature white males and two have a mixture. Actually the white males did better than they have been doing all over the country as many times they are shut out. I don't know if people there realize it or not, but the news media seems to have a vendetta against white males and in the city newspapers and local city TV stations they always feature females and blacks. The white male has become the forgotten person. Please don't do it like everyone else is, as we may need these white males to help us in the next conflict that will come.

5. Last comment. In the beginning I didn't care for Edith Gilbert's articles, but over the years she has sort of grown on me and now I look forward every week to reading her column. She is doing great and interesting journalism.

Sincerely
Richard Donaldson

Evolution, eternal minds considered

Editor:

In the realm of science, materialism and evolution are accepted beliefs. Yet, the question remains, did thinking intelligent life evolve from non-thinking matter (chemicals); or was matter designed by thinking people?

Chemicals were designed with purposes in mind. If it was a random rock kingdom, the coincidental odds of many chemicals working together to create life by themselves as a team, if infinitesimal.

Perhaps conceive an elder human, with billions of years of memory and design experience, and many other elder humans of a somewhat lesser age of billions of years of accumulated memory and research and knowledge. With such great knowledge, they could design a world. To us young humans, the elder human and others would appear as God and angels. Designers from higher dimensions (Heaven), where people live forever, never die and reincarnate, and can amass billions of years of knowledge.

An evolution of an amoeba from chemical mistakes, to a monkey, to us? Or from our eternal minds, such a human design of evolution created before we entered this world.

We can design highly complex machines, supersonic jet planes, and a moon rocket. As we launched a moon rocket, mankind launched the creation of this new world with a big bang.

Respectfully,
Sue Saintmarie

BEACONS

OF BLESSINGS

by Rev. Bruce Hamilton
Charlevoix Community Church of God

Driving home from Indiana last weekend, my radio dial happened to find a National Public Radio affiliate. I was a little surprised to discover that their fare included the current "rave of the air waves," talk radio. The program was called "Car Talk" and as you might guess, people and their autos were the highlight.

When I first came upon the show, the hosts were talking to a teenage girl who was concerned about her boyfriend's habit of putting his car in neutral and coasting every chance he got. They told her to ditch the boyfriend because what he was doing was dangerous and even if it did work, the amount of gasoline he might manage to save in his lifetime would be about a quarter's worth.

The call that got through to me came from a fellow out in New Mexico who was having problems with a 1991 Isuzu Trooper. Living out in the mountains, he was having trouble getting stuck while in four-wheel drive in both mud and snow. He asked, "Should I buy new tires or get a new car?"

Then he added how humiliated he was when a woman in a Chevy blazer had to come to his rescue. They asked him if when he was stuck, could he tell that all four wheels were spinning. Yes was the reply. Then it's not the four-wheel drive. "What about the tires?"

"How many miles do you have on the car?" 91,000.

"How long have you had the tires?" They came with the car.

"They what? Good grief. You've got 91,000 miles on one set of tires?" But they say tough guy on them.

"Forget the "Tough Guy" and go get new tires."

Those of you who really know me know that I am not the most mechanically inclined person in the world. But folks, even I could have figured out that fellow's problem. Some things in life are obvious and God has given us the ability and the skills to take care of them. The question is why are we so reluctant to use them?

Now part of our "Land of Enrichment" friend's problem may just have been that he needed somebody to listen to his struggles for awhile. For that, I cannot fault him. We all need a listening ear now and then. Did it ever occur to you that God specializes in listening? His still small voice is more than ready to sound a clear and strong note in your heart if you can put the clutter of things aside to where you will be able to hear Him. One thing is for certain. He is here with us and He is anything but silent.

Another thing our Isuzu fan might have been searching for was some genuine expert advice. When it comes to any aspect of life imaginable, God has placed into our keep a manual that covers more territory than most of us have ever considered. The Bible covers the highs and lows of life. The Bible holds minute details for the really searching heart as well as general ideas for choosing new directions for you life.

When you run into a tough spot in life, take a good look in your heart. God's Spirit is waiting to open your eyes to the answers you need for any challenge you face in life.

Six Mile Lake

View spectacular marsh systems, F. Bruce Malpass Preserve and Great Blue Herons during a public field trip 10 a.m. Saturday, June 29. The field trips are a celebration of the fifth year of land conservation by the Grand Traverse Regional Land Conservancy.

The St. Clair Lake - Six Mile Lake Natural Area has grown to over 145 acres in size thanks to a grassroots fund-raising campaign led by JoAnne Beemon, the float trip leader. Recently, the Regional Conservancy teamed up with the Little Traverse Conservancy to acquire the F. Bruce Malpass Preserve addition to the natural area with over 2,000 feet of frontage on the channel. This beautiful natural area is the Upper Chain of Lakes equivalent to the Grass River Natural Area (middle chain) and Skegemog Wildlife Area (lower chain).

To participate in the trip, meet at 1 p.m. at the South Arm Preserve, St. Clair Lake/Six mile Lake Natural Area. Bring your own canoe, kayak, or we will provide rowboats, life jackets. RSVP to 547-4820.

Charlevoix's advocate of the year

Linda Yaroch, a registered nurse from Charlevoix, was recently selected as Healthy Mothers, Healthy Babies Northern Michigan region 1995 Advocate of the Year.

Yaroch has been on the forefront of creating family-centered, community services for years as Director of Family Health Care for District Health Department No. 3. Her strong advocacy effort here on behalf of mothers and babies have benefited the entire state, according to a news release.

Among the programs Yaroch has fought for are dental health clinics, a women's mammography center, and "Project Share," a program to provide an impoverished community with one-stop shopping for a variety of services that requires a collaborative effort by many agencies and local groups.

Yaroch was the first to see, and make sure that Children's Special Health Care Clients were not left out of the Early On loop. All of these children qualify for this early intervention system, yet until Linda raised the call, very little attention had been given that service. She initiated a statewide study and traveled to Lansing, to advocate for increased funding for this issue.

She was the first in the state to see the connection between the new Infant Support Services program and Early On, and sought training for her staff.

Yaroch works as northern Michigan's own "barrier buster," serving on the Human Services Coordinating Body (Director's Council) in several counties, working with other agencies when conflicts in collaborative efforts arise and being open to opportunities to provide better service to families.

Yaroch's success within her own agency has resulted in other health departments seeking her guidance on matters of fiscal management, organization, and integration of services.

Linda Yaroch

Yaroch also has led the state in the drive to monitor the transition of Early, Periodic Screening, Diagnosis and Treatment to managed care. She has assured that children in the District Health Department No. 3 region have access to this outreach program.

Yaroch has been active in Healthy Mothers, Healthy Babies, helping to set this group's state agenda, serving on committees, and supporting the northern coalition region.

Currently, she serves as state chairperson. Yaroch's efforts on behalf of children and families in northern Michigan, as well as the entire state, provided for her recognition as advocate of the year.

The Graduation Class of 1996 would like to thank the community, parents, friends, school personnel and the following businesses for the best ever "All Night Senior Party" 1996.

Mr. and Mrs. Ross Winters are first-place winners of the petunia weeding contest on the north side of town. South side winners are Mr. and Mrs. Brian Farrell.

Weeding war winners

More than a dozen property owners volunteered last week to answer the distress call of Keep Charlevoix Beautiful to weed petunias.

Rewards were offered to those who met the criteria for the best weeding job. Gift certificates to the Weathervane Restaurant were awarded to Mr. and Mrs. Ross Winters and Mr. and Mrs. Brian Farrell. Others who participated received Burger King certificates.

Owners of bed and breakfast inns, MacDougall's and Bridge Street Inn, agreed to experiment along their frontage with sawdust from recently felled trees to determine if a two-inch layer played after weeding will help keep weeds under control the remainder of the summer.

"Another experiment this summer we're trying is using two kinds of topsoil - river bottom and farm soil. Unfortunately, much rain recently produced many weeds in both areas," explained Keep Charlevoix Beautiful president Bruce MacArthur.

Further recognition will be given at the end of the season to other property owners weeding their frontage.

Camp Quality: Under the big top

Camp Quality would like to bring Laura, a female African elephant, to camp this summer to spend some time with the children.

Laura eats several bales of hay, five gallons of sweet feed, a bunch of bananas, and a bag of apples washed down with 60 gallons of water every day and loves to snack on watermelons - five at a time.

Standing eight-feet tall, Laura lives with her mate, Buster, a bull African elephant, at the W. Chuck Walters Ivory Haven Farms in southern Michigan. She participates in educational programs responding to a positive approach and affection with treats given freely.

The theme for Camp Quality this year is "Under the Big Top - Circus." Coordinators of the program are hoping the 60 children touched by cancer who attend will be surprised by the visit from the friendly pachyderm An hour of getting to know Laura and more about elephants will be presented followed by two hours of rides and up close and personal contact.

Donations to help defray the cost of Laura's visit are being requested. They may be sent to Camp Quality USA, Box 345, Boyne City, MI 49712. Or stop by the office at 202 S. Lake St., Suite C, Boyne City, or call 582-2471.

Camp Quality is at Camp Daggett on Walloon Lake, August 11-17.

School election set

Separating the schools from the auditorium makes the election less risky, said board member Allen Telgenhof. Even though the board's goal is to pass both issues, he said this approach gives people choices.

"We can make it happen," said Sulane Hamilton, who is an advocate for the auditorium. She originally backed a single bond issue. "The auditorium is passable as a separate issue."

Board members Larry Levengood and Ardith Wieland voted against the passing resolution to separate the two issues and go ahead with the election in September.

Levengood was adamant about presenting the issues as one bond proposal.

"We would be lying to say it's under $20 million with both of them still totaling more," he said.

Wieland hasn't backed either of the resolutions for the election. She said the decisions are happening too fast, and there's not enough time to educate the community about the September election.

She said the community survey showed support for a new middle school and now the board is asking for a new high school.

"We should educate now, get the community's OK and then put it on the ballot," Wieland said, noting that the board hasn't seen 60 percent support for its plan. "We're moving too fast."

Even though bond proposals were separate with a mere vote, an alternative architectural plan for the high school is being prepared in case the auditorium doesn't pass. Plans for each proposal must be presented to the state before approval to hold an election is granted.

The auditorium is tucked between the gymnasium and an art-music-shop wing on the two-proposal plan. The outer wings will have to be brought together for the alternative plan.

District superintendent, Roberta Jackson, agreed that two proposals better the chance of the millages going through.

The proposals going before voters is finally decided. And according to architect, James Sneathen, of Beta Design Group, board members have a plan that will enable them to sleep at night "because it's what's best for kids."

Char-Em program applauded by state

Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District has earned the Michigan's Best Education Excellence Award for its Be Four School Project.

Jan Fowler, coordinator of the winning program and Director of the Early Education Consortium for Char-Em, explained the program is designed both to prepare children for kindergarten and to answer common questions parents have regarding their child's development.

Char-Em staff members visit parents and their children at home and do activities which prepare them for school. Children ready to enter kindergarten are visited by their future teacher as well, to ease the transition.

The Be-Four School Project has been in place since January 1990. It has been funded by the state, private foundations and the W.K. Kellogg Foundation.

School budget close to 1995-96 numbers

because of the science and technology charter school that is opening in town this fall.

Future drops in student numbers is expected through the loss of employees at Big Rock Point nuclear power plant. The plant is scheduled to shut down May 31, 2000. It employes about 140 day-time workers, many of which have children in school.

The decrease of an estimated 75 students drops district revenues by nearly $500,000. A five-year budget plan shows the fund balance decreasing by $453,450 as it covers revenue shortfalls in the coming years.

Although state money fluctuates by student, local taxes are based on an 18-mill levy on all taxable property except for homestead and qualified agriculture. The money is designated for operating expenses.

An additional 0.4529 mills is collected through the school for the public library.

This millage will soon be taken out of the school's budget, as state laws instigate the forming of a district library.

Other than the general fund, the school board has approved a food service budget of $290,460 for 1996-97, up nearly $14,000 from last year; and an athletic budget for $199,380, up $5,400.

Charlevoix pool gets $49,000 in donations

It was a very good week for Charlevoix Friends of the Pool.

Major grants amounting to $40,000 from two northern Michigan grocery store chains swelled funds for construction and endowment of the Charlevoix Community pool.

Memorials and pledges in the $1000 steward category added another $9,000 to the construction fund. The organization still must raise approximately $335,000 to complete pool construction begun last fall.

The Oleson Foundation of Traverse City and Glen's Markets each gave $10,000 to be used toward construction. In addition, a pledge of $10,000 for each of the next two years by Glen's will enable the organization to provide swimming instruction for Charlevoix Students.

"The opportunity for our children to have swimming lessons is the key that got us excited about getting involved with Friends of the Pool," wrote Glen A. Catt, Glen's president and chief executive officer, in a letter announcing the grants. Harold Miller, local Glen's store director, participated in the decision to fund the indoor pool.

Several gifts were received for the memorial plaque.

Friends and members of the Kiwanis Club of Charlevoix contributed to the Clifford R. Biddick Sr. memorial fund. Another memorial, initiated by Robert-Silver with the help of friends, was funded in memory of Julius Abramson, a summer resident.

Big Rock workers bleed for need

Big Rock Point nuclear power plant earned corporate recognition from the American Red Cross for its blood drives.

The company averages 46% penetration at their three-times-a-year blood drives, and they regularly surpass their goal. With about 140 daytime workers, they average 64-units of blood.

George Petitjean, Big Rock Point senior engineer, accepted the award for the company at the first-ever American Red Cross Great Lakes Blood Services Region held in East Lansing June 6. More than 100 volunteers and staff attended, according to the Red Cross.

Featured speakers at the annual meeting included: Brian McDonough, chief operating officer of American Red Cross Blood Services; Ron Croskey, a state trooper who received blood after being shot on duty during the year; and John L. Bennett, chief executive officer of the Great Lakes Region.

With locations in Lansing, Flint, Petoskey and Muskegon, Great Lakes Blood Services Region collected about 165,000 units of blood from volunteer donors during the past year. The collected blood is tested at one of nine Red Cross National Testing Labs (located in Detroit), then processed at the Region's Components Lab in Lansing.

At the lab, tested blood is made into red blood cells, for trauma victims; platelets, for clotting; plasma, for shock; and other blood products used for specific patient needs.

Called "the steward of America's blood supply," the American Red Cross provides over half the blood and blood products used throughout the country.

The annual meeting updated staff and volunteers on the safety of the blood supply, with a special emphasis on the importance of the recently-begun HIV Antigen Test, which has cut the chance of contracting the virus that causes AIDS to one out of every 676,000 units of blood. The blood supply, attendees were told, is safer than ever before, and as safe as humanly possible.

The Great Lakes region serves 88 hospitals, including Charlevoix Area Hospital, and uses several thousand volunteers from 37 Red Cross Chapters. The new Region was consolidated from the former Great Lakes (headquartered in Lansing) and Wolverine (formerly located in Flint) Blood Services Regions on January 1, 1996.

Beaver Island library granted state funds for Internet hook-up

The Beaver Island Public Library is receiving a $6,000 federal grant to help it gain access to the Internet, an area lawmaker announced today.

State Rep. Beverly Bodem, R-Alpena, said the grant provides a package that includes basic hardware, software, telecommunications support and an e-mail account.

"This is exciting news for Beaver Island," Bodem said. "Thanks to this grant, area residents are linking with the technology of tomorrow. Such a system offers widespread access to information for students, teachers, workers and employers in our region."

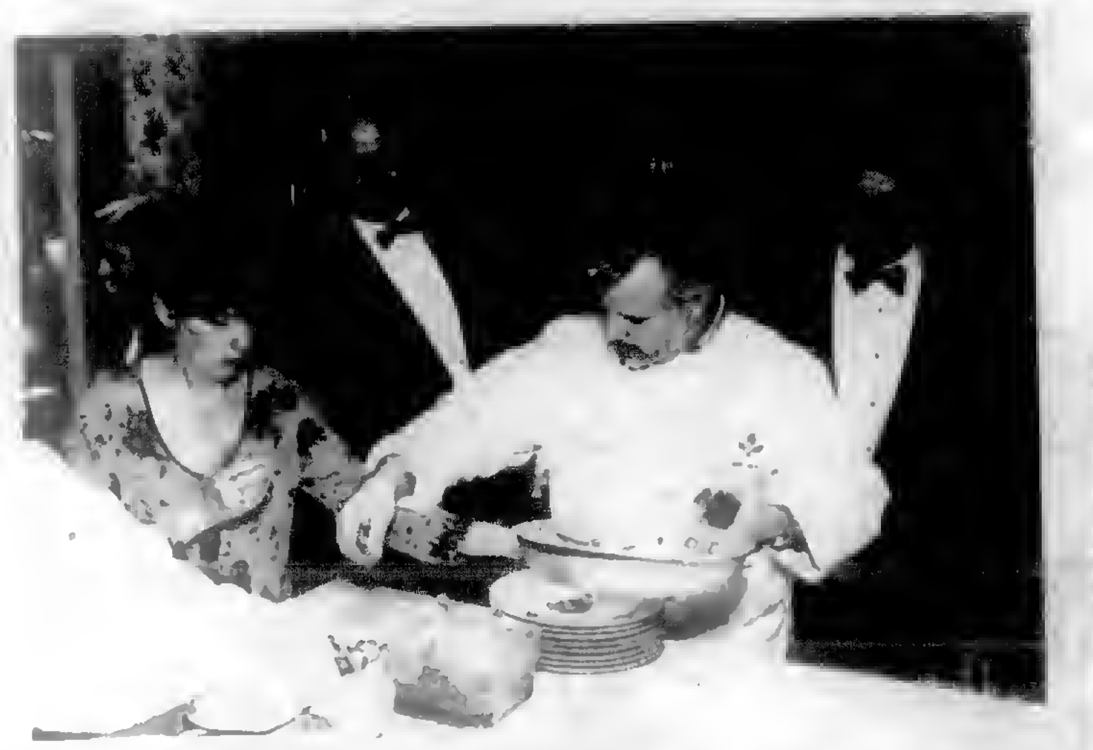
The federal Library Services and Construction Act grants are administered by the Library of Michigan. More than $4.1 million are distributed annually to Michigan libraries.

The program's long-term goals include:

— Providing state-of-the-art facilities where people can develop the skills necessary to use global telecommunications networks such as Internet.

— Establishing centers within local communities where residents can learn about and experiment with new technology.

"Public libraries are the logical place for people to learn about the information superhighway," Bodem said. "Learning about this technology is a tremendous step forward."



Kevin Dun, executive chef of Mahogany's, was in charge of preparing the seven-course meal for the Five Million Dollar Dinner for the Crooked Tree Arts Council Saturday at the home of Ross and Nancy in Harbor Springs June 8.

The annual dinner raised about $6,000 for the council.

Ameritech Enhanced 9-1-1
Proves There Is Safety in Numbers

On June 24, 1996 Charlevoix will have Ameritech Enhanced 9-1-1 Service. When Charlevoix callers dial 9-1-1 to reach fire, police, sheriff or other emergency medical services, our new service supplies their phone number and address on the screen at the 9-1-1 dispatch center.

This improved 24-hour emergency hotline provides greater safety because there's no fear of a mix-up of address, and if the caller hangs up, the dispatcher can call back. Even if the caller forgets to give their address, the system provides the information so that emergency help can be sent. (With some business phone systems only the phone number is displayed so please make sure employees know your business address.) What's more, Enhanced 9-1-1 reduces false alarms.

Emergency calls can be made from both rotary and touch-tone phones. And there's no charge for calls made from pay phones. But the key here, as always, is emergency. In non-emergency situations please continue to use the administrative numbers on the inside of our telephone book.

Ameritech's Enhanced 9-1-1 Service.

It proves there is safety in numbers.

BUSINESS

Glass company comes to Charlevoix

If it's glass, Bill Laway will install it, fix it or customize it. With the exception of eye glass lenses.

"Nothing's out of our means except for the eye glasses and I wish we did them," Laway said of Charlevoix Glass, the new company located at 05951 M-66 North. Charlevoix Glass shares the location with the Secretary of State's office and several other businesses.

Laway and his associate, Don Crandell, are banking the success of the business on quality and customer satisfaction. Everyone in the business has strong points and weak points, Laway said. At Charlevoix Glass, customers can expect to be the first priority.

Customers will find "coffee, conversation and get exactly what they expected and leave here happy," Laway said.

A veteran of the glass business, both in the Charlevoix area and previously in Milford, Laway said he always enjoyed working for companies he'll now be competing with, but felt it was his turn to do things his way.

"There's plenty of opportunity for everybody that's in it (the glass business)," he said.

The company is receiving inventory and display models in daily. Everything is available for customers to view during the grand opening celebration during the month of June.

Laway and Crandell will replace windshields, shower doors, mirrors, table tops, and provide all types of insurance work. Laway said he will keep adding services as more new ideas for working with glass, plexiglass or safety glass evolve. Both he and Crandell are experienced in all types of glass services, and both are senior auto glass technicians, certified by the National Glass Association. Laway also is a factory trained car light technician.

For information on the variety of services available, stop in at the office from 8 a.m. - 5 p.m. Monday through Friday, or call 547-3450. The shop also is open evenings and weekends by appointment.

The two have gone into business for themselves after years of experience of working for another local glass company.

Better Business Bureaus warns against clearinghouse scam

The Better Business Bureaus warn consumers that they may be receiving a phony Publishers Clearinghouse mailing.

The legitimate Publishers Clearing House runs a sweepstakes to market direct mail subscriptions and is based in Port Washington, New York.

Recent reports throughout the bureau indicate increased mailings from fake clearinghouse that advice residents that they have won $100,000 and request a $60 cash processing fee to be returned with the "Official Statement of Eligibility."

The mailing originates from San Jose, Calif. While postal inspectors have been notified and are working on this, Ken Vander Meeden, president of the bureau's western Michigan office, advises residents who receive the bogus mailing to call (800) 684-3222.

"We need to have residents send the bogus materials to us to establish the depth of this scam in west Michigan," he said.

The bureau always advises that people "check it out before you get your check book out."

Charlevoix baseball bids farewell to coach Certa

By Jan Korthase
Courier special writer

You won't hear Brian Certa bragging about his successes as a high school baseball coach.

"There's always room for improvement," said Certa, who resigned his varsity baseball coaching position in order to spend more time with his growing family. Certa said he always told his players they're only as good as their best game. "It's the same for a coach," he said. "You try to top the best season.

"I think I'm a lot better coach today than I was in the past. I've made my share of mistakes ... That's the only way I learn."

Certa began teaching at Charlevoix in 1979 and became a coach in 1983.

"I always put my emphasis on the players, on the kids," Certa said. "They're going to be a part of my life and my memories. Any sport is a character builder. Every sport teaches you to set goals. Every sport teaches you to be accountable. These are skills you carry over into life."

Coaching appealed to Certa because he always enjoyed the strategy of football and baseball.

"It's something that is a continuing learning process," Certa said. "You're always a student to the game, and you always try to pick up more information in regards to technique and strategy that you can apply to your team.

"That's probably what excites me the most about coaching," Certa said. "Nothing is prettier than carrying out some execution that we've worked out. To see a plan come together."

Certa will continue as building trades instructor at the school and as assistant coach for the football team. But between teaching, parenting, coaching and building homes in the summer, Certa felt he had too many irons in the fire.

"I'm upsizing my family and I want to downsize my time away from home." Certa will become a father for the fifth time in August.

"Coaching is something that I love to do but it's not easy sometimes. It's something that's been on my mind. I can't keep up the pace.

"My family comes first. I have a strong personal relationship with God and my family comes right underneath that. With everything I do it's hard to handle those first two priorities the way I want to."

"I've always loved the game," Certa said of baseball. "I have a lot of memories in working with the kids and during games that will always be there."

Certa said baseball fever was always exciting, playing in tournaments knowing college and pro scouts were watching the kids. "Watching the expression on the players faces during the game and before the game - those things I won't forget.

"Part of being a coach is being a fan to the players. Watching them succeed - it's been a joy," Certa said.

Certa expressed his appreciation for his assistant coach though these years. "I'm very thankful for the help John Hutchison has donated, his coaching experience and time for the program. He has always worked with my pitchers. I'm very thankful for all the things he has done for me and the program."

What Certa will miss most is simply spending time with the kids and working with the team and seeing them perform during competition. Certa feels like he's been a part of handing the love for baseball from generation to generation.

Baseball is still considered America's sport, Certa said, although not as much as before.

Rolemodels in pro sports today just don't project the same image as they did in Certa's day. "And the kids, you can't blame them. They watch these athletes and think that's the way they're supposed to act. Some kids see through it and some don't."

As he makes the transition to the other side of the fence surrounding the diamond, Certa focuses on being the best parent he can be for his children, and supporting the coaches who will be in their lives.

Other coaches resigning recently include Joe Powers, girl's varsity basketball coach, and Jim Kaninc, assistant football coach.

Play day golf to tee off

The first golf tournament for youngsters enrolled in the Charlevoix County Junior Golf Program is scheduled for Wednesday, July 3, at the municipal course.

Director Dean Davenport announced 85 golfers registered for the summer program, which has had two weeks of instruction.

Golfers are based on four skill levels: 7-8 year-olds, Little Linkers through beginners, advanced beginners, and intermediates.

Beginners tee off at 9 a.m., and play four holes. Intermediates also begin at 9 a.m. and play seven holes. At 9:45 a.m. advanced beginners begin four-hole play with Little Linkers having two holes of play at 10 a.m.

For more information, contact Joan Waha at the municipal course, Bruce Schepeler at the Country Club, Dave Poquette and Steve Braun at the Belvedere, or Davenport at 547-6433.

Hole in one at city course

Scott Blechel, 18, of Charlevoix, shot a hole in one on hole #7 at the Charlevoix Municipal Golf Course June 10. Blechel shot 205 yards with a four iron.

Blechel is a former member of the Charlevoix High School golf team. The hole in one was witnessed by Jason Vincent.

Basketball camp on tap

Students who will be in fourth- through ninth-grades in Charlevoix this fall are invited to attend the ninth annual basketball camp with head coach Jim Kaninc.

Seventh, eighth and ninth graders will attend a session from 8 a.m. to 10 a.m. July 1, 2, 3 and 5. Fourth, fifth and sixth graders will attend the same days from 10 a.m. to 12 p.m. Both sessions are at the high school gym.

The program costs $35. A permission slip is required, but physicals are optional. All campers will receive a T-shirt. The camp features include a shooting contest, a three-point shooting contest and a three-on-three tournament. Prizes will be awarded in each event.

SCRAPBOOK

Fisherman's Island: Early days retold

The Indians called it "Ma-Na-Shan" which actually means "little island." So, Fisherman's Island had little significance to anyone when Charlevoix's pioneer civil engineer, David Nettleton, staked a claim to the island, later selling it to Horace Harsha, pioneer real estate dealer.

Harsha later sold the island to Mrs. John (Martha) Baker who built and operated the opulent Beach Hotel at the turn of the century. Baker planned to build a gambling casino on the island and had ordered a seaplane (one of the first ever built) to transport her hotel guests and other resorters to the summer fun-island.

Fortunately for posterity, the plan died with Baker's death, and the beautiful little island was spared to become a wilderness outpost of Charlevoix Township. Although Baker purchased the island for $500, the property was resold from her estate for $5,500.

In the 1940's Fisherman's Island was purchased by Clark C. Coulter, retired Detroit attorney and a native of Charlevoix. Coulter and George Finucan, Charlevoix retired druggist, built a crude shack on the side on the site of the original shanty which had once housed two pioneer fishermen.

Octogenarian, Lige O'Brien of Barnard road at the southern perimeter of the City of Charlevoix, recalls that the two fishermen that finally gave the island its present name, were murdered on the island they called home.

O'Brien says he was about seven years old when Irish Mike Martin and his Swedish companion, known only as "Swede" came often to his father's home atop O'Brien Hill on U.S. 31 South. They usually came at mealtime angling for an invitation to join the family as Mrs. O'Brien's cooking skill was well known. Later, he remembers hearing his parents talk of the strange disappearance of the two fishermen.

It was many years later that the mystery surrounding the deaths was finally revealed: An aged, skid-row derelict confessed to the murder on his death bed in a Chicago hospital. The murderer related how he had laid in wait for his victims when they sold their catch of Lake Michigan trout.

The assailant felled Mike and Swede with rocks as they came ashore, somewhat the worse for a few too many stops at Charlevoix's five saloons. After emptying their pockets of the meager valuables they possessed he dumped their bodies on the leeward side of the island.

A couple of days later the murderer learned that the disappearance of the fishermen had created a stir and a reward had been posted for information about their whereabouts. Greedily, he retrieved the bodies of his victims and claimed the reward.

Fisherman's Island

Today many feel that Fisherman's Island and the adjacent shore property should be developed for the benefit of the general public, such as Bell's Bay - a scant mile to the north. It is a popular state forest camping site for summer visitors from coast to coast.

There is much history encompassed in the few miles of shoreline: The steamer CHAMPLAIN of Chicago caught fire and burned off Fisherman's Island loaded with cargo and summer vacationers in June 1887. Survivors swam ashore and took refuge in a lumber camp boarding house.

Smithson's pioneer saw mill was once located in the area turning virgin timber into stacks of building material that at the time seemed in never-diminishing supply.

The above article is from the Bernice Wexstaff Collection, at the Charlevoix Historical Society's Harsha House Museum.

This string of bass were reportedly caught on Six Mile Lake in 1906. They hang for show in front of Charlevoix's afternoon cigar clutch.

Keep the beauty meet

The annual Keep Charlevoix Beautiful meeting will be held 9 a.m. Saturday, June 29, at the Charlevoix Yacht Club.

Annual reports will be given and officers elected. The organization will also discuss plans for its fund-raiser, the petunia dinner on Sunday, Aug. 4, at the club.

The event also features an auction sponsored by Charlevoix Friends of the Pool.

The meeting is open to the public.

Surprise: Fourth of July parade in Charlevoix

By Janenne Irene Froats
Courier editor

Bands won't be striking up. But America's red, white and blue will be carried down Charlevoix's Bridge Street on the Fourth of July for the first time in years.

A parade of veterans, scouts and military personnel — and anybody else who wants to join them — will be leaving the American Legion Hall at 10 a.m. and traveling south on Bridge Street to East Park. They will be led by the chief of police and the U.S. Coast Guard.

Although there will be many feet in cadence on Independence Day, there will be no floats wheeling by the parade watchers, said Charlie Butcher, a color guard for both the American Legion Post 226 and Veteran of Foreign Wars Post 1153.

Butcher is a World War II veteran. He served as an Army Airforce flight engineer in the European Theater of Operations. He is also a Charlevoixian who refuses to let another Fourth of July pass by Charlevoix without some kind of pomp and parade.

Historically, Charlevoix hasn't held a Fourth of July parade in commemoration of Independence Day. Its grand celebration comes three weeks later when the Venetian Festival fills the town with people and the sky with fireworks.

For Butcher, a celebration weeks later — and one not officially declared as recognizing the Fourth of July — isn't enough.

"We veterans decided we were going to celebrate the Fourth of July the way it should be celebrated," Butcher said, referring to seeing the banners, flags, parades and hearing the firing of the guns.

The festivity includes two grand marshals: Tom Lawler, outgoing commander of the VFW, and Fritz Allard, from the American Legion. Allard, who died this spring, will be represented in the parade by his wife.

While people march to the beat of music being broadcast from the Petunia truck, the Michigan International Guard will be doing a flyover.

Once the parade arrives at East Park, a salute to colors will be made by the rifle squads in front of the memorial.

Charlevoix chamber executive director, Jacqueline Merta, said she thinks it's great that the veterans have organized a parade. Most of the city pours its resources into Venetian, which is held on a weekend that doesn't compete with events held in other area towns.

Although some people consider Venetian a belated Fourth of July, Merta said she's always understood it as "a farewell to summer."

"There's a lot of different perceptions out there," she said.

Perceptions no longer matter anymore to Butcher and the other veterans who received parade approval from city council last winter.

The OK was given, and the men and women will put on their dress uniforms and make their march Thursday, July 4.

"This is the first, but as long as we veterans are around, we will have a Fourth of July parade on the Fourth of July," Butcher said.

Acacia again ties at its downtown dock

By Janenne Irene Froats
Courier editor

The U.S. Coast Guard Cutter Acacia was tugged home Thursday.

The sun rose in the sky as Gem Hunter II and Big Al towed the 180-foot ship to its familiar dock on Charlevoix's edge.

Even though the buoy tender's engines are torn down for annual maintenance, the ship made its way home — not from a distant journey, but from months of docking between the Coast Guard station in Pine River Channel and Medusa Cement Plant.

Bridge and waterfront construction have displaced the Acacia since November.

Mayor Josh Barnes escorted the ship in a smaller vessel.

Crewmen lined the Acacia's railing as she eased into her newly refurbished dock, part of the Bridge Park project.

"Chop, chop guys," Lt. Cmdr. Steve Corporon directed from the bridge. "Let's go."

Lines were tossed, tied and tightened.

"We're finally home," Corporon said later Thursday. "It's going to be nice to be back."

Ensign Mary Ellen Durley agrees. She said most of the crewmen live in town and are now close enough to walk to work. Plus, the storage space in Bridge Park's new building — being shared between the Coast Guard, the Beaver Islander and the city — will make the job easier.

The city updated the dock to entice the Coast Guard to continue stationing a ship in Charlevoix. New utility connections were installed, the bulkhead was extended to 250 feet and 3,000 square-feet of the new building has been set aside for Acacia office space and buoy storage.

"We have worked hard to make sure we get one of the 225-feet buoy tenders," city manager, Mike Wiesner, said.

Acacia's class of ship is being discontinued soon. Larger tenders, Wiesner said, have four times the Acacia's capacity. Fewer tenders will be needed in the area.

Promises to keep a ship in port have not been made. But the dock, offices and storage area have been built to meet Coast

Charlevoix man guilty of cocaine delivery

Henry "Hank" Stubbs could have been off the hook.

But the confidential informant who disappeared before his April trial was found. He testified Tuesday in 33rd Circuit Court.

Instead of putting the delivery of cocaine charge behind him, the Charlevoix man stood before Judge Richard M. Pajtas as he was declared guilty.

A personal recognizance bond was revoked. To get out of jail before his sentencing, Stubbs will have to put up $20,000 or 10 percent surety.

Stubbs was found guilty of delivering under 50 grams of cocaine after a two-and-a-half hour bench

Accident kills one

State police continue to investigate a car crash that left one youth dead and two others injured last June 25 in Bear Creek Township, just south of Petoskey.

The driver, Jason Staph, 20, of Charlevoix, was traveling on Howard Road near Intertown when he lost control of the vehicle. He was treated and released from Northern Michigan Hospital. His passenger, Michael Burmeister, 19, of Boyne City, died June 26. Burmeister's sister, passenger Danyel Burmeister, 17, of Boyne City, is in serious condition, according to Northern Michigan Hospital. She was thrown from the car as it rolled over.

Speed may have been a factor in the accident, but state Trooper Scott Schlehuber said he is still measuring skid marks to make that determination. Schlehuber has ruled out alcohol as a factor, and said that blood tests for drugs have not been completed.

Recycling options few

Charlevoix County residents are left with little choice in disposing of their recyclable goods - haul it to the Cedar Ridge landfill near Ironton or haul it to Three R's Enterprise in East Jordan.

Three R's recently discontinued its curbside pick-up and Waste Management hasn't had it for years. The rising costs of hauling, sorting and processing recycled products are said to be the reasons.

Don Pizzurro, general manager of Waste Management, said they tried a number of different things to make recycling convenient for residents, including talking with the county about it setting up recycling bins.

"There was no interest from the county," Pizzurro said.

Both companies have received calls from disappointed residents wanting a more convenient way to handle their recyclables.

HAPPY FOURTH OF JULY, 1996
CLIP AND SAVE

Work ongoing at East Park, to continue through Venetian

Construction workers spend the morning Thursday smoothing out cement before it dries to make up Bridge Park's plaza area. The project is slowly coming to a close.

Bridge Park improvements are near completion, but Venetian Festival spectators only have a slight chance of having sod to perch upon for the festivities. More likely, said city manager Mike Wiesner, the surface will be dirt, with sod placed and given an opportunity to take root later.

The Beaver Islander is expected to be transporting passengers and vehicles from the park on the Fourth of July. It should be fully operational by July 15, Wiesner said. The U.S. Coast Guard ship is permanently docked again, and the offices will be ready for use during the change of command ceremony scheduled for Sunday of Venetian weekend.

"It'll be a total benefit to the community for years and years to come," Wiesner said, of Bridge Park project.

The final price tag for the project will be about $5.2 million. Funds generated from taxes within the Downtown Development Authority district paid for the improvements.

With the exception of about $100,000 for city electrical improvements, city staff time, and prison crew labor, no city funds have been used for the project.

The development authority has been in place since 1983. Bridge Park is the second major project undertaken by the improvement committee. Tax revenue increases within the authority's district, minus cost of living increases, are set aside to make improvements to the downtown area.

The district goes as far north as Dixon Avenue, as far south as Hurlbut Street, and includes the courthouse and two banks, but is irregular from those points. Round lake is the border on the east side.

The Bridge Park project has depleted most of the authority's resources, Wiesner said. The bonds will be paid off in 2013. The most Wiesner expects to be left after Bridge Park is $100,000.

Venetian carnival to stay downtown

The first block of Mason Street and the parking lots behind Bridge Street will be filled with ringing machines and lighted rides during the Venetian Festival.

Monday, city council passed on its right to veto the carnival location, which in the past was held in East Park.

The carnival will be set up in an L-shape, with one end at the corner of Bridge and Mason, and turning into two public parking lots behind Bridge Street businesses. The lots run from Mason to Clinton streets.

Mayor, Josh Barnes, said people want to keep the carnival downtown. However, the Birdie's Beauty Shop on Mason Street is going to be blocked in. Also there was mention of the carnival noise disrupting the lives of the tenants in apartments above the shop and a problem with handicapped clients getting to the business.

With only the one business owner opposing the proposed location, council backed the Venetian committee's location.

"I'm willing to try it, monitor it and see what happens," said council member Alwin "Butch" Russell. His opinion was shared by all present board members.

County lessens administrator skills

The search goes on for a county board coordinator. After having difficulty with having desirable applicants accept the job, the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners has reduced the requirements for the position and has asked its personnel committee to decide how to proceed. The matter will be discussed at the Wednesday, July 3, board meeting.

The position responsibilities include acting as board secretary and human resources director. Commissioners James Behling, Howard Hosler and Carl Price serve on the personnel committee.

Take this Fourth to review our nation's deliverance

EDITORIAL

The Fourth of July is a day of family gatherings, cooking on the grill, watching floats pass in hometown parades and oohing at colorful bursts in the sky.

These traditions have become part of America's Independence Day. But they are not the essence.

While we enjoy time with our loved ones, let's remember to recall the holiday's beginning — to remind ourselves and teach the young.

The Fourth of July is the greatest of all holidays for reuniting entire towns and providing family activities. Carnival rides whirl and bands in the park showcase local talent.

However, the Fourth of July really commemorates the birth of a great republic. It is the anniversary of the 1776 adoption of the Declaration of Independence.

On that day in Philadelphia, 12 of 13 colonies approved a plan to free America from European leadership. New York's decision to join the effort five days later united the country's stand against British control.

Our country's independence wasn't Richard Henry Lee's vision when he delivered a resolution to the Continental Congress June 7, 1776. But the ongoing tyranny of the distant government and Lee's statement — that the colonies should be free and independent states and be absolved of all allegiance to the British crown — led to the formation of a committee to form our nation's future.

A year of fighting Britain, and George III, had turned rebellion into a cry and flavor for freedom.

The committee formed to draft a Declaration of Independence was made up of America's greatest forefathers: Thomas Jefferson, Benjamin Franklin, John Adams, Roger Sherman and Robert R. Livingston.

Jefferson wrote the original draft. And after Adams and Franklin made some 47 changes, the full committee approved the document and submitted it to Congress on June 28, 1776.

The Lee resolution was brought up for debate on July 1 and was adopted the next day. New York was the only state in the infant nation to originally withhold its approval.

Jefferson's document was ultimately approved by New York, and unanimously adopted by all 13 states and approved by Congress July 4. Most of the signatures found on the famous parchment were gathered Aug. 2.

A few years later, Independence Day celebrations began to commemorate the national day of deliverance. The holiday has since been solemnized by pomp and parades, cannons and firecrackers.

Red, white and blue banners fly, and Stars and Stripes Forever add a patriotic flavor to fireworkers as they fight up the night sky.

The Fourth of July has never been officially declared a national holiday. But all 50 states recognize it as a legal holiday, meaning that most people gain a family day.

The independence gained by the United States and its attitude about democracy has influenced countries around the world. It was the beginning of "We the People," having free speech, the right to bare arms and the privilege of casting our vote for our nation's leaders.

Let's not forget the early effort it took to give this nation a foundation that still stands strong today — 220 years later.

Guest Commentary

Our schools work, support them

The following opinion was submitted by Mr. and Mrs. James Hisey, school volunteer.

You bet our schools work. You'll see why they work by these examples of success programs. These comments are based upon our limited experience this past school year, as a volunteer in Charlevoix Elementary School's STAR - Success To All Readers program.

STAR is a tutoring program for first- and second-grade children needing help in basic reading skills. My wife and I participated along with others from the community. It was just a few hours a week, but it was so rewarding to us. The time we spent with our young "Reading Buddies" was perhaps the most fulfilling time of our year. What we learned from Eric, Joe, Adriana, Jason, Nick and the other students, was much greater than what they could possibly have learned from us. They were so shiny bright. Maybe not always attentive or eager, but bright.

STAR was developed by first- and second-grade teachers. They marshaled some 38 volunteers for their program. And yes, those very teachers made us stay after school, too. We attended numerous evening briefing sessions.

During our volunteer times, we learned much, much more about that school: its philosophy, its staff, its teachers, their methods, their discipline, their HARD WORK, their dedication, their LOVE for the kids; and their enthusiasm and professional approach to their goal - to teach.

Some job. Some burden. Some responsibility. Some focus.

But it is their dedication and love that glows. With these two attributes everything flows: the focus, the patience, the organization, the rules, the fervor, the work.

True believers, we became. So much so, that we now say if you know anyone who "has a beef" about how our teachers teach, have them see us. We would be only too happy to tell of our observations.

Understand that we volunteers were only a few grains of sand flowing through the glass. Compare that to the hours the teachers spend ALL DAY, EVERY DAY with these children. Frankly, we look at those teachers we met with respect, and hold them in awe.

Our elementary teachers say all children must read and write and be ready to swim with the big kids. They say the odds are that students will fall farther behind, grade-by-grade. They try to keep up in following years but too many drop out.

We send our kids to school to learn. We expect them to learn whether we as parents support and read to them at home or not. We know that learning must start with the basics - "reading and writing and 'rithmatic." We know that some young people learn earlier than others, so? That's the teacher's job. Yes? Note we said teacher's job. But, that's not fair to the teachers or the schools. Parents should be involved, too. However, enticing some parents to help, in many ways, is a tough job; maybe impossible. To help fill that void the teachers have launched several educational support programs.

The Sparkle Program is another example that schools work. Sparkle is a positive reinforcement for demonstrating good social skills. All students from first- through fifth-grades are gathered monthly for instruction on a social skill ie: how to accept a complement; how to accept criticism; how to get a teacher's attention.

Good Cent's Savings Program is a partnership formed with FMB Bank at Charlevoix. Elementary school students run their own school bank with tellers, bank managers and customers. Real savings accounts are set up for students. Basic math skills are put to real life situations.

This letter was prompted by an article critical of East Lansing public schools, and by inference, public schools in general. It would be a shame if parents here, who read that article, think that the criticism fits here. It does not.

The Charlevoix elementary school is taking Herculean steps toward solving the illiteracy problem. Combining old-fashioned, well-proven methods with the new computer teaching programs and leavening all with the social skills programs.

Take Heart - Charlevoix is one school system leading the way toward higher literacy. Our schools work!

Letter to the Editor

Striptease not for me

Editor,

I am certainly disappointed that our new Cinema III Theater is showing an R-rated movie "Strip Tease."

We don't want this kind of seamy values flaunted in our town! Traverse City residents recently had to band together to have two X-rated video houses closed.

Granted, "Strip Tease" is not X-rated, but by not voicing our displeasure at the showing of films like these, we tend to leave a vacuum for the perpetrators of filth to move into our town with the belief that we won't object.

If you too feel that movies of this type are not what we want shown in our town of Charlevoix, then make your displeasure known.

Shirley Keck

EDITH GILBERT

Every time I open a top door of a kitchen cabinet, I have to smile. There, sitting on the top shelf, is a huge stack of coffee filters. For the last eight years, I've been whittling away at this stash, and seem to be making little headway. There still is a big pile left on the shelf.

How would anyone who lives alone acquire so many packages of coffee filters, you may well wonder. Well, I'll tell you! About eight years ago, we had a large family wedding in Charlevoix. Many people came from far and wide and my home was the headquarters for the entire group.

Everything here was in readiness. Beds were made, towels hung in the bathrooms. Coat hangers placed in the closets. The lawn was cut. The windows washed. The car retailed. The frig was filled with orange juice, milk, eggs, butter, cold cuts, fresh fruit and salad fixings. There were casseroles in the freezer. Banana bread, cereal, sweet rolls and cookies were on hand. There were clean dishtowels in the drawer and new pot holders hanging on the wall.

The only item I had forgotten was a package of coffee filters. Remembering at the last minute, I wrote down "coffee filters" on my marketing list that I keep on the kitchen counter.

Guests arrived on the appointed day. They unpacked their cars, dropped their suitcases in the bedrooms, and headed off in all directions — for the beach, the tennis court, the golf course, neighbors homes, Murdock's and Mettler's — and the grocery store.

For the next 24 hours, each one appeared in the kitchen with a bag of groceries. This one needed baby food and that one needed fast film. And much to my surprise, each thoughtful guest had purchased a package of coffee filters for me! There are still over 300 coffee filters on my shelf, more than enough for another year's supply.

This year, many of us are getting our homes and cottages ready again for visitors, and everyone is looking forward to family reunions. Grandfathers are borrowing earseats and golf clubs. Grandmothers are looking for strollers and fishing rods. Everyone is looking forward to good weather, good picnics, good fishing, good sailing, good tennis, good conversation and most of all, good company.

Coffee filters prompt fond memories

Forgotten is the relief as cars pull out of the driveway to return home; the disappointment that we didn't have a real one-on-one visit with each individual; the minor irritation of picking up forgotten items; the resignation in finding sand everywhere; the sigh of bewilderment as we look over the flat bank statement.

Yes, every year I am blessed with having the best house guests anyone could ever wish for. They are independent, considerate, helpful, caring and fun to be around. We split chores. We reminisce and tell stories on each other. We enjoy looking at old photograph albums together. We tease and laugh a lot.

So this winter, when I open my kitchen cabinet and see the familiar stash of coffee filters, I will smile again and remember with pleasure, God willing, not only all the delightful summers past, but also the anticipated Charlevoix summer of '97.

City sells industrial lot, approve restaurant expansion

By Janenne Irene Froats
Courier editor

The city council plans to sell another lot in the industrial park.

The price tag is $29,875. The buyer is Nu-Core, a business that designs and manufactures secondary electrical systems for electric furnaces used in steel making.

Nu-Core general manager, Robert Grove, said in a letter to council, that the building planned for the site will be 9,000-square-feet. The business is expected to employ 11 people within a year.

Stipulation of the 2.39 acres includes a request for a 12-year tax abatement by the city. Council members agreed to give the business the maximum amount allowed under the state formula.

The sale of this lot fills Charlevoix's industrial park, which is located on Taylor Road, south of town.

The Charlevoix business would be an expansion for Nu-Core. It currently occupies a 13,000-square-foot building in Inkster. The new building would be used for engineering and design and computer aided machining fabrication.

"Our manufacturing activities do not require any hazardous materials, nor do we generate any hazardous waste," Grove said. "Our manufacturing does require highly skilled and motivated individuals which we do intend to hire and train locally."

In other business, the council:

— Approved an expansion at Juilleret's Restaurant. Outside dining is expected to be ready for customers by July 11. The screened in deck area will seat 32 people, all designated for non-smoking.

The expansion was approved by planners last week. No variances were needed for the project, which will expand the business by 575 feet. The new area will take up the rear, south corner that is now vacant.

— Tabled a public hearing over the abandonment of an alley bounded by Alice and Stockman streets. The alley abuts the Belvedere Club. City manager, Mike Wiesner, recommends abandonment.

Mayor Josh Barnes said he's concerned with what could happen to the adjacent lots in the future. The property lines will be more closely determined before the public hearing is held, 7 p.m. Monday, July 15, at city hall.

— Approved a request for site plan changes at Captains Corners. Owner, Leo Quinn, said the project isn't cost effective as is. He was given credit for 17 trees on the right of way and permission to construct an entrance off Stover Road.

However, council did decide that the current entrance off M-66, closest to Stover Road, is to be closed until further review. Concern was over traffic congestion in that area.

— Approved the hiring of a new firefighter, pending passage of tests. The candidate, whose name is withheld, would fill a vacancy created by the resignation of Bob Lindstrom.

— Appointed Dennis Kusina to the planning commission.

Big Rock Point advisory board takes on nuke waste politics

By Janenne Irene Froats
Courier editor

A group of area citizens are pressing senators to approve a bill that calls for the U.S. Department of Energy to keep a promise to collect, store and monitor the nation's nuclear waste.

The Big Rock Point Citizens Advisory Board voted 7-1 to send senators Spencer Abraham and Carl Levin a letter asking that a bill currently stalled on the senate floor be passed.

The senators are cosponsoring the bill.

"The time has come for the bill to be passed," the letter says. It was signed by Dale Troppman, advisory board chairman.

Of the 12 board members, nine of which are from Charlevoix County, JoAnne Beemon, of Charlevoix, gave the one dissenting voice. She said she can't support shipping waste to a federal site because she doesn't believe the transportable casks have been proven safe.

Although Beemon doesn't believe nuclear waste should be stored on the shores of Lake Michigan, she can't condone moving what's already here until reliable methods are found.

"I would be out there flagging them through if I saw that technology was safe and I didn't have to run over someone's face to do it," she said.

"Is it moral to insist that someone else take our waste because we can't be responsible for it?"

Big Rock Point public affairs director, Tim Petrosky, said he asked the advisory board to send a letter to the senators. It was faxed to them Wednesday.

"I believe that the Citizens Advisory Board was very proactive and made the right choice in supporting this bill," Petrosky said.

In the letter, the board listed the following reasons as to why the Senate should press the federal government to open a repository, which at this time could be located in Nevada:

— A broken promise, electrical utilities are running out of storage.

— There is no reason to delay, scientific or otherwise.

— Further delays and loopholes will cost consumers billions of dollars.

— Using money collected from utility customers for the construction of a waste storage facility to offset the federal deficit is "just plain wrong."

Petrosky said the board doesn't want Big Rock Point to become a "de facto storage facility" for nuclear waste.

The U.S. Department of Energy promised to have a permanent nuclear storage site ready by 1998. However, after years of research and spending billions of dollars, the site isn't expected to be ready.

Electricity consumers from around the nation have paid $11 billion into a fund to prepare the repository.

A memorial service will also be held later at the family's cottage on Burt Lake near Indian River, where Mrs. Wilson spent part of every summer and fall for more than 60 years.

Mrs. Wilson was born Helen Marland Percival on Aug. 5, 1904, the daughter of the late Walter and Edith (Ellwood) Percival of London, Ontario. She was a fifth generation resident of that city. She attended various private schools in London and graduated from the University of Michigan School of Nursing in 1926. BEACONS OF BLESSINGS

By Rev. Bruce Hamilton
Charlevoix Community Church of God

Somebody tell me if I have my history wrong. It's my understanding that Theodore Roosevelt gets credit for the creation and/or naming of the Teddy Bear. The story goes that he shot a bear while on a hunting expedition in the Rockies. He was so impressed with the bear's bravery and courage that he had it mounted, stuffed and displayed in the White House. Everyone came to call it "Teddy's Bear."

I wonder what old Teddy would think of the evolution and progress his bear has made after all these years. Most police and sheriff's department vehicles in our region carry them as standard equipment. When an officer encounters a child that has been in an accident or some other type of trauma, the bear has a remarkable way of reassuring and soothing a child while matters get sorted out.

But my favorite use involves grown-ups. Northern Michigan Hospital in Petoskey uses teddy bears with their grown-up patients. Anyone who has a surgical procedure that involves having their chest opened receives a teddy bear. Their bear comes dressed in a shirt emblazoned with the name "Sir Koff-a-Lot." And like the name implies, the bear's function is to encourage the patient to cough as much as possible in order to help overcome the effects of anesthesia. A chest incision hurts and squeezing the bear while coughing eases the pain.

I think it's kind of neat that law enforcement and medical folks alike recognize the fact that people need something to hold on to when things get rough. But I think there are times where all of us need something to hold on to period; no matter how things are going in life. What do we hold on to if a teddy bear is not readily available?

Jesus and his disciples had been through some rough times. The Lord knew that his followers were facing rougher things than they could ever imagine. So He asked them something. He asked them "Who do men say that I am?" One said Moses. Another said Elijah or one of the prophets. Then He turned to Peter and asked, "Who do you say that I am?"

Peter's reply has become a classic in faith. "Thou are the Christ, the Son of the Living God." So moved was Jesus at this reply, He told him, "Upon this rock, I will build my kingdom and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." Peter's teddy bear was his faith in Jesus. And the Lord said that if he held on to that faith tight enough absolutely nothing would harm him.

My friend, when you need something to hold on to in your life, there is nothing like having faith in Jesus. He has been through the wildest trials you can imagine. He knows how dark our heart's can get in the throws of discouragement, and he can shed light on it all. Teddy bears will always be among my favorite toys. But when it comes to something to hold on to that will really give something back in return, there's no beating holding on to Jesus with all your might!

Summer is here !

Charlevoix's summer is finally here, but it was a long time coming.

Temperatures and rainfall have been below normal. And this past weekend's warm up ushered in the late-coming summer.

In May, area temperatures dipped into the 40s during five days, compared to only one day in May 1995. Reaching the 70 degree mark has been rare, only happening twice in the month of May.

The first day of summer temperatures show that on June 21, 1995, our high was 88 degrees and our low was 60 degrees. On June 21, 1996, our high was 67 degrees and our low was 51 degrees.

How soggy were we? In May of 1995 we had 3.16 inches of rain, while May 1996 rainfall was only 1.52 inches. June 1995 gave seven days of rain, but through June 26 of this year we've had 14 rainy days.

Stubbs found guilty

trial.

The crime carries a one year mandatory jail sentence with a maximum of up to 20 years, and fines of up to $25,000 or lifetime probation.

A confidential informant, Steven Allen Mosher, took the stand stating it was Stubbs who sold him one-quarter ounce of cocaine.

Prosecutor for the Straits Area Narcotics Enforcement team (S.A.N.E.), Maria Barton, told Judge Pajtas that a team of detectives arranged for the informant to make a controlled buy from Stubbs. Mosher met with detectives Dec. 29, 1995. He was briefed, searched and given $700 to purchase cocaine. He then traveled to Stubbs' house under surveillance.

Mosher testified that once in the house he gave the money to Stubbs, who counted it and then left the room. Stubbs returned and handed a plastic bag with cocaine in it to Mosher. Under surveillance Mosher then drove to meet with the detectives and hand over the cocaine.

Stubbs' attorney, Mark Muniak, told the court that Mosher was not searched thoroughly and could have planted the cocaine. He also said the prints on the plastic bag were not identified and that there was a discrepancy in the amount Mosher was to purchase and the amount that he had when he came out of Stubbs' home.

Sentencing of Stubbs is scheduled for July 26.

County furniture returned for auction

All but three pieces of used furniture have been returned to the county building after 16 pieces were sold by mistake, mostly to county commissioners and employees.

The county and courthouse buildings are being renovated and the surplus of furniture includes chairs, cabinets and air conditioners. The sale of some of the used furniture totaled $1,265 and all but $200 of that has been refunded to the buyers. The $200 is the amount of the three missing pieces.

Although everyone who bought the furniture was asked to return it, the county does not know if the remaining furniture will be returned.

"Legally they don't have to return it," said county clerk, Jane Brannon.

County Commission chair, Phil Johnson, said he has not received any complaints from residents, or any indications that the county was doing anything underhanded.

The furniture will be sold at public auction later this year after the renovation is complete. Both the general public and county employees will have a chance to bid on the furniture.

Bagel shop serves up homemade goodies

By Jan Korthase
Courier special writer

Laurie Hughes' friends and co-workers have always loved her bagels. Now everyone in Charlevoix may enjoy them.

"Charlevoix's always needed a bagel store and everyone loves my bagels so I thought I was the one to do it," Hughes said of her bright and cheery shop which opened May 20 in downtown Charlevoix.

Lottie's, named after Hughes' nickname derived from the accented pronunciation by her Australian aunt, will be open year round. "My store is for local people and the summer people are just extra," Hughes said.

"I wanted to be more like a deli where you could come in and get something quickly," Hughes said.

Many fat free items are on the menu, including some of the bagels, fresh fruit and orange juice or cranberry yogurt shakes. But if sinking your teeth into something sinful is what you're after, try one of the "killer" brownies or a slice of homemade pie. Hughes is quick to explain that the menu will change depending on demand. "I'm open to suggestions," she said. If it hadn't been for customer requests, Hughes may not have made chocolate chip or tomato bacon bagels.

The bagels are the foundation of the business, but Hughes takes the opportunity to indulge in baking gooey treats as well. "I've always been a baker at home," she said. But with a husband and son who are diabetic, Hughes doesn't have the opportunity to bake as much as she'd like. The healthier choices are in demand by customers as well.

Hughes even has a new kitchen at home to bake in, but starting to broil, boil and bake bagels at 5 a.m. hasn't left much time to cook at home. Hughes makes nearly everything on the menu from scratch. The menu items include rolled sandwiches made with thin lawash bread, or sandwiches stacked on croissants, rolls and - of course - bagels.

And if a sandwich - or other menu item - is ordered between 8 a.m. and 2:30 p.m. in the downtown area, Lottie's will deliver the meal.

Hughes currently sells about 100 bagels a day. She expects demand to increase to 200 to 250 as the summer traffic peaks. If she makes more bagels than she sells, Hughes donates them to the local food pantry. There are no day-old bagels for sale in the store, she said.

Hughes has decorated 212-1/2 Bridge Street in a 50s theme, and displays work by local artist Kim Left. The store hours are 7 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Thursday, 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday. The phone number is 547-3030.

Sales point toward prosperous year in retail

Michigan retail sales improved in May for the second month in a row.

Fifty-two percent of retailers reported increased year-to-year sales for the month, while 14 percent saw no change and 34 percent experienced a decline, according to the Michigan Retail Index, a joint project of the Michigan Retailers Association and the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago.

May's figures demonstrated further improvement from April, when 47 percent reported year-to-year increases, 18 percent saw no change and 35 percent experienced a decline. April improved from March's 43-15-42 figures.

May's leading categories were jewelry (69 percent of jewelers reported increased sales) and gifts (61 percent). Electronics and computers retailers trailed the industry, with only 33 percent reporting increased sales.

Charlevoix Golf Club celebrates its 100th birthday with a golf tournament

Charlevoix Golf Club is preparing for its Centennial celebration. The greens will be traveled by 128 tournament golfers in two days Saturday-Sunday, July 13-14.

The course was built in 1896. It is one of the oldest in the country, said Charlevoix city treasurer, Rick Brandi.

Now through the tournament, a silent auction of Jim Annis' ballpark series and Charlevoix harbor is being held. The paintings are on display at the clubhouse. The final days for bids is Sunday, July 14, when the artwork will be on display at Alexander's for the tournament pig roast, from 3-5 p.m.

Annis donated the paintings for the auction to raise money for an underground sprinkler system. Centennial hats, sweaters, bag tags, cup holders and towels for golf bags are also being sold to raise money. They can be purchased at city hall.

Members of the United States Golf Association will also be attending the pig roast. They will be presenting a plaque honoring the course's anniversary.

A limited number of tickets are still available for the pig roast. They are on sale for $15 at city hall and the clubhouse.

The city course will be closed Centennial weekend for the tournament.

Holes in one

• Dick Stangis, of Charlevoix, carded a hole in one at the Belvedere Golf Club June 24. This is his second hole in one at hole number 14. The first occurred in 1993.

Stangis' playing partners were Ron Elzerman, Ken Whitley and Thomas Meyers.

• Tim Drumhiller, of Saginaw, also hit a hole in one recently as the Charlevoix Country Club.

He was using a 5-iron on the sixth hole June 28. This is Drumhiller's first hole in one. It was witnessed by his foursome partners: Michael Forbes, Dr. Louis Cannon, both of Saginaw, and Bernie Chuinard, of Troy.

3-on-3 tourney

St. Mary School of Charlevoix is accepting registrations for the upcoming 4th Annual 3-on-3 Basketball Tournament, to be held Saturday-Sunday, July 13-14.

Entry deadline is Sunday, July 7. Team fee is $60. Players must be age 9 and up. There are four players per team.

Call 547-4541 to register.

Tennis lessons

Charlevoix tennis lessons are beginning Monday, July 22. The four-week sessions are held Mondays and Wednesdays.

Children's classes will take place in the morning, with adults being taught in the afternoon.

There is a $25 fee.

Wrestling camp free for Chx. students

Dan Severn is coming to Charlevoix to conduct a wrestling camp for area students.

Severn has earned more than 60 state, national, international titles and records. He once served as an Olympic alternate.

The camp begins Monday, July 15-18, and will be held at the Charlevoix Middle School. Students from elementary to high school are invited to attend.

Admission is free for any Charlevoix student and $60 for students from surrounding schools, according to Charlevoix varsity wrestling coach, Phil Christ.

Severn's camps normally cost $250, Christ said. And he scheduled the professional fighter to teach local kids the sport of wrestling because the amount of athletes making pins on school mats is down.

For more information, call Phil Christ at 547-5816.

Biking safety tips for riders

Check your bike's condition before riding. Always wear a helmet, preferably one approved by professional companies.

Wear bright colors, avoid clothes that can get caught in the chains. Use reflectors on bike and/or clothing.

Don't ride at night. Obey the same traffic signs and signals that cars do. Ride single file and to the right of traffic. Signal with your left hand. Use bike paths or streets, whenever possible. If in doubt, yield.

Charlevoix Little League celebrates 25 years sanctioned

Sportsmanship, teamwork taught to be real winners

By Jan Korthase
Courier special writer

It started this spring like most other years. Now, 300 baseballs and 50 bats later, the 25th season of sanctioned Little League in Charlevoix has been celebrated and four first place teams will continue on in tournament play.

Departing from tradition, outgoing president Bill Trubilowicz decided to cap the silver season with an awards ceremony at Ferry Beach. He said trophies are typically handed out at the last game, but he felt it was a good time to give the kids some recognition.

"We thought it made sense to have a little gizmo," said Trubilowicz, characterizing the informal affair.

Special adult volunteers were recognized, along with the winning teams, and 10 youths who were honored for their efforts and attitude with a "good sports" medal.

Lifting his heavy medal suspended from a red, white and blue band, 10-year-old Jon Reid considered what it meant.

"I don't really know why I got it," he said. "I think it's because you participated good, you didn't argue with the coaches, and you were trying your hardest."

Reid, who also enjoys skiing and football, said he has met many good friends through Little League. He only knew a couple of teammates when the season began, but after a few games they all became friends.

"I wish the season didn't end," the young outfielder and pitcher said. Reid plans to return to the game next spring, and in the meantime keep his arm loose so he can pitch better and more often.

Veteran Little League umpire Jeff Riley said the relationships formed on Charlevoix's baseball fields are remembered by the players for a lifetime.

When Riley first came to Charlevoix he had a lot of time on his hands. Someone suggested he make the calls for Little League and he's still doing it a decade later.

"I've learned something new every year," he said. "I haven't been able to get it out of my system."

A member of the city fire department and police auxiliary, Riley has a tighter schedule these days, but he continues to carve out time for the league.

"I see kids graduating from college that I remember umpiring," Riley said. And, many of them still have a smile and a happy memory to share when they see him.

According to Little League Baseball headquarters, Williamsport, Penn., the purpose of the organization is to develop superior citizens rather than superior athletes. According to Riley, kids learn to play fair, play hard and have fun, while recognizing that the competition is just a game.

Past local president Mike Carland wanted to bring that attitude back to the game about seven years ago when he got involved. A poor coach, according to Carland and other parents involved at the time, was fostering poor sportsmanship and negative attitudes that go against the Little League standard.

"I wanted it to be a positive experience for the kids," Carland explained. "I had a good group of parents and we changed things."

Today that positive spirit still persists in Charlevoix and Trubilowicz gives credit to the 75 active volunteers who coordinate everything from concessions to uniforms. The Charlevoix organization is growing each year, but with an additional five to 10 volunteers, Trubilowicz said the program could be even bigger and better.

Carland agrees the commitment by parents fosters the league's success, and it's a virtue the kids seem to absorb.

While nearly three million boys and girls around the world participate in Little League, only one team of up to 14 players will eventually capture the Little League World Series title.

Meanwhile, millions learn about citizenship, discipline, teamwork and physical well-being, the true rewards of participation in the program.

Jon Reid, playing for Dairy Queen, takes his turn at bat during a Little League game earlier this season. Reid was among 10 youths honored last week for the sportsmanship they demonstrated during the season.

The ten teams completed competition June 26. Teams from McDonald's and the Lion's Club won season titles and will continue go to tournament play in Boyne City.

Awards listed

Ten members of the Charlevoix Little League organization have heavy brass medals hanging over bedposts, draped over mirrors or lying discretely on a dresser.

For their positive attitude, sportsmanship and trying their best to contribute to their team, Little League President Bill Trubilowicz distributed the awards voted upon by coaches within the league.

Minor league honorees are: Nathaniel Sotuyo, McDonalds of Charlevoix; Glen Bennett, Pat McKeown Ford-Lincoln-Mercury; Michael DiMartino, Charlevoix Teacher's Association; and Michael Wojan, Twin Bay Glass.

Major league honorees are: Josh Scott, Charlevoix Lion's Club; Jon Reid, Dairy Queen; Brian Cunningham, Oleson's Food Store; Joe Grubb, American Legion; Kyle Ramsey, Round Lake Lodge; and Andrew Kunas, Work & Play Shop.

Stop teen pregnancies

A new Teen Pregnancy Prevention and Health Promotion Program for young teen girls will be developed in Charlevoix, Cheboygan, and Emmet Counties.

The project is a cooperative effort of the Women's Resource Center of Northern Michigan and Northern Michigan Planned Parenthood. It is funded by a $47,225 grant from the Women's Health Funding Initiative of the Michigan Women's Foundation. The local agencies will develop a rural model of teen pregnancy prevention and health promotion. If successful, the model will be disseminated nationally.

In an effort to give young girls prevention information and skills they need to choose healthy behaviors, the program will involve young teen girls ages 11 to 15 in an intensive 10-week program of health information and skill-building. It will target girls who are considered at-risk for early sexual activity, teen pregnancy, substance use and other unhealthy behaviors.

Those most at risk include victims of sexual abuse and domestic violence, girls on probation for juvenile offenses, younger sisters of teen mothers, early-maturing girls, and those whose families are involved with Protective Services. Although the program will target high-risk girls, any girl within the age and geographic limits can participate.

"One-shot programs just don't make a difference in health behavior," said Martha Lancaster, planned parenthood associate director.

This fall, two ten-week sessions will be held in each county. Topics covered will include: self-esteem and decision-making skills, domestic and dating violence, sexual assault, reproductive health, contraception and sexually transmitted diseases, substance use and abuse, and other topics.

"Baby Think It Over," computerized dolls, which simulate crying of an infant, will help participants understand the impact of motherhood.

Norwood school not forgotten

By Nancy Ritsema
Courier columnist

Mary Davis was Norwood's first public schoolteacher. She taught in a little log shanty school east of town. In 1867 the newly elected Norwood school inspectors interviewed Mary and issued to her a certificate to teach primary school.

Mary Davis' Certificate granted her the right to instruct pupils for one or more years in the following area: orthography, reading in English, penmanship, writing, arithmetic, English grammar, modern geography and the history of the United States.

As a schoolteacher Mary's responsibilities in Norwood's earliest log school varied. In addition to teaching all grades and all subjects, she filled the kerosene lamps and cleaned the lamp chimneys each day. Quill feathers, taken from local chickens, were whittled into quill pens for each pupil.

The older boys in school helped with other tasks. Floors were swept daily and the wood stove supplied with wood. Since the wood used in the school's wood stove was often green, more smoke than heat usually surrounded those early scholars.

Misbehaving pupils were dealt with swiftly by a "switch" applied to their backside or a ruler smacked across the hands. "Mrs. Potter whaled the daylights out of Frank Richardson and me with blue beech gads that were very handy and close by in those days!" the late Ernest Harris wrote of his memories of school days in Norwood's first log school.

For many years schoolteachers took part of their pay in produce, thus "easing the burden of Norwood taxpayers," the 1879 school report states. Schoolteachers often boarded with local families, also.

The early schools in Norwood were local gathering places. Meetings between the towns of Marion and Norwood to organize Norwood Township is 1869 were held in Norwood's first log schoolhouse. Church met in the school on Sundays. Spelling bees and other student performances provided social activities.

School was in session summer and winter. The late Probate Judge of Antrim County, Ernest Harris, grew up and obtained all of his formal schooling in Norwood. He attended school summer and winter until he was 14-years-old. He then dropped the summer term and helped on the family farm but continued going to school winters in Norwood until he was 18-years-old.

Ernest Harris received more schooling than most. Many youngsters started school late and quit school early, often leaving with only a third- or fourth-grade education. Boys were expected to help with farm or other labors and saved families the wages of hired hands. Girls were also needed to help at home.

Some folk even accused parents who thought of sending their children to high school or college in other towns of "putting on airs" and contributing to juvenile discontent.

By 1883 Norwood had three school districts, consisting of two frame schools and one log schoolhouse. The schools boasted 149 children.

In 1892 the present two-room clapboard school was built. It was a fine example of the new prosperity, the town gained from its busy sawmill and dock commerce.

The ceilings of the school were pressed tin. The newest slate blackboards were hung inside and gingerbread wood trim and shutters adorned the outside. A large brass bell hung above the schoolhouse.

For 90 years, from 1867 to 1957, public school was taught in Norwood. One or two teachers taught all grades and all subjects. At one time Norwood even had its own basketball team.

After consolidation with the Charlevoix School District in 1958 the school closed for good. The Norwood Methodist Church purchased the schoolhouse from the Charlevoix School District and today uses the building as a fellowship hall.

Dolly (Farrell) Louiselle attended Norwood's one-room school from kindergarten to seventh-grade.

She lives in Norwood today with her husband Tom.

"I remember especially my teacher Mrs. Folley," Dolly recalls, "because she lived in a little house trailer all year that was parked in the Norwood schoolyard.

"All of the neighborhood kids were in school - two or three students in each grade - and the older kids looked out for the younger ones.

"Each morning we kids went out to the well in the schoolyard and pumped water to drink for the day. I remember that recess was usually extra long in the winter because we went sliding down the big hill behind the school.

"It was a neat experience to go to school in Norwood and I wouldn't trade it for anything," Dolly concluded. "I was petrified when the school closed and I had to go to school in Charlevoix!"

Sheriff cautions on fireworks

Sheriff George T. Lasater is cautioning poeple about mishandling fireworks.

There are two types of fireworks, according to Sheriff Lasater: The first kind are "Class B" fireworks and are manufactured and used for professional displays. They are over two-and-a-half inches in diameter and can contain more than 50 grams of explosives. The second kind of fireworks are called "Class C." These are commonly sold in stores. They include sparklers, fire crackers, and "fountain" types or tube fireworks.

The real danger in fireworks, says Sheriff Lasater, is that many "class B" fireworks are brought into the state by bootleggers.

"The best thing you can do for your family is to educate them," says the Sheriff. "Always follow the directions on the packaging.

Never hold fireworks in your hands or around your eyes and ears. Always use fireworks in the open, and never check a malfunctioning firework. Always leave it alone for at least an hour, and soak it with water to ensure that it won't explode.

Charlevoix grad recovering from broken neck

By Janenne Irene Froats
Courier editor

Hot-weather relief led to Kyle Russell's broken neck.

The 1996 Charlevoix graduate was injured in a freak accident when jumping feet first into a downstate lake during a visit to a technical school June 29.

"If it hadn't been for the boy there who saved him, he probably would have drowned," said Kyle's mom, Nancy Russell.

The Russells only know the young man who pulled Kyle from the lake as "Mike" — a boy who had been born with one arm. Like Kyle, he was scouting the State Technical Institute and Rehabilitation Center for possible attendance in the fall.

Kyle hoped to study cabinetry. He was involved in a four-week testing period for acceptance.

While in high school, he was a

Fines to encourage zoning compliance, new district proposed

By Janenne Irene Froats
Courier editor

Residents not abiding with city zoning could find themselves paying fines — again and again until violations cease.

City planners are scheduling a public hearing to hear opinions on their plan to issue tickets to zoning violators instead of choosing between non-enforcement of violations and court.

The amendment is designed to make zoning violations civil infractions instead of misdemeanors that have been handled through the district court. Violators will be ticketed and fines due to the city.

"If they don't want to pay the fine, then they have recourse through the court," said city zoning administrator, Kathy Staton.

Zoning enforcement can become difficult when city officials have to choose between costly, time consuming court procedures for a resident who won't lower their hedge or clean up their yard and doing nothing.

"This way we can just go out and hand out a ticket, and we can do it everyday," said city planner, Gerry Harsch. "We don't think it will take too long for them to catch on."

Harsch said a violations bu-

City planners want to keep Charlevoix's south entrance residential, even though the homes there are increasingly being used for businesses.

A proposed zoning amendment that would establish a "mixed use district" would require businesses to maintain a residential look and would not allow out-front parking.

The district's purpose is to accommodate retail and service establishments, and residences, within the city. A specific corridor, running Bridge Street, from Carpenter to Hurlbut.

The uses permitted in and regulations related to the district are intended to preserve the traditional character and appearance of the

Def Leppard: Small crowd, minor problems at Castle opener

By Janenne Irene Froats
Courier editor

One man was allowed to sleep in a grocery store parking lot when the police found him vomiting there at 12:35 a.m. Sunday.

Two older, white males reportedly wandered Ferry Beach hassling people.

Another group was found to have open alcohol containers in their vehicle near Pointes North Inn downtown.

These are examples of how Charlevoix was effected by the Def Leppard concert Saturday.

"Nothing really serious, but a lot of little things," said city police chief, Dennis Halverson.

Def Leppard didn't draw 10,000 fans to Castle Farms like it did in the 1980s. With years passing between rock-concert gatherings at the former Loeb farm, only 3,000 people found their way through the Castle gate.

"It was an extremely smaller crowd than we anticipated," Halverson said.

Although the band didn't draw the number of people it once did, it did draw an entourage of police officers from state, county and city agencies.

"We tried to have a big police presence," Halverson said.

State Troopers from the Petoskey, Gaylord, and Kalkaska posts worked overtime in the area. The Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department and Charlevoix City Police also manned more cars.

Even though there were many marked police cars cruising the roads, drivers who had drank before or during the concert climbed behind the wheel.

There were 10 people arrested for drunk driving near the castle, five for disorderly conduct, and at least 23 traffic-related stops, according to the Michigan State Police, Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department and Charlevoix City Police.

There was also one minor in possession and one arrest for controlled substance reported by Sheriff George T. Lasater.

There were fewer problems Saturday than in past years, a result of lower concert attendance, state police reported. The castle is known to draw 10-12,000 people for its rock concerts.

Halverson said there were no traffic jams in town like is historically found in town the evening of a rock concert.

The Charlevoix area can expect another influx of concert fans on Sunday, July 21, when the Castle will host Ted Nugent and Bad Company.

Beaver Islander docks downtown, first time since fall

By Janenne Irene Froats
Courier editor

The Beaver Islander can again be boarded at the downtown dock.

As of the Fourth of July, the ferry returned to Bridge Park after many months of departing from Ferry Beach. It was stationed elsewhere while the city renovated the waterfront and constructed a building for the ferry, the U.S. Coast Guard, sewer lift stations and public restrooms.

Although Beaver Islander director, Lynn DeGrow, said ongoing construction at the park and the recent move is causing confusion.

"Any change is always confusing," he said.

Once the construction at the waterfront has ended, DeGrow expects the Beaver Islander to have a top-notch building — and ferry — once the new stern-loading boat comes in.

The improvements are part of the $5.2 million renovation to Bridge Park. A 50-ton ramp has been installed to enable tractor trailers to back their loads right onto the ferry and unhook. This saves hours of loading and unloading by hand, and the damage that comes with it, DeGrow said.

Moving vans will be able to drive right onto the ferry and drive off onto the island.

Passengers, vehicles and small freight are leaving the downtown dock via the ferry. Large freight could still he loaded from Ferry Beach, depending on how this week's shipments go, DeGrow said.

When completed, the new dock, office and adjacent parking area will make traveling to the mainland more convenient for islanders.

Charlevoix city manager, Mike Wiesner, said this is an improvement for everyone.

"What's good for the island is good for Charlevoix," he said. "From what I'm told, the island residents might more loyal to our local businesses than we are."

Boating accident kills downstate man Friday

A man died shortly after being run over by a boat from which he was thrown about 2:15 p.m. Friday.

Mark Wolgast, 39, of Freeland, was thrown from the 32-foot Foundation power boat near Hemingway Pointe when the boat hit the wake from another boat, the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department reported.

He was then run over by the boat he fell from. The driver, Richard Gosnell, 30, of St. Clair Shores, had jumped into the water to help his friend, a deputy said.

Wolgast was taken to Charlevoix Area Hospital by Charlevoix City Ambulance, where he was pronounced dead from multiple lacerations, including a leg that was all but cut off.

According to the sheriff's department, drivers of the boat causing the wake will not be charged. Also, Gosnell was within the legal speed limit for that area of the lake.

The accident is still under investigation.

Downstate motorcyclist injured by Charlevoix woman

A car collided with a motorcycle 1:10 p.m. Wednesday, July 3, at the corner of U.S. 31 and Boyne City-Charlevoix Road.

Driver of the 1996 Honda, Richard Dorffer, 24 of Dalton, Ohio, was treated and released from Charlevoix Area Hospital. His passenger, Shannon Dawson, 21 of Canal Fulton, Ohio, was also treated and released.

They were hit by Laurie VanLoo, 42 of Charlevoix. VanLoo told police that she didn't see the motorcycle before pulling onto U.S. 31, according to the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department.

VanLoo was driving a 1990 Mercury.

A citation for failure to yield is pending further investigation, the sheriff's department reported.

wrestler and a bus boy at Flap Jack.

The group of boys visiting the college had traveled to the lake from their campus dorm.

Hours later, Nancy was answering the phone at the family's Norwood farm. Shortly following, she and her husband, Gordon, were on their way to Borgess Hospital in Kalamazoo.

The next day, Kyle had surgery, fusing his sixth and seventh vertebrae.

Even the doctor couldn't explain why Kyle's neck broke when he leapt off the dock and into about four feet of water. He said it was extremely rare for someone to break their neck jumping feet first into the water.

"He's categorized quadriplegic," Gordon said. He has some use of his arms.

During the surgery, it was discovered that Kyle's spinal cord was pinched, not severed. There was, and is, hope for him regaining use of his body from the armpits down.

"To see him confined the way he is, is kind of a heart break," Gordon said.

Kyle is still at Borgess. He is expected to be moved to Munson Medical Center in Traverse City as soon as a bought with pneumonia clears.

Kyle is determined to leave the hospital walking.

"They (doctors) tell us the worst and whatever we get back, we praise the Lord for," Gordon said.

Kyle's father said his son possesses the kind of drive for recovery that can make a difference.

"He tells everyone he's going to walk out of there," Nancy said. "We're praying that that will happen."

Collection cans have been place in stores throughout Charlevoix to help the family with traveling expenses and medical bills.

Kyle can receive cards and balloons. Flowers cannot be sent until he leaves the Neurologic Care Unit. Kyle Russell, Borgess Medical Center, NCU Unit, Room 1, 1521 Gull Road, Kalamazoo, MI, 49001-1640.

Norwood author spends 40 years preserving a society

By Janenne Irene Froats
Courier editor

The to-do of Norwood lives on, even though Bertha Parsons does not.

The former farmer's wife became a published author two years after her death. Her family diligently worked to finish the book she spent 40 years envisioning and hand writing.

Now, Bertha's lifetime memories of Norwood are preserved and on sale within the pages of "For Old Times' Sake."

The books covers 1866 to 1958. It includes plats of Norwood, Bertha's and other people's recollections, the legend of Lime Ledge Point, poems and an appendix of farmers.

"It was quite a lively town at one time," recalls Bill Parsons, Bertha's husband. "When the sawmill went out, the town went out with it.

"It became a ghost town until the factories came."

Bill and Bertha Parsons both grew up near Norwood. Bill used to hike or ski across the one-mile field that separated his and his wife-to-be's homes. Both of their fathers were lumberman in the sawmills.

Since financial crisis came to Norwood, long-time families have moved on. Bertha's goal, Bill said, was to preserve the town's history for families who have lost old-time stories with the dying of elderly loved ones. Also, to teach newly arriving families the history of the town.

Bertha Parsons

"By keeping track, the new people can see what it was like before," said Terri Parsons, who moved into the little town when she married her husband, David Parsons. He is one of Bertha's four sons, the one who is now running the family farm.

When the Parsons were first planting and harvesting their way through the seasons, there was no running water. People made music on family instruments at house parties. Bertha added the sounds of her keyboard to many social gatherings.

"She had a great love and desire for the town," Bill said. "Norwood was No. 1 in her life."

Bertha grew up through years of schooling, community quilting bees, Christmas programs and women's meetings. She spent 40 years collecting and recording hometown history. It was all documented by the 79-year-old before she left her family and home behind.

Bill and Terri became determined to fulfill a long-time dream.

Two years after her death, with Saturday being the anniversary, the book is on sale at Bridge Street Book Shop. About 80 copies have been sold from either the store or Bill's car.

Money raised through the book is being donated to the Barnard United Methodist Church. That is where Bertha was baptized and attended church throughout her life.

Before her death, Bertha had given her notes to a typist to get the book finished. However, after slow editing and typing, the notes were retrieved.

Terry went to work, comparing what had been typed with "grandma's" notes.

"I like the way she had said it better," the Boyne City teacher said. "So, I put it back in her own words."

A year-and-a-half and many revisions later, Bertha Parson's dream came out in soft cover. A picture of the windmill in which she played as a child decorates the front of the book.

"What a relief," Bill said. "I feel it's an honor to have accomplished what she wanted.

"Now it can go out to the people and they can read of her experiences. I'm sure she would be proud of the book if she could see it."

Learn about 9-1-1 and receive the biggest benefit

EDITORIAL

Relax.

Make the call.

The 9-1-1 emergency service is costing taxpayers millions of dollars. And yet, people are nervous about when and when not to dial the three numbers that bring emergency help.

In Charlevoix, Cheboygan and Emmet counties, dialing 9-1-1 means more than reporting a life-threatening situation. It brings a police officer to your door so you can report a theft. It brings a deputy to an accident to file the report required by insurance companies.

"When in doubt, they need to make the call," said Gordon Neihardt, CCE central dispatch director.

Calls that should be placed to local police or fire offices include questions about parking fines, agency operating hours, registering a gun, parade times, fire safety and filing a minor complaint.

In Charlevoix, general calls should be placed to 547-3258. If a recording answers, leave a message.

Injuries and accidents should not be left on the recorder. If they are placed there after hours Friday, someone might not get the message until Monday morning, according to Charlevoix police chief, Dennis Halverson.

Many area offices do not staff 24-hour dispatchers. Administrative questions should be handled during regular business hours.

Dispatchers are on duty at 9-1-1 around the clock.

One Charlevoix caller left a message at the police station about a stolen bike. This is a 9-1-1 call. An officer can be dispatched to come and look over and assess the location.

Halverson said he doesn't want days to pass between the time a crime occurs and the police show up to investigate it.

"We want to serve better than that," he said.

The system is designed so that central dispatch and emergency personnel can communicate easily, allowing prioritizing of calls. Also, dispatched responders can always be canceled.

If an ambulance arrives at an accident where the parties involve refuse transport, they will not be charged for the call.

Let the system do what it's designed to do. It takes an element of trust. But that won't be established until residents relax enough to put their tax dollars to work.

The system can be used to report a crime or get emergency help. Not all calls have to reflect the television show's severity.

Many people have been made to feel self conscious at some point in their life during a visit to an emergency room. Was the trip really necessary?

9-1-1 isn't the emergency room. And the person on the other end of the line can help the caller assess what needs to be done. They are trained professionals.

Everyone has a different opinion of what an emergency is. We don't expect that to change. However, if everyone educates themselves on how and when to use 9-1-1, the differences will become less important and the system services us all.

Letters to the Editor

Thanks to the community for a meaningful Fourth of July parade

Editor,

We, VFW Post 1153 and American Legion Post 226, wish to express our appreciation to the Charlevoix City Council Administration and the Police and Sheriff's Departments, for their assistance in helping establish the first 4th of July Parade in 66 years in Charlevoix.

The Vietnam Vets from Saginaw, Mich., added a sparkling proficiency with their rifle squad. We have invited them to be our guests again next year.

We extend our gratitude to the men and women of the Michigan Air National Guard air and ground crews, who made the fly-over possible.

Our thanks to Dale Boss with his Petunia Truck for his music and support.

Lastly, we wish to thank the many people who came to observe the parade and ceremony celebrating this nation's birthday, the most important event in the history of our nation. The American dream is re-ignited every 4th of July by our nation for all men, everywhere.

Continue clearing downtown waterfront

Editor:

Wow! Charlevoix The Beautiful is now even more beautiful. We have a second "East Park," and we are about to get a third (Bridge Park). The controversy over the Parkside building is over and the light comes shining through. That light is the reflection from our harbor and its boats. I do miss the restaurant, but the building was not the restaurant any longer, and now I can enjoy the view.

The next opening up of our valuable asset should be to find a new home for our Chamber of Commerce. Knock the second floor off that building — or demolish the whole building.

Or is it an oxymoron to have the Chamber of Commerce blocking our visitors' view of our beautiful harbor. I thing we can spare one of our sweatshirt shops for the Chamber's new accommodations.

Sincerely,
Larry Freedman

Theft steals local man's belief in good

Dear Editor,

First it was the Tooth Fairy, then it was the Easter Bunny, then it was Santa Claus, then it was the theft of two items from my home in Charlevoix. It's almost as if there's nothing left to believe in any more.

When my wife and I bought our home in Charlevoix three years ago, we had illusions about what small town life was all about. Apparently, we never took into consideration the fact that someone would steal anything from our home. Although the "Storchan's Bar and Grill" sign which hung from our porch has been replaced, the coyote sculpture that sat in the garden area of our front lawn has not. Optimists that we are, we do intend to replace it on our next trip to the southwest.

Both thefts have been reported to the Charlevoix Police Department. I will personally pay $100 for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the person(s) responsible for these thefts. Please contact the Charlevoix Police Department with any information that you may have.

Santa Claus, the Easter Bunny, and the Tooth Fairy may be myths, but crime isn't. It's everywhere, even in Charlevoix the Beautiful. How very sad!

Stolen motor no good: Return it, please

Editor,

This letter is an open invitation to the person or persons who stole the 35 horse power Mercury outboard motor from Sherman Street in Charlevoix last week to please return it. The motor by itself will be useless to whoever helped themselves to it. Without the electrical system and controls that connect to it, the motor will not start or run. Please either return the motor to 222 Sherman Street or call 547-5415 to leave a message where it can be picked up. Two children who had planned on doing some fishing this summer are greatly disappointed. In the mean time those who service and repair outboard motors, please be on the lookout for a motor of this size and type, vintage 1967.

Dillon-Daavid

Patricia Butcher and John Dillon, both of Charlevoix, announce the engagement of their daughter, Christine Dillon, to Joel Daavid, of Santa Monica, Calif. Joel is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Esqueda, of San Antonio, Texas.

Christine is a 1990 graduate of Charlevoix High School and 1991 Miss Charlevoix. She attended Western Michigan University for two years before transferring to Pepperdine University in Malibu, Calif. She graduated from Pepperdine in 1995 and is employed there as assistant program administrator.

Her fiance is a recent graduate of The American Film Institute in Hollywood, Calif. He is self-employed as a director of photography.

A Aug. 17, 1996, wedding is planned at the Frank Lloyd Wright Ranch in Malibu, Calif.

Sailor comes home to recruit

Navy Chief Petty Officer Douglas M. Pidek, the 33-year-old son of John and Phyliss Pidek of Charlevoix, knows what it's like to be on the nation's front line of defense. The Charlevoix graduate is assigned to the guided-missile frigate U.S.S. Ford. He recently returned to his home port of Bremerton, Wash., after a six-month deployment to the Middle East.

Pidek, a gas turbine systems technician, repairs engines used to power the ship.

He is currently involved in a six-week training session to become a Navy recruiter for northern Michigan. He will be stationed in Gaylord. Pidek will bring his wife, Ramona, and four children to his new station.

Pidek and the Ford demonstrated their flexibility by traveling more than 4,000 miles from the Arabian Gulf to the South China Sea in less than a week. The ship and its sailors were part of an effort to enforce United Nations sanctions against Iraq.

The battle group was also sent to the South China Sea region from the Arabian Gulf to monitor the recent Chinese military exercises conducted in the Taiwan Strait.

Traveling the world on a high-tech and capable ship like the Ford has been an exciting experience for Pidek.

"I enjoy my job and the people I am doing it with. I also enjoy the way people look up to you and see how tough a job you are doing for the country," said Pidek, a 14-year Navy veteran.

Strang-Whims

Mr. and Mrs. William Kenneth Strang, of Monarch Beach, Calif., and James Whims, of Gross Pointe, announce the engagement of their children, Kimberly Ann Strang and Robert Sherwood Whims.

The Whims have owned property on Holy Island since 1941 and have been summer residents in the area since.

The wedding is set for July 13, 1996, on Holy Island on Lake Charlevoix.

The groom-to-be lives in Laguna Niguel, Calif. He is a graduate of the University of Michigan. He received a juris doctor from Pepperdine University Law School in 1988 and is currently deputy district attorney for Orange County, Calif.

Kimberly Ann Strang lives in Aliso Viejo, Calif. She is a graduate of the University of California and received a juris doctor in 1989 from the University of San Diego. She is also a deputy district attorney for Orange County.

Kimberly's family is of direct descent, by marriage, of James Strang, a rather controversial king who ruled Beaver Island from 1850-1856. The king and his followers inhabited Beaver Island and had their "high Holy Day on Holy Island.

The couple first met in 1993 in California. They were struck with the unique coincidence of their family histories.

Prior to this wedding, the only two people ever married on Holy Island were the groom's parents in 1952. The groom's mother, Mary Whims, is deceased.

BEACONS OF BLESSINGS

By Bruce Hamilton
Community Church of God

Part of my heart has been half a world away in Africa for the last week. You see, my daughter is a broadcasting major at Anderson (Ind.) University, and she was selected as one of two students to be a part of a film crew that is currently doing a documentary on the Masi tribe of Tanzania.

When she first broke the news about the possibility of being chosen for the trip, my first reaction was "please, dear Lord, no — she's so young." But then as I looked into her eyes and listened to her heart and heard more and more about the adventure's possibilities, there was no way I could keep her from getting involved. Little did I know that the girls had already ganged up on me anyway, Mom knew and was in favor of it all even before Dad had an inkling.

When the word came that she had indeed been chosen for the journey, our first reaction was "now what Lord?" We shared Deb's opportunity with our church family and they were so wonderful in helping us raise the funds she needed to go in relatively short order. A day at Burns Clinic filled her arms with needles and pockets with medications to protect her from the various diseases they said were a problem in the area. A copy of her birth certificate and some quickie photos went off to the Department of State for her passport. Wardrobe adjustments had to be made because women and blue jeans were not on the list of cultural acceptability where she was headed.

And then, before we knew it, it was time for her to go. We took her to her crew in Indiana and off she jetted for London, then Dar Es Salaam and finally Mount Kilamanjaro, where they would trek inland to a small village known as Arusha. Even in an age where computers and satellites make global communication almost instantaneous, we haven't heard a word since she got there. They say that Africa is the "least connected" continent on earth. But that's okay. She'll be home on the thirteenth and I'm looking forward to the stories, and the changes that we'll see in her.

So why this "fatherly" sharing you may ask? Because adventures come in every family's life. Adventures that involve growth and change, things that you may never have imagined yourself facing, all kinds of possibilities and challenges. How you face them is the key.

Realize that just as most every parent wants nothing but the best for their children, God has nothing but the best in mind for you. You may wonder why things happen the way they do from time to time, but if you are truly trusting God, the reason inevitably becomes clear. In Matthew 7:11, the Lord put it this way: "If you, then, though you are evil, know how to give good gifts to those ask him!" I know I'm not the best Dad in the world, but I'm deeply grateful for the way God and His family help pull everything together!

School board elect officers, hire new high school teacher

B. J. Hetler
Courier reporter

Charlevoix school board held its annual organizational meeting July 2. Actions included election of officers and the swearing in of newly elected board members, Jerry Owens and Larry Levengood.

A discussion of possibly increasing school lunch prices took place, the board said, because of escalating hot lunch costs.

The general fund supplements the hot lunch program and the projected supplement for fiscal year 1996-1997 is $50,000. Students are currently charged lunch prices of $1.50 at the high school and middle school and $1.25 at the elementary school.

A decision was not made as to if the prices would go up.

The board did, however, hire a new middle school special education teacher. Mark Drenth, a 1980 Charlevoix High School graduate, received his degrees from Central Michigan University in 1988. He taught in Boyne Falls and at Cadillac High School.

Middle school principal, Dennis VanGuilder, said he was honored to recommend Drenth to the board "as one of the best special education teachers. I'm tickled pink to recommend Mark Drenth, he's coming home."

Drenth, 34, begins teaching at the Charlevoix Middle School this September. "I'm excited to be here in Charlevoix again," he said.

The board took a break from its meeting to troop out for an examination of the arches that are part of the high school's design.

Age and moisture have resulted in dry rot of the wooden structures. The problem was evaluated by engineers and they will make a recommendation for improvement on August 5.

Charlevoix school board members, as of July 1:

Chairman Pro-Tem:	Roberta Jackson
President:	Mary Lee Campbell
Vice President:	Allen Telgenhof
Secretary:	Larry Levengood
Treasurer:	Sulane Hamilton

Public meeting to check Big Rock decommissioning plan

In an attempt to ensure that Big Rock Point nuclear power plant is decommissioned in the safest way possible, the Northern Chapter of Don't Waste Michigan hired Radioactive Waste Management Associates to review the plan. The company is an independent consulting firm established in 1989 to assist state and local governments, and citizen organizations, in dealing with radioactive waste issues. It is comprised of scientists, economists and engineers.

The report on Big Rock Point is now finished and Dr. Marvin Resnikoff will present its conclusions 7 p.m. Thursday, July 11th, in the Petoskey Room at the Holiday Inn on U.S. 131 in Petoskey.

Resnikoff received his doctorate in high energy, theoretical physics from the University of Michigan in 1965 and has been a technical consultant on nuclear waste matters in the states of New York, Illinois and also for the state of Lower Saxony, West Germany.

He has testified on numerous occasions before the U.S. Congress and state legislators and has taught at the New York State University in Buffalo. He is a world-wide known author of several books.

Planners consider new mixed use district for south Bridge

Bridge Street corridor, according to an outline of the plan.

Permitted uses are: bakeries, banks, barber or beauty shops, florist shops, food and meat markets, hardware stores, restaurants and taverns, lodge halls, private clubs, automobile parts and enclosed repair shops, nurseries, gas stations, motels and hotels, and some bed and breakfasts.

The district is zoned commercial.

Specific zoning stipulations include a 15-25 feet front yard requirement. Allowable lot widths are still being determined by city planner, Gerry Harsch. Parking would be permitted to the side or rear of the structure.

Buildings would also have to blend with homes within the district, meaning that strip-mall appearances would not be allowed.

The mixed use district will be further discussed by planners before a public hearing is scheduled. Public hearings must be announced 15 days prior to the date.

Fines considered for zoning violators

reau would be established to receive fines. Staton said she expects it to be little more than a collection box at city hall.

Money collected will go into the city's general fund as income. The amendment allows the zoning administrator, city planner and city police officer to write tickets.

Boyne City passed a similar ordinance in February 1995.

Boyne City manager, Randy Frykberg, said Tuesday that compliance to the city ordinance has improved "phenomenally" since the change that came shortly after the state approved civil infraction enforcement by municipalities.

Although not much money has been collected, Frykberg said, people are making the changes needed to conform to city policy. Warning letters are sent informing violators that a ticket will follow if the problem is not corrected.

"Now we can follow through and treat everybody fair, Frykberg said. "The person who feels their right and the community's wrong still has that step to go to court."

Most fines in Boyne City have been established at $50, $100 and $200 fines, for first, second and third violations, respectively.

State law limits civil infraction fines to $500 each, However, every day the violation continues is considered a separate violation.

Charlevoix planners are proposing a $150 fine for non-repeat offenders. A second time violation of the ordinance would cost $300, according to the proposed amendment. The city can also impose a lien for fines and costs which are assessed as a result of a ticket.

If a violator files for a variance, the zoning administrator may delay enforcement until a hearing is held on the variance request.

A public hearing for the amendment is yet to be scheduled.

City planners are also considering another zoning amendment.

Enough local logos: Charlevoix clothing stores ban identifier

By Jan Korthase
Courier special writer

Some might consider them plain, but others appreciate the bright, logoless casual clothes on the racks at Color Wear in downtown Charlevoix.

Manager Jean Musilek describes the store as "something new in town, something a bit different than what they're used to seeing around here."

Owner Jim Mabee felt his two other stores and shops around Charlevoix carry enough merchandise promoting the Charlevoix logo. Color Wear offers clothes to suit the casual, comfortable Charlevoix style for adults.

"They saw how popular sweatshirts were around town and they thought they'd try a different angle on it," Musilek said.

Shorts, sweatpants and matching bags and hats, all in different styles and colors are displayed on racks throughout the store.

A similar concept has been decided at the new Kids Wear store next door. Also owned by Mabee, the kids clothes sometimes include colorful animals or details, but the Charlevoix logo is again conspicuously absent.

Musilek said the children's apparel shop, complete with T-shirts, dresses, backpacks and other accessories for kids, is intended to fill the void of basic children's clothing in Charlevoix.

Hours for both stores are 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. seven days a week, through the summer.

Musilek said she doesn't think anyone will miss the Charlevoix theme. "No, I don't think so at all. There's enough of that in town. ... There just wasn't another need for that. No I don't think they'll be disappointed. There's only been positive feedback."

Leigh Sherwood, an employee of Color Wear, and store manager, Jean Musilek, are helping Charlevoix tourists choose from their line of athletic clothes. There's only one stipulation to buying: not one piece of clothing can be used as a map marker.

Charlevoix Lions Club prepares for cane sale

The Charlevoix Lions Club will hold its White Cane Fundraiser Friday-Saturday, July 12-13. They will seek contributions for Lion-sponsored charities.

Sixty-six years ago the Peoria Illinois Lions Club introduced the first civic safety program using the white cane with its red bands as a means for identifying and protecting the sight-impaired when they are crossing streets or otherwise moving about. White canes also serve to remind the public to be sensitive and helpful when they see people using white canes with red bands.

Charities such as Michigan Eye Bank and Transplant Center, Michigan leader dogs and the Welcome Home for the Blind benefit from the money raised.

The club recently donated an eye testing machine to Charlevoix schools. The Lions also take in used eyeglasses for distribution in needy countries.

Onward and upward: Career moves

New chief of staff at Charlevoix Area Hospital

Mitchell Carey, M.D., has been elected chief of the medical staff at Charlevoix Area Hospital.

Dr. Carey

Dr. Carey has been a family practitioner on the Charlevoix Area Hospital staff since 1979.

He earned his medical degree at Wayne State University in 1976 and served his residency at Saginaw Cooperative Hospitals. He is certified by the American Board of Family Practice. Carey is on the staff of the East Jordan Family Health Center.

The hospital's 25-member active medical staff also elected Marc Lame, M.D., as vice chief of staff, and Edward Newcomb, M.D., as secretary. Also elected to serve on the executive committee is John Lignell, M.D.

The chief of staff serves as an ex-officio member of the hospital board of directors and, along with the executive committee, oversees the medical staff policies, procedures and quality assurance at the hospital.

Local girl promoted to Weathervane's assistant

Jennifer Fay Donker, daughter Bob and Judy Clock, is the new assistant manager at Stafford's Weathervane Restaurant.

Donker has worked at the Weathervane for 12 years, and has worked in almost every area of restaurant operations.

She is a 1985 graduate of Charlevoix High School.

Fourth of July BLAST

Photos by B. J. Hetler

A Secret Service agent, or a member of the Democratic Party, gives a Bob Dole look-alike a knee to hurry him along in the Horton Bay parade on July the Fourth.

Flags waved and onlookers participated in patriotism on Fourth of July in Charlevoix. A group of veterans brought the historic celebration back to downtown streets this year.

A clown stops to tell a joke to the crowd at the Fourth of July Horton Bay parade.

Charlevoix celebrated, too

No bugles sounded and no drums were pounded in Charlevoix's first Fourth of July parade in years. But the sun shone brightly on military uniforms and on the seniors, parents, kids and family dogs who listened to marching orders break Bridge Street silence.

Veterans and servicemen marched into East Park to commemorate Independence Day.

A. J. French, Jr. from the U.S. Coast Guard and a past commander of the American Legion and VFW, was one of the marchers. He said he wished that the parade had included a band, but he knew it would get better in time.

The crowd didn't seem to care about a band. People applauded after the parade ended with a salute to colors by the rifle squad.

Parade organizer, Charlie Butcher, said he was surprised and moved by the crowd's reaction. He removed his cap and took a bow.

Pro athlete comes to town to teach kids wrestling

By B.J. Hetler
Courier reporter

Twenty-one years ago Charlevoix varsity wrestling coach, Phil Christ, wrestled a student from Montrose in the high school state finals. Christ lost.

Christ

"I was pinned in the first period," Christ said. "I underestimated his ability."

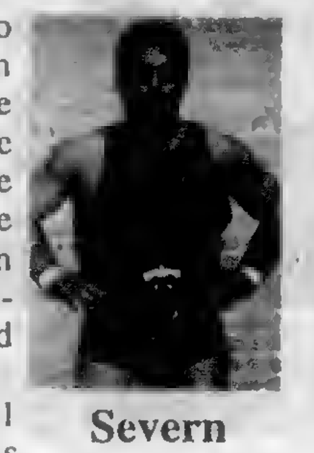
That former student is Dan Severn, now a world champion. Christ keeps in touch with Severn through the world of wrestling. He has arranged for Severn to conduct a wrestling camp at the Charlevoix Middle School July 15 through 18.

Severn brings his 25 years of wrestling experience as a competitor and coach to elementary through high school kids.

"He's a very likeable guy," Christ said. "He's very good with kids." Severn is approachable and takes the time to talk with the kids, he said.

The three-day camp is designed to get kids interested in wrestling. Wrestling has been in a decline, and both Christ and Severn want to see it climb back up.

"I think it's great that he'll take time out of his busy schedule to come up," Christ said. It is Severn's first time in the area, so it is a new experience for him.



Severn

About 20 to 30 kids from Charlevoix have signed up for the camp, and more than 50 have signed up from Petoskey, Traverse City and other cities.

Severn will teach the kids that wrestling takes dedication and mental preparedness, as well as technique, Christ said. Every kid will have a chance to meet the world champion and to learn what it takes to be one.

For more information on the camp, call coach Phil Christ at 547-5816.

Boating safety tip

Boating is a summer highlight in northern Michigan. To have a safe, fun summer on the water, abide by the following safety rules:

Be sure everyone wears a personal flotation device. Check equipment and fuel level before departing. If you plan to be out of sight of the shore line, carry emergency beacons and/or a ship to shore radio. Don't boat in bad weather or near swimmers and water skiers. Always let someone know where you are going and your expected time of return.

How Hot Is It?

The joke is, it's hot enough to make you uncomfortable. The best way to beat the heat is to Call Bryant to the rescue for central air conditioning. We'll beat the heat for you.

Decisions pending on post office move

By Jan Korthase
Courier special writer

By this time next year, the Charlevoix Post Office may have three times the room for its operations.

Postmaster Jay Wheatley said the volume of activity in Charlevoix has escalated dramatically from what the building was designed for in 1955. Two or three carriers have now become 10. In just the last four years, the staff has grown from 15 to 23 employees.

"We just don't have any room whatsoever," he said.

Jeff Stozek, Real Estate Specialist for the U.S. Postal Service in Chicago, said a site on the west side of M-66 near Kmart has been selected for a new post office. Although the number and locations of parcels considered is not public information, Stozek said the 2.5-acre site fit the requirements for the new facility. He added, there is not a conscious effort to remove the post office from the downtown area.

"A site of that size really didn't exist in the downtown area," Stozek explained. "It would be nice to be downtown but there isn't anything in downtown area to accommodate what we want to do."

Features and ownership of the property are currently being evaluated. If everything comes back all right, Stozek said an offer will be made for the land. He hopes that will happen in August or September and construction may follow in as little as 30 days. Completion would be expected next spring or summer.

Stozek said the building will likely be constructed of brick, the material most durable and maintenance free. It will include a store rather than a typical lobby. Customers can pick up items they need and pay at a cash register instead of waiting for service at the counter.

Events in brief

Watch election signs

Candidate supporters zealously sticking election propaganda in city right-of-ways are breaking the law.

Charlevoix Police Chief, Dennis Halverson, said signs can only be placed on private property with the permission of the owner.

Signs placed between the curbs and sidewalks of city property will be removed by police, Halverson said. He asks citizens to help keep the areas clear by not placing advertisements in the right-of-ways.

Catch that thief

An employee at Carey's Shoes on Bridge Street didn't just let last week's shoplifter walk away.

She chased him down the block Wednesday, until she lost the white male near 7-Eleven, Charlevoix police chief, Dennis Halverson, said.

The 6-foot man, wearing a green sweatshirt, was seen stealing a pair of shoes. He is described as having a thin build and being in his late teens or early 20s.

The same day, someone entered Bloomin Wear and took cash from the register while the employee was off the floor.

Halverson said there's no evidence connecting the two events. However, it's unusual for two crimes like this to be reported from downtown stores in one day.

Speed: cause in death

Speed contributed to the June 25 crash of a car driven by Jason Staph, 20, of Charlevoix, state police said. One passenger is dead and one is still hospitalized.

Skid-mark measurements by state police show the car was traveling an estimated 75 mph when it went off the road and rolled over. But witnesses estimate the car's speed at 80 to 90 mph, police said.

The accident occurred on Howard Road near Intertown Road, south of Petoskey.

Killed in the accident was Michael Burmeister, 19, of Boyne City. His sister, Danyel Burmeister, 17, remains in fair condition at Northern Michigan Hospital, according to a spokeswoman.

SCRAPBOOK

Charlevoix Golf Club celebrates its 100th

John P. Wilson, a prominent Chicago attorney, who joined the Chicago Club in 1883, and Edward C. Waller, also of Chicago, founded the Charlevoix Golf Club in 1896.

The course, designed by the renowned golf course architect, Willie Watson, is identified as one of the earliest regulation golf courses in the United States.

Watson, a golfer from Scotland, came to this country to help promote the game of golf in the late 1800s. He assisted in many golf course promotions and designed throughout the United States.

The original course was designed as nine holes, located west of Mercer Boulevard. It was 2,645 yards.

In 1899, a brochure was published by the Pere Marquette Railroad advertising two golf tournaments to be played in July and August. It described the golf course as "for the most part level with sandy soil, topped with light sod, and comparatively free from difficulty for the average buyer."

In January 1990, more than 100 acres of additional land was purchased by members of the Chicago Club, and by 1903 the course became 18 holes. A new watering system was added in September 1908 to make it the finest and most beautiful course in this part of the country, according to information in the book Historic Charlevoix.

On April 14, 1937, the Chicago Club turned their golf course over to the City of Charlevoix for $1. The city has successfully maintained and operated it as a public nine-hole course ever since.

The Charlevoix City Council, on July 9, 1990, approved and accepted a Golf Course Master Plan to further beautify and improve the historic course. Work is scheduled to be completed by this weekend's Centennial Celebration.

Local Kiwanians travel to Salt Lake for convention

Charlevoix's Merle and Nan VandenBerg, and Harold and Fran Pletz, were among 12,000 Kiwanis International members gathered in Salt Lake City recently. VandenBerg is presently Lt. Governor of Division #22 of Michigan and Pletz is a past governor of the Michigan District.

Members assembled for their 81st annual convention. The Kiwanians hoped to do more than fill the hotels and pack restaurants. They want to raise awareness for a worldwide service project.

The organization, in conjunction with UNICEF, is in the midst of its first world-service project to eliminate the leading preventable cause of mental retardation — iodine deficiency.

Kiwanians have committed to raise $75 million by the year 2000 to rid the world of the deficiency. Iodine is an essential micro nutrient in the human diet. A lack of the substance can cause serious health problems in children and even stillbirths.

They have raised or have commitments for over $11 million.

Carnival placement under fire

By Janenne Irene Froats
Courier editor

Mayor Josh Barnes is frustrated.

And his gavel got a workout Monday at the city council meeting when a petition protesting the placement of the Venetian carnival caused yet another uproar.

City council backed a Chamber of Commerce plan to place the carnival in two public parking lots behind Bridge Street. Barnes said the business owners he's talked to were supportive of the decision.

When the council discussed the issue two weeks ago, it was believed that Birdie Whitley was the only business owner opposed. She owns Birdie's Beauty Shop on Mason Street. The ferris wheel is expected to be outside her front door.

Birdie said she didn't start the petition. But she no longer feels alone in her concerns about the carnival.

"I didn't want to be the only witch downtown. Come to find out, I wasn't," she said. Her business will be without any street access if the carnival is placed on Mason and across the parking lots. She said the situation would cause hardships for two of the women who rent chairs in her shop. She suggested financial enumeration..

The petition has more downtown business owners' signatures on it. People don't want to lose the 69 parking spaces within the two lots.

However, city manager, Mike Wiesner, said that having the carnival at the waterfront took up about 80 spaces. The decision of where this year's carnival

Street renaming to be revisited

By Janenne Irene Froats
Courier editor

Jill Picha could have started a trend when she refused to acknowledge her address change from Belvedere Avenue to East Hurlbut.

She and her neighbor, Linne Kukes, presented a petition to city council Monday with nearly every one of the 18 bluff-side residents signatures on it. The goal: To get the name of the street changed again.

Hurlbut is not acceptable.

Picha said Belvedere Bluff, Belvedere Ridge, any acceptable name that retains the Belvedere name, the Belvedere tradition. If the city doesn't respond, all of the lakeside homes could be placing their mailboxes at the bottom of the bluff — on Belvedere.

Councilman, Alwyn "Butch" Russell said the name has already been changed and approved by the 9-1-1 emergency response system. He asked city attorney, James Young, if it could be changed again. He's concerned that another change could create lawsuit risks for the city.

Young said that if the city was aware of a high error rate between its addresses and the 9-1-1 system, it is responsible to take action and make the necessary changes.

Councilman, Bob Timms questioned whether the city was "snookered" by 9-1-1 or the city staff with the number of changes it was told were necessary. Media information about other towns that have roads that stop and start have him wondering, he said. He mentioned the amount of half numbers in Petoskey addresses.

Young said that the homeowners are following the proper procedure to get a street name changed. If they do not agree with council's decision, they have the electoral process or a lawsuit to fall back on.

"I find it hard to believe a judge is going to stick his nose into renaming city streets," he said.

Council decided to refer discussion about renaming East Hurlbut to the committee that originally presented the 9-1-1 changes. Picha and Kukes will attend the meeting.

Changes suggested for Big Rock Point's shutdown plan

By Janenne Irene Froats
Courier editor

The decommissioning plan for Big Rock Point nuclear power plant has been scrutinized. And Dr. Marvin Resnikoff wants to see the plant left alone for 27 years rather than immediately taken apart and shipped away.

He also wants Consumers Power Co. to have all $29 million needed to pay for decommissioning and monitoring the plant until 2027 collected by May 31, 2000, the last day the plant can operate.

"The longer it sits, the better," Resnikoff said Thursday during a press conference. He explained that the longer the plant remains intact, the less toxic its parts and the safer for workers during dismantlement. He suggests the plant sit in a dormant state for 50 years.

Dr. Resnikoff

From 2000 to 2027, Resnikoff estimates that exposure levels would drop three times. Without a federal repository to take the plant's highly radioactive fuel, he said there's no reason to rush plant dismantlement.

Resnikoff was hired to study and report on the plant's decommissioning by Don't Waste Michigan-Northern Chapter. He has specialized in nuclear power for more than 20 years and owns the assessment company, Radioactive Waste Management Associates, out of New York.

Don't Waste Michigan-Northern Chapter co-chair, Mike Winnell, said the organization wanted an "independent assessment of the adequacy of" Big Rock's plan.

The official plan was presented to the U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission in March. It has yet to receive approval. However, the regulator was involved in the formation of the plan through ongoing meetings with plant and utility officials.

The plan allows for two options, immediate dismantlement, providing there's a repository to ship parts to, and shutting the plant down and monitoring it until up to 2050, by which time the utility hopes have high-level and low-level waste out of the area.

As of today, there is a repository in Barnwell, N.C., that would take all low-level waste, which would include parts of the building and equipment that measure at certain levels.

The high-level nuclear fuel will have to remain at Big Rock Point until a federal repository is built, tested and approved to receive high-level waste. Billions of dollars have been spent to determine if Yucca Mountain, Nev., is that place.

Resnikoff doesn't think so. He said that through his experience of working for the Nevada Department of Transportation, people are opposed to interim and permanent storage of radioactive

Seasonal population study helps businesses prepare

By B. J. Hetler
Courier reporter

A county seasonal population study will help Charlevoix businesses and government plan for summer surges.

The study, released by the Northwest Michigan Council of Governments, researched 10 counties, including Charlevoix county. It showed that in 1995 Charlevoix County increased in population by 32 percent in June and 35 percent in July and August.

Much of that county population increase is felt in Charlevoix by businesses such as the Charlevoix Area Hospital.

The study is useful to the hospital in planning its services, said Nancy Ellison, director of marketing and public relations.

The hospital emergency room use increases in the summer and the hospital also plans for the increased need in the number of employees.

The hospital will use the study as it considers recruiting a plastic surgeon who requires a large and wealthy population base, Ellison said.

The hospital relies on seasonal summer home people for its fund-raising.

"Traditionally, they are very good contributors, and they depend on hospital services when they are here," Ellison said.

The seasonal population study figures help people who plan to open a business in Charlevoix and help existing business owners who are considering expansion, said Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce Executive Director, Jacqueline Merta. It also provides a boost in business for retail sales, lodging and the boating industry.

Charlevoix city planner Gerry Harsch said the figures are not a big issue for land development because the city has little available land. But he said the study is useful for the parks program when the city applies to the Michigan Department of Natural Resources for funding.

The $80,000 study was funded by the Coastal Management Program of the Department of Environmental Quality, the Michigan Department of Transportation, Northwest Michigan Council of Governments' staff and from the counties of Antrim, Benzie, Charlevoix, Emmet, Grand Traverse, Leelanau and Manistee.

County commissioners settle computer software dispute

B. J. Hetler
Courier reporter

The Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners' decision on tax administration software July 10 has brought relief for many.

"We're glad they finally made a decision," county treasurer, Joan Balch, said.

After taking two-and-a-half years, the board made the most cost-effective decision by awarding the contract to Manatron with its bid of $43,040, Balch said. The other bid, from Resource Software, was more than $66,000.

The other departments affected by the software choice are Register of Deeds and Equalization.

Because the county departments already use Manatron software, staying with Manatron will mean upgrading, rather than changing to new a new system. Another benefit is that 17 employees won't have to be retrained, Balch said.

Staying with the same software company also benefits surrounding townships and cities. Out of 15 townships and three cities in Charlevoix County, all three cities and eight of the townships use the Manatron appraisal system. Charlevoix City Treasurer, Rick Brandi, said the board's decision helped his office to plan for the future, one which won't include switching the city's software.

The board decision was unanimous. Chairman Phil Johnson said the board is happy to have the decision behind it and is anxious to get the software up and running.

Balch said the county originally wanted the departments to tie in with the county main frame, but realized the expense of finding software to do so. The departments will use the main frame for data storage.

School board brainstorms ways to educate voters on millage

The time for voting on the Charlevoix Public Schools bond issue is fast-approaching and the public is not educated as to why they need to vote for it.

This warning came from school architect, Jim Sneathen, to the school board Monday.

The board has a responsibility to make sure the voters understand the issues, Sneathen said, but cautioned that it is a fine line for the board to walk, because it cannot use school facilities or school funds to do so.

The two bond proposals are for renovating the elementary and middle schools, building a new high school and building a new auditorium. The proposals will be before the voters Sept. 23. One proposal is for $17.9 million and the other is for $3.1 million.

Superintendent Roberta Jackson agrees that the board needs to take a strong leadership role in educating the public and began a discussion about action the board should take.

Options discussed include setting up an information center, writing letters to the newspapers, targeting senior citizens to explain benefits of voting for the bonds, calling voters on voting day and recruiting the involvement of citizens' groups.

Jackson also emphasized the need to get people to Thursday's special meeting when a discussion will be held on the bond issues. The 7:30 p.m. meeting will be held in the high school library.

The board accepted the resignation of physics and chemistry teacher Joe Powers. It approved the hiring of Brandon Bruce as high school physical education coach and of Molly Randall as an elementary school teacher.

Some want downtown carnival rides, some don't would be placed — since Bridge Park is in the midst of construction — was made by city staff and a chamber committee.

"It's the best spot we can find in the downtown," Wiesner said.

Suggestions were to place the carnival at the airport or high school.

Whitley said she's willing to work with the city about how to get access to her shop during Venetian weekend, but she's not happy that, as a chamber member and long-standing business owner downtown, she wasn't consulted about the idea before being presented a map of the "done deal."

Barnes told Whitley that council can't overrule the decision. At the last meeting, he gave council the option to veto, which he later learned wasn't possible, he said.

According to city policy, staff is authorized to make decisions about street and parking lot closings, city attorney James Young said.

When Bill Supernaw stepped up to give his support for the placement of the carnival, whispers broke out in the audience.

The gavel landed. The mayor insisted on "respect for the speaker."

Supernaw continued, saying that the carnival needs to stay downtown.

"This is where the action is," he said.

A meetingwill be held between city and chamber staff and Whitley Thursday to discuss options on how to allow the beauty shop to operate through Charlevoix's busiest weekend of the year.

County building, more work

Before it is all built and done, the Charlevoix County Building will get more than 45,000-square-feet of new space. It will get a new roof on the second floor of the original courthouse.

The roof is now being replaced. The $17,000 being invested is in addition to the previous renovation-expansion budget.

"For all we've done, it's probably the best overall solution," said commissioner Richard Gillespie, of Beaver Island.

The additional work isn't expected to hold up the completion of the addition this month.

Charlevoix hospital remains financially sound for 1995-96

By Janenne Irene Froats
Courier editor

Charlevoix Area Hospital is reporting another sound year of caring for patients. And its vision is turning from treatment to illness prevention.

Hospital president, Richard Krueger, said rural Northern Michigan health care providers are concerned about being able to deliver high quality health care under the new plan, which under managed care, would limit patients' freedom to move from one doctor to another.

"From our standpoint, we will concentrate on prevention and keeping people healthy so that hospitalization will be decreased," Krueger said. "More of our resources will be put into education to prevent unnecessary illness."

At the hospital's annual meeting Tuesday, Krueger announced a $123,164 profit over the year.

"Our bottom line is indicative of the good job we are doing," he said. "This is much better than most small, rural hospital are currently doing."

Costs increases of up to 8 percent helped offset a 14.4 percent decline in inpatient services. And a 29.3 percent increase in physical therapy, with the help of a Boyne City office, added to the profit.

Hospital vice president of financial services, Bill Jackson, said the decrease in inpatient care is a result of insurance companies' push toward more outpatient care. In the past year, there has been more "short stay" services, which lasts less than 48 hours.

According to Jackson, the decrease patient numbers didn't result from a large lull at the hospital. They fell slightly behind each month throughout the year.

The net income increase from 1995 to 1996 was less than $1,000, Jackson said.

During the fiscal year, the hospital billed patients nearly $2.2 million for room, board and general services. The largest amount of revenue came from tests and treatments, totaling nearly $14 million, according to the hospital's March 31, 1996 financial summary.

Total operating income for the hospital was nearly $10.8 million.

Salaries, wages and fees accounted for $5.8 million in expenses with that largest amount of money — $10.8 million — being paid out for medical supplies, interest, utilities, goods and depreciation.

One way the hospital is preparing for business in years to come is to bring three additional doctors on staff. Dr. James Jeakle is an obstetrician and gynecologist working out of Dr. William Mosher. Drs. Marie Gardner, a pediatrician, and Geralyn Doskoch, a family practitioner.

Although the number of births was down in 1995, hospital public relations director, Nancy Ellison, said she expects them to increase with the addition of the obstetrician.

The other two physicians practice out of the East Jordan Family Health Center.

Krueger said that some problems persist when looking to the future of health care. Health care reform is still needed and the quality of Medicaid and Medicare cannot be reduced.

"If the hundreds of billions of dollars are cut from the health care system over the next five or six years, as is presently contemplated, it will force major changes in these programs," he said.

During the 1995 fiscal year, the hospital wrote off almost $35 million as uncollectible. Of that, only $64,851 was forgiven as charity care.

In order to fulfill its prevention goal, the hospital participated in a 21-county study to assess the health status of northern lower Michigan.

Findings show area residents at greater risk for cancer and heart disease because of the prevalence of risk factors including smoking, high blood pressure, high cholesterol, overweight and not have a mammogram.

"Now our work with the area health department and hospitals continues as we develop services and programs to counter these risk factors," Krueger said.

Charlevoix Police Chief Dennis Halverson and members of the sheriff's department check the contents of a Ryder truck after cutting off the lock Friday. A county employee became suspicious after seeing the truck parked next to the Charlevoix County Courthouse and unattended for most of the day Friday. It was marked with an explosives sign. Police were unable to locate the owner, but found only legal fireworks in the truck.

Learn the rules of the waves, be a smart boater

EDITORIAL

The City of Three Lakes.

Charlevoix is known as a boating community.

The harbor is full, and the bridge is stopping cars to give boats the right-of-way in the channel.

With the luxury of journeying with the wind or powering through waves comes a responsibility to operate boats and jet skis safely.

Recently, a downstate man died after being thrown from a boat and then run over by it. Nobody was ticketed for wrongdoing. However, it should serve as a reminder that even though water appears harmless when filled with synchronized swimmers, it can be deadly to careless boaters.

According to Josh Block, officer in charge of the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Marine Patrol, there has been an increase in complaints and accidents from careless operation of personal water crafts.

There are more people on the water, boat and jet ski speeds have increased and people are curious to try operating the vessels without having the proper training to do so.

Most parents wouldn't let their child climb onto a motorcycle and rip down highways without having taken some kind of training course and pass a test to become licensed. Yet, many are allowing young people to mount a jet ski, which can travel almost as fast.

It's not only dangerous. It's against the law.

Children between the ages of 12 and 15 must have a boaters safety certificate to legally operate any personal water craft.

Parents who neglect that responsibility are being issued misdemeanor citations. And the patrol is planning to tighten enforcement throughout the county to slow down boaters and make sure that only licensed people are operating the boats and jet skis.

Young people aren't the only ones who need training. Block said that most of the area's accidents occur when someone other than the vessel owner is at "the helm." Friends and relatives who are allowed to take control of the water craft often find themselves in accidents or the brunt of a complaint because they don't have the training and time in to correctly handle the craft.

Here are some rules for the waves:

— Don't drink and drive.

— Everyone must wear a Coast Guard approved flotation device.

— Don't operate water crafts from sunset to sunrise.

— Slow to a no-wake idle when within 100 feet of an anchored boat, raft, dock, pier or occupied swimming area.

— Don't cross within 150 feet behind another vessel unless your traveling at a greater than slow, no-wake speed.

— It's against the law to let people 12-years-old and under to operate a water craft.

— A person 12- to 15-year-old must either be accompanied by someone at least 16-years-old or be in possession of a boating safety certificate.

— Owners need to restrict unlicensed, untrained people from operating their water craft.

Block said that most of the accidents happen when friends and relatives of boat and jet ski owners are driving. People become offensive instead of defensive drivers.

"All of the sudden, they're on vacation, they're having fun and they forget everything they know," he said.

"They're just psychotic."

Follow the rules of the road. Follow the rules of the waves.

Being a smart boater might mean saying no to a novice who wants to rip through the waves, but their life — and the lives of others — is more important than a temporary pout.

Letters to the Editor

Keep Charlevoix beautiful, no sprawl

Editor:

Late last week I was flipping through an article regarding the National Trust for Historic Preservation, a non-profit group whose purpose is to save America's historic environments and preserve communities nationwide. I was alarmed to find that Petoskey, Mich., had earned a spot on the Trust's annual list of "America's 11 Most Endangered Places." The article simply stated that Petoskey was in danger of being overwhelmed by "retail and residential sprawl."

Petoskey's selection for the "Endangered Places" list should be a wake-up call for all residents of Northern Michigan. There are surely countless communities in the area that are also imperiled by unscrupulous developers hoping to make an easy dollar at the expense of the local historic character.

It is time for local residents to just say "no" to more development. In a commendable move the residents of Peninsula Township just north of Traverse City have agreed to pay more taxes to fund a program intended to keep farmland and scenic views as they are. I urge other communities across Northern Michigan to support similar efforts aimed at protecting their threatened heritage.

Sincerely,

Jonathan Terry,1989 Charlevoix High School graduate

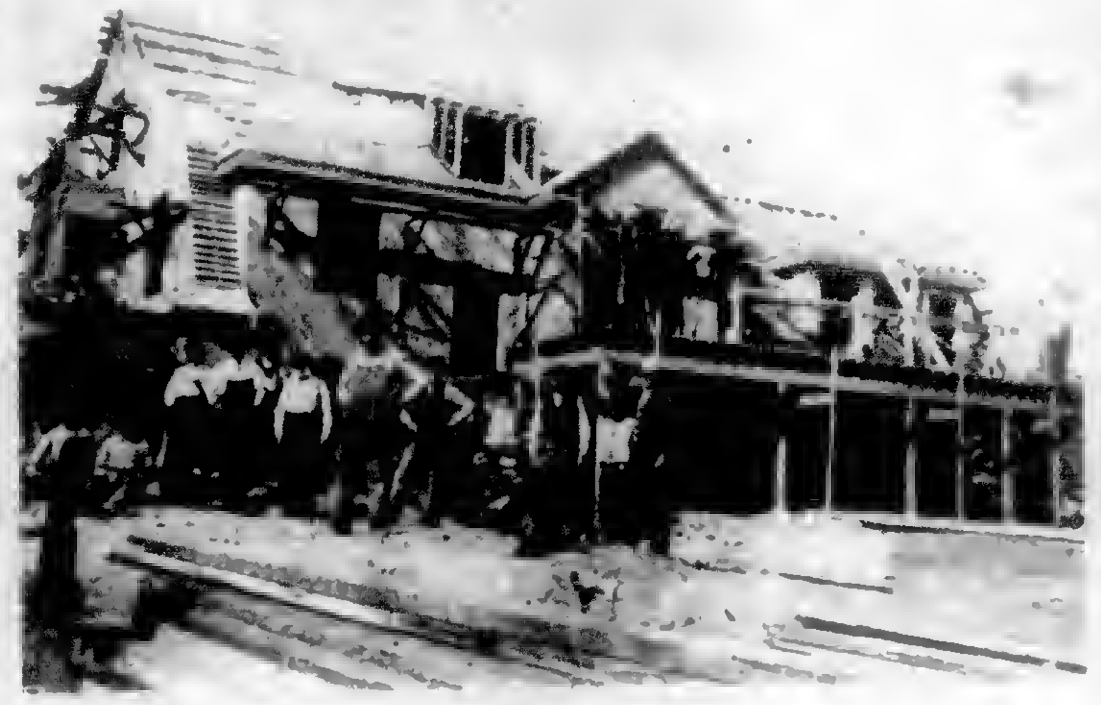
No matter how busy you are on Venetian weekend, do yourself a favor — take an hour and tour the Adams' "cottage" on Michigan Ave., which has been completely restored over the last three years.

According to the owner, Mary Adams, it is fitting that one restoration should benefit another. The proceeds of the Adams home tour will benefit the restoration of the Charlevoix Depot, which was recently acquired by the Charlevoix Historical Society. Members have put in long hours brightening the historic and much photographed old depot, but there is still much to do.

The Adams house, was built in 1917, by David May, a founder of the May Co. department stores. (Rumor has it that it might have been a Sears catalog home). In the early fifties, it was bought and occupied year-round by the Dr. Gilbert Salonstall family. Then in 1990, Chuck and Mary Adams, formerly of Plymouth, Mich., bought the place and began restoration in '93.



Then ...

And what a restoration it was! For the last three years, I've counted 15 trucks almost every day in front of the 29-room house, with 11 bathrooms. Carpenters, plumbers, electricians, roofers, painters, wallpaper hangers, interior designers and landscape gardeners — 134 craftsmen in all — completed the restoration, under the watchful eyes of Bo Boss and Alva Noirot, owners of the Charlevoix County Construction Company. The entire structure was stripped to the bare frame. Great care was taken to duplicate all the original millwork and materials of the doors, windows, floors, stairs, etc.

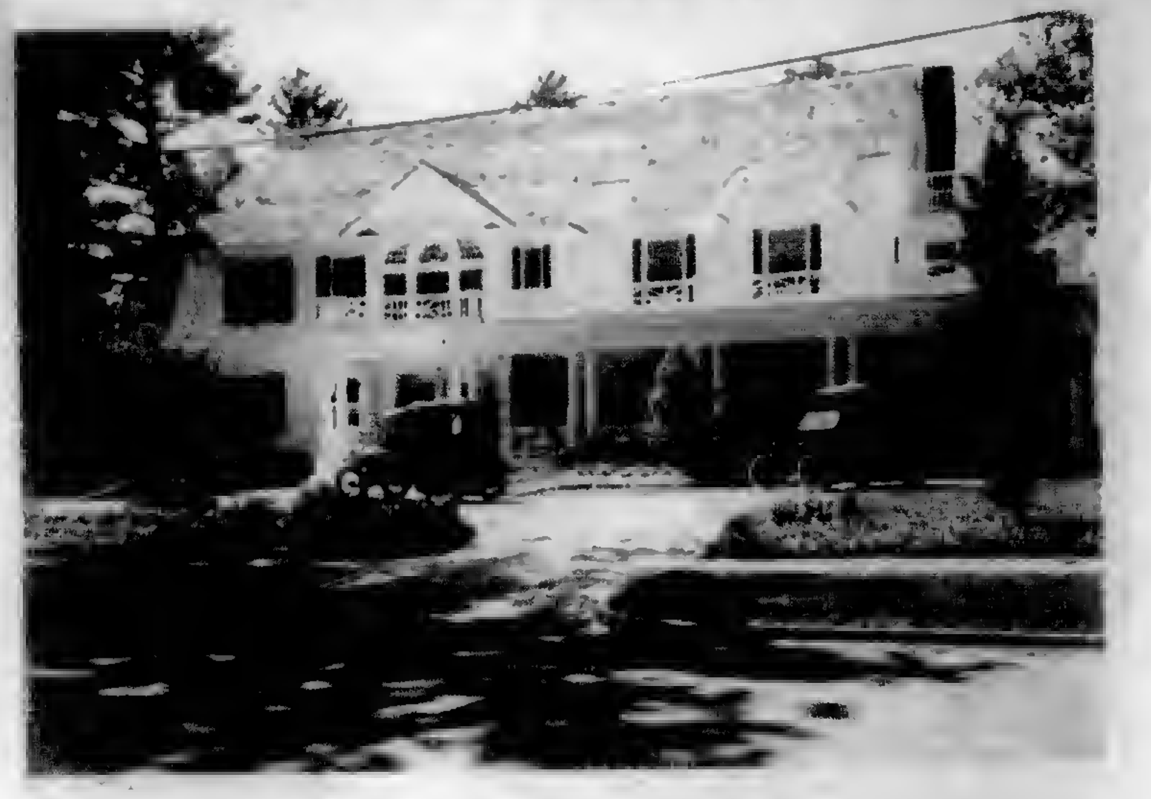
Here are some things to look for when you tour. To the right is the library in which Mary has installed a Murphy bed for her grandmother, who isn't able to climb stairs. The entire ceiling is a drawing of a French map, done by Jim Dutkowski, designer for the Quiet Moose. Next you will notice the large, light living and dining rooms, which will comfortably accommodate the many members of the extended family. The small music room holds a baby grand piano, which rests on a hand-painted canvas floor cloth, by Kate Belfy of Alanson. A very large, modern kitchen overlooks Lake Michigan. Appliances are built in and hidden behind closed doors. The blond, rectangular kitchen table easily seats 10.

On the second floor are six bedrooms with balconies and four baths. The 10-foot high walls are covered with vintage wallpapers and wide borders. Mary Adams has enjoyed collecting late 19th century, French furniture to fill the spacious rooms.

Most intriguing is what has been accomplished on the third floor, which originally were servants' quarters. The bedrooms now have rainbows, moons and stars painted on the ceiling. Mary Adams has also built a large, rainy-day, playroom under the eaves for young children. Hand-painted nursery rhyme figures and woodsy scenes with playful deer, now fills the space where trunks and suitcases used to be stored. She also saved all her children's toys, dolls, games and playclothes, which are neatly stacked in built-in cupboards.

The flower gardens and landscaping were designed by Historical Courtyards and Gardens. In addition to friendly porches, one may prefer to muse in the Gazebo and watch boats sail by.

The tour is 1-5 p.m. Saturday, July 27. Tickets are $12.50 and are available in 12 local shops and banks. In case of rain, the tour will be 1-5 p.m. Sunday, July 28. Sorry, no children under 14 and no cameras or pets.



... and now, after three years of renovations.

Out of the Blue

Words that rhyme, but come while I'm
Stuck by the bridge, won't be seen
In this space now, or any time —
If I know Janenne Irene.

(Just this time, Amos)

Local man invests time in others

By B. J. Hetler
Courier reporter

A part-time Charlevoix resident who volunteered his time and business expertise to a manufacturing company in Utena, Lithuania, said the experience was rewarding.

"I got as much out of helping them as they got from my expertise. It wasn't all give, I took a lot from them," said Graham Barton, a 68-year-old retired executive and former business owner.

Barton spent a month using his engineering and manufacturing expertise to help guide the country from a planned economy in the Soviet system to a free-enterprise economy. He worked on problems identified by company executives and wrote a business plan. He worked 10 to 12 hour days, five days a week.

Barton's assignment to Lithuania occurred because he volunteered his time to the International Executive Service Corps, an organization of retired executives.

The service corps matches companies in developing countries with the executives who have the expertise needed to improve or run the businesses. It is funded by the U.S. Agency for International Development, by corporations and by private individuals.

Barton retired from his company, Moco Thermal Industries in Romulus, in 1989. He and his wife, Betty, lived in Italy and traveled around Europe for several months. When they returned to the states they settled in Charlevoix for the summer months. After reading about the service corps, Barton decided to volunteer.

"The American people have a vested interest in helping people come from a planned economy to a free economy," he said.

Barton praised the Lithuanian company workers. The general director and the marketing director showed a great interest in the free enterprise system and in learning western marketing skills, he said. On his last day at the company, employees took him to lunch and presented him with an honorary sash.

The company's director, Raimundas Sukarevicius, opened his home to Barton. Sukarevicius is married and has two boys. Barton said he enjoyed the family.

"The boys cried when I left," he said.

Barton said the standard of living in Lithuania is higher than he had anticipated and the food was delicious.

Lithuania was Barton's first assignment and he said he looks forward to returning or taking a new assignment.

Charlevoix native brings artwork home

"Capturing a slice of reality" is the theme of Susie Logie's collection of oil paintings, pastels and charcoals that will appear at the Jordan River Arts Council in July.

The former Charlevoix woman never paints from photographs.

"This is the way I like to work," she said. "I look at the same thing for a long time. Monet taught us to do that."

Logie values a variety of work. Her paintings range in size, intensity of color and subject.

Fourteen years after she earned a bachelor's degree from the University of Michigan, Logie majored in interior design at Kendall College of Art and Design in Grand Rapids.

Logie, now a resident of Grand Rapids, will have her work exhibited Sunday, July 21, through Friday, Aug. 2, at the East Jordan Arts Council on Main Street in East Jordan.

Hospital receives endowment

In 1972 Julius Gilbert spearheaded a drive for vital seed money to build Charlevoix Area Hospital's Intensive-Coronary Care Unit.

He did it with help from his friend and summer resident, Nathan Cummings, who donated $50,000.

Now, even in death, the two men are indirectly responsible for another first at the hospital.

Joanne Cummings, the former Mrs. Nathan Cummings, died in 1995 leaving a bequest of $25,000 to the hospital in honor of Edith Gilbert and in memory of Julius Gilbert. The bequest will be used to begin an endowment fund for the hospital.

"The Cummings were summer residents who were some of the finest supporters of the hospital," said hospital president, Richard Krueger. "They became a part of the community and, through this gift, continue to show their endorsement of the hospital and its future.

"We credit Julius Gilbert with creating their interest in the beginning," Krueger added. "We will always be grateful for the generous giving of time, effort, and contributions of both the Gilberts and the Cummings."

Edith and Julius Gilbert have been supporters of the hospital since 1954. Julius Gilbert died 12 years ago.

Edith Gilbert was an honorary co-chairman for the last hospital campaign to raise $1.6 million for the new building which opened in 1994.

Fashion to raise funds

"Explore the Wonder" is the theme for the annual Charlevoix Area Hospital Guild Fashion Show set for noon Wednesday, July 24, at the Argonne.

The luncheon and fashion show will include outfits for all seasons from Gocha's, White Rose, Gray Flannel, Mary's Magic Mirror, of Boyne City; Rose cargo, A Touch of Lace, Trademark Clothiers, My Sister's Closet, Michelle's, J. Phillips, The Clothing Company, Doncaster, Molly's, Anchors and the Bahnhof, of Charlevoix; the E.J. Shoppe, The Eclectic, of East Jordan; and Boyne Country Sports, Boyne Falls.

Tickets are $16 including tax and tip, with a menu choice of shrimp or chicken salad. Tickets may be purchased at the hospital or Don's IGA. All proceeds will go toward hospital needs.

School offers summer kids' classes

Charlevoix Public Schools is offering a Summer Enrichment Program. Classes run Monday, July 29, through Thursday, August 22.

The program will focus on third through eighth-grade reading, math and using the computer integrated learning system; and ninth and tenth- grade language arts.

Students attending in the high school program will receive one-half credit in language arts if they have failed an English class and are able to complete and pass the required assignments. Enrollment is limited to students attending Charlevoix Public Schools, as the program is funded by a grant from the State of Michigan to help local school districts teach students who experience difficulty with passing the MEAP.

Classes meet from 9 a.m.-noon, Monday through Thursdays. Grades 3 through 8 will meet at the Charlevoix Middle School and students in grades 9 and 10 will meet at Charlevoix High School. There will be a certified teacher and teacher assistant in each classroom.

For more information, contact Mrs. Gayle Gennett at 547-5598 or Mr. Steve Stargardt at 547-2045.

BEACONS OF BLESSINGS

By the Rev. Bruce Hamilton

Community Church of God

The end of last week found me on the road for Kalamazoo to check up on a member of my flock who is in Borgess Hospital. Most of you know that Kyle Russell broke his neck in a swimming accident a few weeks ago. It was my hope to bring a touch of home with me in visiting him.

When I pulled up outside Borgess, my first impression was that it looked like medieval castle. It's eight stories tall, made of old stone and granite, and has numerous towers and spires. You almost expect to see King Arthur and Queen Guenivere peeking out one of its windows as you "approach the gates."

Once inside, you make your way to the seventh floor to a section called "neuro ICU." That should tell you something right from the start about how God works when the hospital Kyle was brought to has a unit that specializes in spinal and neck injuries. You also have to be prepared for what you see. There are a lot of tubes and machines connected to him. After a battle with pneumonia, the doctors are trying to give Kyle every advantage they can in making a strong recovery.

Some of you may get a surprise in this week's mail. Thanks to a Velero device that lets a pen be fastened to the back of his hand, Kyle has been signing a few thank you notes for people back home. That also should tell you about the attitude and the faith he is displaying. He shares with everyone that will listen that he figures together, He and God, will figure out a way for him to walk again.

Now I tell you all this not to tug at your heart strings, but to ask you to think about something. Kyle would also freely say that things are OK between him and God. He has the Lord as a part of his life and knows that in God's time, things will come together. Do you? Do you know the Lord as a part of your life, and do you have an assurance in your heart that things will come together?

If you have been a part of a church family for any length of time, then you have heard the Bible proclaimed in a fashion that should tell you loud and clear how God has always wanted to help, strengthen and encourage His children. Are you taking what you already know and applying it to your life?

Sometimes it takes some deep trauma or unexpected crisis for us to dig down deep inside and pull up the faith that is so important in seeing us through. I'm simply suggesting that life could be a lot easier than you think, if, rather than waiting on a tragedy or trauma to prompt you to turn to the Lord, you turn to Him each and every day.

No one wants to end up in the hospital facing a long climb to recovery. But if it does happen, having God in your corner makes all the difference in the world. Why let some circumstance put you in a corner? Open your heart to the potential God is waiting to pour into your life right now.

Mary Reynolds, of Gross Pointe, tries to keep Cariad II from hitting the edge of the channel Friday while boats wait for the bridge to raise. Above, cars are speedily trying to get through before the familiar red and white arms lower to let boats through. Boats back up in the channel often awaiting for the top and bottom of each hour to strike. There is at least one advantage to owning a small boat — unlimited passage through Charlevoix — night or day.

BEAVER ISLANDER

As the Cariad II readies to take the first turn at powering into Round Lake, the Beaver Islander makes its grand entrance by surprise. The other boats wait a few more minutes.

Store brings a bit of South America to Charlevoix shoppers

By B.J. Hetler
Courier reporter

Mercado Imports entices buyers to the flavors of Mexico, Peru, Bolivia and Equador in its offering of silver jewelry, hand-loomed rugs made by Zapotec Indians, leather goods and hand-carved, brightly painted wooden animal statues signed by artists from Oaxaca, Mexico.

The prices assure buyers that there is something for everyone. One of the most popular items are the $5.00 leather coin purses in the shape of fish or cats, said manager Kathy Stafford.

Owner Dick Forstner was in his car on Bridge Street waiting for the bridge to go down when he noticed a "for rent" sign on a storefront in Charlevoix. He quickly rented the space and opened his third Mercado Imports store in the 100 block of Bridge Street. His first store opened nine years ago in Manistique and his second store opened a year ago in Harbor Springs.

Forstner said he offers very good artistic items at reasonable prices. Charlevoix's Mercado Imports opened during the first week in June and he said business is excellent.

Manager Stafford agrees.

"It's not hard to sell, everything is so unique," she said.

"People seem surprised to find a store like this in Michigan," Forstner said. Many people are amazed at the variety and large amount of sterling silver jewelry on display.

Forstner travels to each country and does the buying himself directly from the artists. He also decorates the store window and arranges the items in the store. On Mondays and Tuesdays, customers will find him behind the counter.

Forstner has a long-time interest in pre-Colombian artifacts. His idea to open the original Mercado Imports came about after a vacation to Mexico 10 years ago.

Mercado Imports is open seven days a week. It's hours are 10 a.m. until 8 p.m.

St. Mary's Parish slams through summer bash

St. Mary's Street was blocked by basketball players Sunday.

Bingo buffs played in the shade of a large tent.

And children wandered from face painting to picking from the duck pond to bouncing in the Whopper Hopper to watching the action on the 3-on-3 courts.

St. Mary's Parish sported its fourth Summer Slam Sunday. About 60 teams competed in nine divisions during the 1996 3-on-3 summer slam.

Lessons ready young sailors

Early skill beats Harbor class

By B.J. Helter
Courier reporter

Josh Grove likes to trim the main sail the best. Shannon Cury loves the speed and could sail all day. Amy Kurtz said sailing is "OK" and that it helps to have lessons.

The lessons at the Charlevoix County 4-H Sailing School pay off. The school's advanced class took first, second and third place in last Friday's race with Harbor Springs Sailing School.

Students at the school range in ages from 8 to 18, and classes are given for beginners through advanced.

People don't have to be athletes to sail, said instructor Justin Acker, who began sailing nine years ago with the school. This is his third summer as one of its instructors.

"I love sailing so I enjoy watching other people learn to love it," Acker said.

Some kids are nervous at first, said instructor Kelly Copeland, so instructors make sure they stay within their abilities and team them up with older, more experienced sailors. Copeland, who has taught at the school for four years, said the instructors make learning fun and after a few days, the nervous students relax.

Sailing basics are covered at the beginning of class. The instructors drill the students in skills such as rigging, navigation, boat safety, knot tying and docking. The kids then prepare the 15-foot boats, don life jackets, team up and shove off to sail. The instructors follow in a power boat.

There is no better way to learn than to get out there, said Acker.

It's fun being out with the kids and watching them progress, Copeland said. They acquire confidence in their abilities and in themselves.

Students sign up for lessons on a weekly basis through 4-H. The school also holds classes for adults in the evenings. For more information, call 582-6232.

Sailing students from the Charlevoix County 4-H Sailing School hoist the sails and prepare to sail the waters at Depot Beach in Charlevoix last week. The students are members of the school's advanced class. The school teaches all levels Monday through Friday each week.

Charlevoix at Wimbledon — Atlanta's Olympic games next?

Charlevoix made Wimbledon. Will it make the Olympics?

Dean Davenport has vowed to get Charlevoix mentioned on national television during his trip to Atlanta for the summer games.

Davenport was at Wimbledon two years ago vouching of the beauty of his home when an NBC sportscaster mentioned the city during the Breakfast at Wimbledon broadcast. Phones buzzed around the city with residents wondering how the national sports figures knew about Charlevoix.

Now, Davenport is traveling to Atlanta to see the world's top sporting competition. He will be witnessing the nation's greatest efforts at taking home the gold.

Gold isn't enough for Davenport. He plans to convince his friend, NBC's Dick Enberg, to mention his northern Michigan home — Charlevoix — while during his broadcast.

Enberg's show runs 8:30-10:30 p.m. nightly as an events-of-the-day roundup. Davenport will be in Atlanta the second week of the games.

He said he expects the big event to occur during that week, sometime between Sunday, July 28, and Friday, Aug. 5.

Be listening.

Rubbol DEK

Your deck is the center of your outdoor entertaining and recreation activities.

So don't just give it a "finish". Give it a quality Sikkens finish with the Cetol® DEK or Rubbol® DEK systems.

The Cetol DEK translucent system combines the high solid oil alkyd combination and UV-absorbing pigments of Cetol DEK Base with the transparent iron oxide pigments of the Cetol DEK maintenance topcoat. The result is a superior system that both protects and reveals the true beauty of your wood.

For a solid color deck finish or to highlight railings and stairs, choose Rubbol DEK. It's the one-can finish that repels UV rays but allows moisture to escape, reducing blistering and cracking. Apply Rubbol DEK on cedar or pressure treated wood, smooth or unfinished - even aged and worn decks!

30,000 volunteers beautify roads sides

The sixth year of the Adopt-a-Highway program continues when 30,000 Adopt-a-Highway volunteers blanket Michigan's roadsides to pick up litter in the second of three regularly scheduled pickups this year. For the convenience of our Adopt-a-Highway volunteers, this year's pickup dates have again been expanded to cover two weekends. This pickup runs from Saturday, July 13, to Sunday, July 21.

"Drivers should slow down and be careful when they see one of the Adopt-a-Highway groups out on our roadsides," said Michigan Department of Transportation Director Robert A Welke. "Volunteers will be out there working for us. Let's look out for them to make sure we have a safe sixth season."

Volunteers picking up trash along our highways expect to find enough litter to fill more than 100 large garbage trucks.

The transportation department's Adopt-a-Highway program has grown to more than 3,000 groups from the original 24 that participated at its kickoff in April 1990. The efforts of these volunteer groups are clearly visible in our cleaner, more attractive roadsides. Almost 6,800 miles of the 9,500 miles of state highways have been adopted.

Beaver Island book, CD show history

The book, Beaver Island House Party, examines the unique musical legacy of Beaver Island through discussions of past and present musical contexts, repertoires, collectors and musicians. The accompanying compact disk includes eleven historic field recordings never before available except in archives, and fourteen contemporary studio recordings.

Settled by Irish immigrants in the 19th Century, Beaver Island remains 35 percent Irish. The island's musical past is preserved in field recordings by the late Ivan Walton, professor of English at the University of Michigan, and American folk music collector, Alan Lomax, formerly of the Archive of Folk Song at the Library of Congress.

The late Helen Collar, a summer visitor who studied the history of the Beaver Island Irish, also gathered extensive documentation. Few recordings of Michigan traditional music exist, and fewer still have book-length documentation of the musicians who created and played the tunes, and the collectors who preserved them.

Beaver Island House Party provides a rare opportunity to examine the musical culture of a distinctive island community.

The book is available in August from the Beaver Island Historical Society and Michigan State University Museum.

City approves credit card, district library resolutions

By Janenne Irene Froats
Courier editor

Even though the city has been using credit cards for years, a new state law required city council to formally approve a policy on how the cards would be used.

"It really doesn't change our use at all," said city treasurer, Rick Brandi.

The city has three credit cards, each with a $2,000 maximum. They are mostly used when department heads leave town for a city-related trip. Sometimes, a card is used to reserve a room when a check can't be cut fast enough.

"They are concerned with control," Brandi said of the state. Prior to enactment of the law, Brandi was in charge of checking the cards in and out. The policy didn't change. It was just formally approved.

City council approved two resolutions Monday regarding credit cards: allowing use by city officials and employees and acceptance of credit card payment at the marina. Neither situations are new.

Balances are paid in full within 30 days of the original statement date to reduce finance charges.

In other action Monday, council:

— Approved up to $30,500 be spent for the cleanup and assessment report of the contamination at the public works building near Nanny's restaurant.

Leaky pipes between underground gasoline tanks and the pumps caused the contamination years ago. The tanks have since been removed. Monitoring wells have been tracking the movement of the contamination downhill, said city manager, Mike Wiesner. To meet a state law, the city must have the cleanup completed by October.

— Vacated an alley bounded by Alice and Stockman streets while maintaining an easement right for utilities. The alley is unused and overgrown.

— Approved the formation of a district library. Because of a change in state law, libraries can no longer be funded through schools. The library is planned to cover the Charlevoix School District. Taxpayers will vote on a millage, even though it is not a new tax. It historically was collected and distributed through the school.

Sheriff's department gives kudos to Barnard Grange

Charlevoix County Sheriff George T. Lasater accepted a check from the Barnard Grange for $350 to purchase fingerprinting equipment for the sheriff's office children fingerprint program.

Annually, the department travels from school-to-school to fingerprint children.

This year, with the assistance of the Barnard Grange, and the Boyne City and East Jordan police departments, 582 children in Charlevoix County were fingerprinted and the prints turned over to the parents for their records.

The child fingerprinting program was initiated by the sheriff's office in 1983 as a service to parents in case a child is kidnapped and identification assistance is required in locating the missing child.

Big Rock's shutdown debated

materials in the state.

He said Northern Michigan residents should count on the nuclear fuel staying in the area for some time. Some Michigan legislatures are pushing for a bill to pass this session that would apply pressure to the U.S. Department of Energy to keep its word and take high-level radioactive waste by 1998, regardless if it's stored at a temporary or permanent site.

Big Rock Point officials agree that putting the plant in an inactive storage mode offers benefits. They are confident a low-level waste repository will still be available. Benefits include less radioactive exposure for workers, instituting increased productivity, according to the decommissioning plan summary.

However, there are millions of dollars involved. Resnikoff is concerned that the utility and its rate payers who have long since been investing in the decommissioning fund will be stuck without enough money to cover costs.

Collecting $290 million by 2000 could only happen if Consumers increased electricity rates for its customers, plant public affairs director, Tim Petrosky, said. If the plant isn't immediately dismantled, the extra money was expected to be generated through investments.

"If you immediately dismantle the plant, there's no time for these funds to build up," Resnikoff said.

His request to have $290 million saved by plant shutdown, isn't necessary Petrosky said. By reducing the cost of monitoring the nuclear fuel for 27 years, decommissioning costs is estimated to be $245 million, the amount that will have been collected by 2000.

"We believe that amount is sufficient," he said. The financial side of the plant's decommissioning has already received approval by the Michigan Public Service Commission. A review is scheduled for 1998.

The money has been collected by Consumers collecting one-tenth of a cent paid for a kilowatt hour of electricity. It now collects $24.2 million annual to pay for expenses involved in ending the plant's life.

Overall, Petrosky said Resnikoff's comments reflect the soundness of the plan.

"We are confident in our plan," he said, noting that it is a product of many nuclear specialists. "We fully expect approval."

Don't Waste Michigan-Northern Chapter hopes that Big Rock Point will integrate Resnikoff's findings into the decommissioning plan.

Petrosky said the Nuclear Regulatory Commission and plant officials provided months for public comment before the plan was submitted for approval. Resnikoff's assessment should have been completed and presented then.

"The comment period has come and gone," he said.

Regardless, Winnell said the group will send a copy of their report to the regulatory commission, public libraries, plant officials and other environmental groups.

Events in brief

Teens caught with truckload of signs

Three East Jordan teen-agers were caught in the middle of a sign-stealing spree Monday night, said Charlevoix Police Chief, Dennis Halverson.

About $1,000 worth of signs and softball bases were recovered from the bed of the truck in which the youths were riding.

The property included a sign marking the entrance to Boyne City and a directional sign for the Beaver Islander. The signs were large and expensive.

Halverson said the bases came from Charlevoix's softball field.

Police were tipped by a person with a cellular phone.

The teen-agers were turned over to their parents and could be cited for larceny over $100 in probate court.

Drill stolen from unlocked car Monday

A drill was stolen from outside a house on Dixon Ave. Monday night. It had been left in an unlocked car overnight, Charlevoix Police Chief, Dennis Halverson, said.

The owner of the construction-grade drill told police he noticed it missing Tuesday morning.

The theft is under investigation.

Eastern Star women recap meet

Worthy Matron Rosalyn Goldstick presided at the June meeting of the Charlevoix Chapter #72, Order of the Eastern Star.

The meeting opened in regular form, with presentation of the flags. The Worthy Matron welcomed all members and guests. Honored guests presented were Dorothea Kelley, past grand marshall; Ann Hufford, past grand martha; and Alice Bellinger, past grand adah. Other officials introduced and welcomed, included Meguzee District Association officers.

The Charter was draped for 30 days, and a resolution of respects read by Polly VerWys in memory of Irene deCastro, who died in Colorado May 17th, six days before her 91st birthday.

A contribution to the Golden Age Fund was sent in memory of Irene. A letter was read from her daughter, Susan, stating that a memorial service for Irene will be held at the Episcopal Church Saturday, Aug. 3.

The Chapter has "adopted" a sister, Helen Sheldon, who lives at the Masonic Home, Room 268, in Alma. The Chapter has had George Dorbra as their "adopted" brother for a number of years. It is suggested to send cards and remembrances to both elderly persons.

The Meguzee District is also asking that each chapter send jams and jellies to the booth for the annual "fair" held at the Masonic Home in August. The sweets are sold with proceeds assisting in maintenance of the home.

Thank you letters were received for donations to the Charlevoix Teen Center and from the High School Class of '96 for their Graduation party. It was voted to have the annual hot-dog and lemonade stands Saturdays, July 13 and Aug. 10, for the hobby show and Waterfront Art Fair. Workers are needed for both and can call Rosalyn Goldstick at 547-2636 to volunteer.

A pig roast/pot-luck picnic and annual rummage sale will be held in August.

Associate Matron Dorothea Kelley gave a report for the Sunshine Committee, showing that the members had sent 74 cards and made 71 calls to the ill and shut-ins, and made 13 visits to other chapters since the last meeting.

The chapter is invited to a friend's picnic Sunday, Aug. 18, at Antrim County Park, Elk Rapids. Please bring a dish to pass.

The Worthy stated that information on Charlevoix's 106 years was also sent to be included in the Worthy Grand Matron's Book of Memories. The next regular meeting of Charlevoix Chapter #72 will be held Wednesday , July 24. Members are urged to attend, and visiting O.E.S. members are welcome.

As many modern watercraft skim across the waters of Lake Charlevoix this summer, stories of her sunken treasures emerge to eagerly listening divers and maritime enthusiasts. One such gem is the story of the Keuka and her permanent mark on Charlevoix's eventful maritime history.

The Keuka was built in Mt. Clemens in 1889 by William Dulac for the Tonawanda Barge Line Company of North Tonawanda, New York. Originally named the A. Stewart, she later re-christened the H.J. McAvoy, and then finally the Keuka in 1920.

She spent most of her career as a lumber barge being towed behind steam ships and tugs up and down the Great Lakes. After being purchased and brought to Boyne City in 1928, she was laid up near the now One Water Street restaurant.. There a covered structure was added to the top deck and she was converted into a floating skating rink and dance hall.

"They had a regular cabaret on it," remembers long time Charlevoix resident and historian Ralph Hamilton. Later she was towed by the Gallagher's steam ship, Ossian Beddell, up and down Lake Charlevoix and periodically spent several weeks in Traverse City. According to a July 1930 Boyne Citizen article, the ship was "enabling the fair dancers and their escorts to dance on the main deck of the late going pleasure barge."

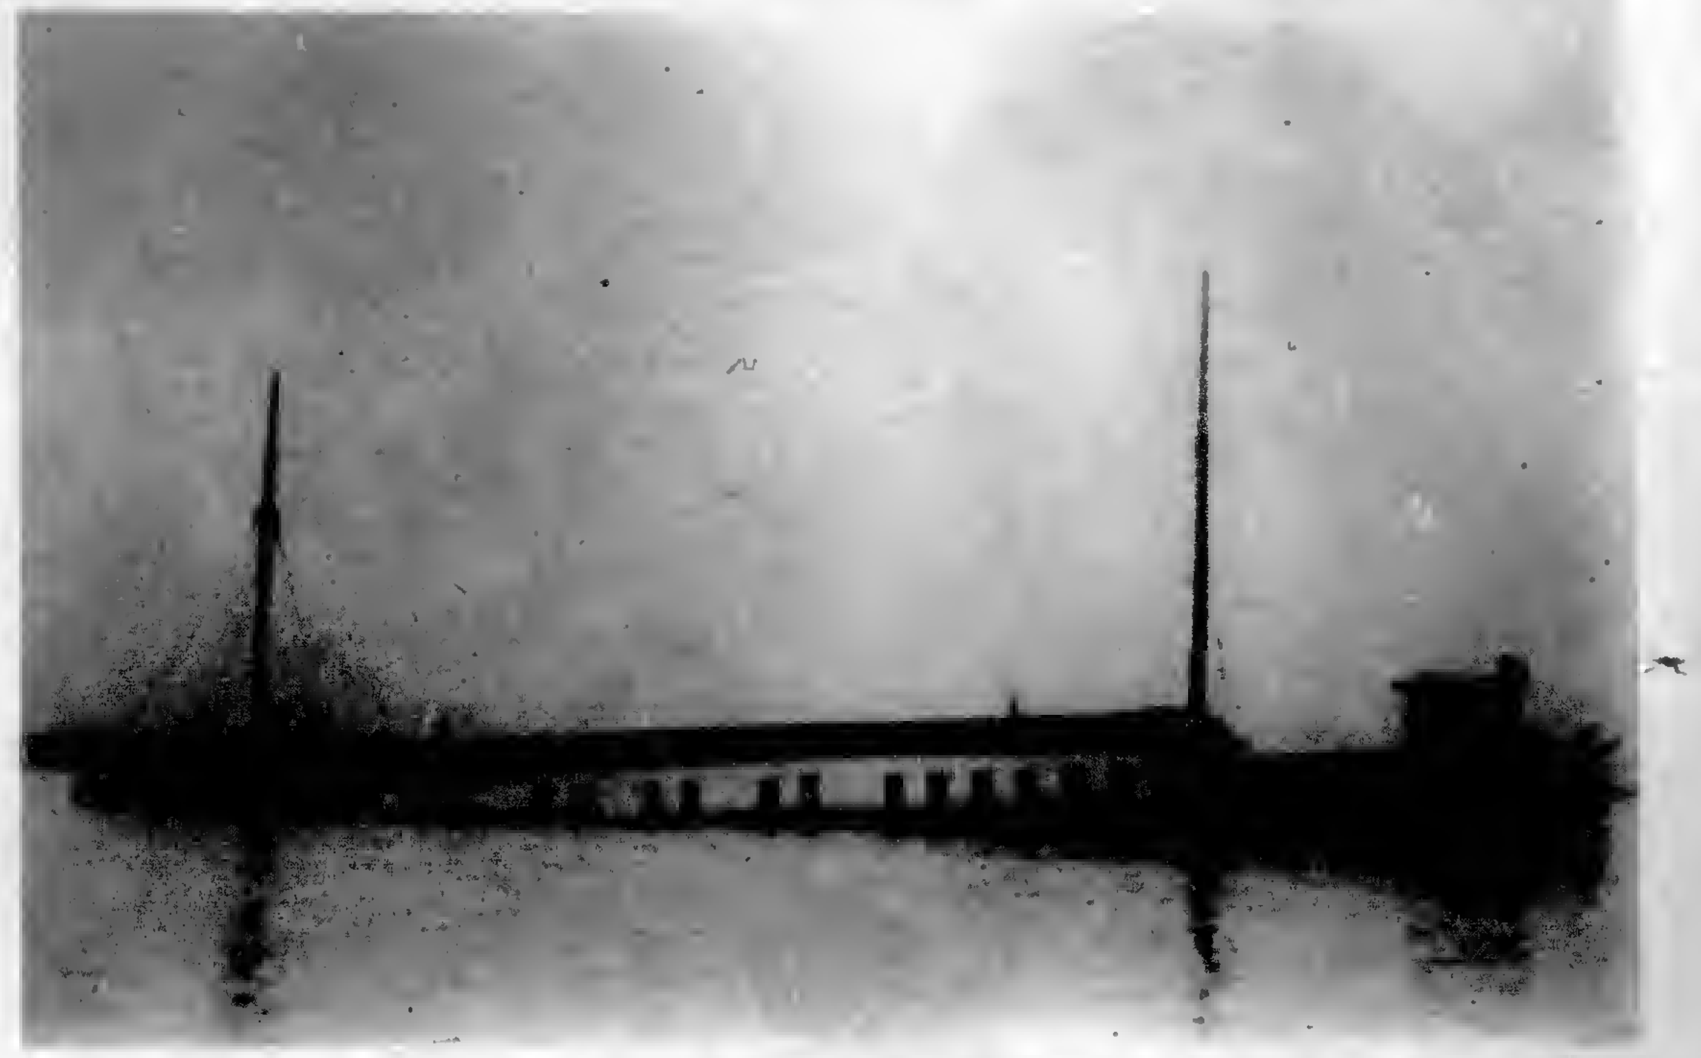
After arriving in Charlevoix about 1930, she was used as an offshore casino. Picking up guests at her Mason Street berth, she was towed up and down Lake Charlevoix.

One story, by the daughter of Captain Gallagher, told of the Keuka breaking loose from the Ossian Beddell during an unusually windy cruise. While the crew quickly maneuvered the tow vessel to reattach the roving casino, guests where unaware of their "independent status." While on the Keuka guests were allowed to bring alcohol, at that time illegal to possess or imbibe, and entertain themselves with gambling games.

After many complaints from local Charlevoix residents, ranging from distaste with her nightly activities to her state of disrepair, she was towed and anchored off the now Northwest Marina complex. There she was tended by Jim Wyers who was responsible for making sure she was pumped free of water once a day.

The floating entertainment venue ended its career on Sunday morning, August 14, 1932. She quietly slipped beneath the waves of Lake Charlevoix and into about 50 feet of water. According to the late Louis Edwards, at that time a small boy who had dodged going to church, the bow began to sink and the rest slowly followed. Before Edwards' interview in 1992, stories of her demise ranged from members of the local Women's Christian Temperance Union to federal revenue officers sinking her in the night.

In 1993, during a monthly meeting of the Charlevoix Historical Society, Dr. Lysle Anee of Charlevoix revealed a set of photographs he had taken the day the Keuka sank. The series of photographs, taken by a young man in a sailboat, depicted the Keuka slowly descending beneath the waves in an uneventful manner. Later that same year, her masts were removed, using dynamite, by Hamilton's brother to eliminate the navigational hazard.



The Keuka ended its era of entertainment when it slowly sank to the bottom of Lake Charlevoix in 1932. She's still down there, able to only entertain curious divers who wish to explore her rotting remains.

The dance hall structure has never been located. Divers believe it floated away during the sinking or exploded into lumber scraps with the pressure of the trapped air and enveloping water.

While the uneventful fate of the Keuka dims in comparison to other Great Lakes shipwreck stories, her attraction still persisted as shipwreck furniture salvagers located her in 1960s and descended onto her deck. There they found a virtually complete ship waiting to be raised and converted into a floating museum. This idea, however, did not work as the proposed pumping of pellets into her hold proved to be to expensive. Later her large rudder was removed, eventually to allegedly form the piano bar top in the Earl Young's Weathervane restaurant.

Today the Keuka remains intact and inviting to divers, and to local historians who can research through a large collection of materials, photographs, videotapes and oral history tapes housed in the library of the Charlevoix Historical Society's Harsha House Museum.

Acacia commander bids farewell

Change of ship's command Sunday

By Janenne Irene Froats
Courier editor

Lt. Cmdr. Steve Corporon first set foot on the U.S. Coast Guard Cutter Acacia when he was still in training 16 years ago. From that moment, there was no question that he wanted to travel the Great Lakes on a buoy tender.

For the past three years, he has walked the bridge of that same ship as captain.

"It looks like I'm starting and ending my black fleet career on the Acacia," he said. Buoy tenders all have black hulls.

Before his summer visit to the ship, which was then stationed at Grand Haven, Corporon was contemplating dropping out of the Coast Guard academy. He'd only seen law enforcement and drug patrol duties.

He discovered buoy tending. And now he wears his stripes with confidence as he leads a crew of 50 through the seasonal duties of installing and removing buoys that mark safe waters along the west side of the state and over to Alpena.

Corporon's last journey leading the Acacia is over. He's beginning a new journey on land that means moving his wife and three sons to Virginia, where he has been assigned to be chief of the Coast Guard's National Aids to Navigation School.

After tours on three ships, Corporon knew his next assignment would involve a desk instead of a bridge. However, it does have its advantages.

"It's the first time I'll be home every night in eight years," he said, between bites of the cookie he was dunking in milk for desert. With the addition of a baby boy, Corporon said he's ready to grow some roots. However, he knows pulling up the roots here in Charlevoix will cause some pain.

"This is the toughest place for us to leave," he said, "so tough that we are considering retiring up here eventually.

"It's going to be sad."

Corporon is a Rotarian, Little League umpire, elder at Bethany Lutheran Church and all-around active member of the community. He and his wife, Sarah, tutor students in the elementary school's reading program and are involved in leading worship at church.

Some would say chance brought the Corporon's to Charlevoix and completed the circle for the captain to take charge of the ship that had guided his young career. Before assuming command of the Acacia, he had received orders to Alaska.

When the position opened on the Acacia, Corporon received a call. He and his family came back to the town the captain first became acquainted with when he served on the cutter Mesquite in the early 1980s.

Lt. Cmdr. Steven Corporon has enjoyed the autonomy that comes with commanding the Acacia. "It's just big enough to be influential, but it's not so big that it's unmanageable."

Charlevoix native, Charlotte Willis, enjoys life as she approaches her 100th birthday on Sunday, July 28. Family and friends will celebrate at Boulder Park Terrace.

100 years of stories

Charlevoix woman's hands still do their work

By B. J. Hetler
Courier reporter

At 99 years of age there are a lot of memories to ponder. But for Charlotte Willis the memory of her life on the farm is a favorite.

"I liked farming the best of all things," she said. "I'd still be farming if I could."

Willis and her husband, George, worked a 325-acre farm on Marion Center Road for years. They raised crops, a garden, dairy cows, pigs, chickens and black draft horses. The horses took prizes every year at the county fair.

The farm kept them busy, Willis said, with something to do for the animals all of the time, such as feeding them and helping them give birth.

Willis even trained one of their pigs to come into the house.

"You can train a pig just like you can train a dog," she said. "Most people don't know that."

Willis and her husband worked together on the farm. "And I mean we worked right together," she said, leaning forward in her chair to add emphasis.

"I worked the farm just like a man. I mowed hay, pitched hay up on the loader. It was heavy work. It's the reason I'm as well as I am now," she said, with a smile in her clear, gray-blue eyes.

Willis, a Charlevoix native, celebrates her 100th birthday on Sunday, July 28, at Boulder Park Terrace. She acknowledges her age with a dignified nod.

Her work no longer involves heavy lifting, but it takes concentration and patience. Her thin, quick fingers pull the tiny needle through a colorful patchwork placemat. She spends many afternoons making

School prepares for bond election

By B. J. Hetler
Courier reporter

About 30 people, most of them teachers, gained insight into conducting a successful bond campaign Thursday evening at the high school library.

Campaign expert Don Bemis of A.G. Edwards & Sons, Inc., an investment banking firm, stressed the need to confirm about 1,200 supporters.

Bemis also said parents who are not registered to vote need to be identified, pointing out that at least 30 percent of the parents are not registered. Also, the school system's 170 employees need to get up to speed with information about the bond issues.

As for the role of the school board, Bemis said it should run an information campaign and let citizens' groups run an advocacy campaign.

"Citizen led campaigns win," he said. "Board led campaigns do not."

The public does not want its taxes raised, but it does want what is best for the kids, Bemis said. The approach to the public should be through what is good for the kids.

"Don't they deserve the same technology you find down here at McDonald's?" Bemis asked, referring to the need for new computers.

After the speech, the audience broke into elementary, middle and high school groups for discussion of steering committees.

A.G. Edwards would be paid for their campaign expertise by selling the bonds if the proposals are passed by the voters, company vice president Don Elliott said.

The two proposals amount to about $20 million worth of bonds, which would build a new high school, renovate the elementary and turn the current high school into a middle school, and fund an performance auditorium.

Library moves toward district funding

Area governmental representatives met for the second time to continue its work to transfer the ownership of the Charlevoix Public Library from the Charlevoix Public Schools to a district entity. Under Proposal A, schools are no longer permitted to assess the millage necessary to operate public libraries. A library district must be created from a participating city, school and townships, which assesses the millage and assume management.

Representatives from the City of Charlevoix, Hayes Township, Marion Township, Charlevoix Township, Norwood Township and Charlevoix Public Schools are recommending that:

— The library retain its legal name of Charlevoix Public Library.

— The board be comprised of a representative from each governmental body.

— Board terms will be three years with no term limits.

Future business will include the transfer of property and interim funding issues. Current school funds used to operate the library runs out in June of 1997, at which time the district will hold an election to assess continuing millage.

Correction

A story in last week's issue on Charlevoix Area Hospital was missing a decimal in a numeral. The hospital had approximately $3.5 million in bad-debt adjustments during 1995-96. That amount includes services billed to Medicaid, Medicare and Blue Cross. Less was actually paid by the insurances.

placemats and pot holders to give to friends or sell. In past years, Willis made quilts and for a time she taught sewing at Barnard School.

Willis gets her love of sewing from her mother.

"She sewed beautifully," she said. Her mother lived to 94-years-old.

She adored both her parents, who raised her, along with four sisters and three brothers. The togetherness began early. Willis was born at home, with the aid of a midwife in 1896. Her dad took the kids to a nearby lake in the winters for ice skating.

"Families don't get together anymore," Willis said. "Children go one way and parents the other. Mothers work and children run wild."

"The younger generation is going to pot," she said.

The way times are now with mothers working, Willis doesn't see how things can change. She said women have to go out to work now because families need two incomes. Part of the reason they need two incomes, she said, is because of the cost of living. But another reason is that people want too much.

"Couples now when they get married, have to have everything at once," she said.

Willis remembers times of simple pleasures when her husband and she would socialize at the Grange Hall or go into town on a Saturday evening for ice cream.

Society has changed. When she was married and living on the farm she never knew how many people she would have for dinner.

"People would drop in all the time," she said. "Now you have to be invited."

Charlotte Willis celebrates her 100th birthday with family and friends from 3-5 p.m. Sunday, July 28, at Boulder Park Terrace.

Willis has one son, Jim. He and his wife, Dorothy, have two children. Her granddaughter, Ann Marie, inherited Willis' love of hunting deer and hunts every year with the same gun she used.

Willis said she has had a good life and that many of the things she has done have been things she loves to do.

She enjoyed the times she was a midwife and she delivered three of her friend's four daughters.

"Those girls are my girls too," she said.

Willis is happy about her 100th birthday. She offers words of wisdom for a content life.

"Get something you like and do it," she advises.

"If you like something, then it's fun to do it. It's intelligent and you learn something."

Film brings local faces to the big screen at Cinema III

By Janenne Irene Froats
Courier editor

Beth Strawbridge's son thinks that Steven Spielberg might call and offer her a movie deal.

After all, she's premiered on the big screen — as an extra in Straight to the Heart.

"I think that's a pretty wild impossibility," Strawbridge said, of her son's idea.

Although Strawbridge takes pride in her brief but creative appearance in the movie, she isn't expecting fame from it. She was one of many area people to take part in the 1994 filming, an opportunity made available through her involvement with the Little Traverse Civic Theater.

After years of stage work and following scripts, she felt as though she had really acted when she stepped away from the lights and cameras of this set. Her body language was her only script.

As a shop keeper in the artistic romance, Strawbridge was asked to step out onto the street with another woman and give the leading lady a disdainful look.

"They just told us we had a history with her," she said.

It was time to go to work.

"We provided our own script and our own motivation for our action," she said. "We called upon our acting skills to develop the scene."

Beth is one of many local people who will be preserved on the silver screen as cast members of Straight to the Heart. The movie was filmed in Petoskey, Harbor Springs and Traverse City. It is playing in Charlevoix this weekend, through Thursday, Aug. 1.

The movie is described as a quirky drama, a European art film. The plot revolves around a love triangle. At the center is Alice, who is drawn back to the Midwest town by family ties and a desire to return to her childhood home. Leon, a rising small town lawyer has been courting Alice. Jack, a poker hustler, returns after five years away to quickly sell his house and leave. Everything gets shuffled when he and Alice are introduced.

"It's the best love story in town," said producer, Will Macomber, who is promoting the film from Harbor Springs. "With all the action films out there, it is a nice alternative."

Strawbridge said her favorite part of watching the movie was seeing the people she knows on scene. Those moments came after much waiting. There was waiting between takes, waiting for lunch, waiting for makeup and waiting for retakes.

Laura Smith of Charlevoix was also an extra in the film. She is at a party during the first five minutes of the movie. She donned her own black party dress and arrived at a barn in Harbor Springs for an evening shoot. Filming was done with laughing and talking, and then in complete silence.

"Oh, why not?" she asked herself. "It's fun to have something like that in the area that involves a lot of locals."

The extras didn't get paid for the time and energy. They did, however, get to see behind the glamour of the silver scene and into the hours of work it takes to put each scene together.

OPINIONS

Honor, responsibility one when serving as mayor

EDITORIAL

City council meetings in Charlevoix are packed with opinions.

There are the elected ward leaders who bring their ideas to the council table in hopes of leading the city with sound decisions.

And there are those who bring their ideas into the audience, the constituents who want to influence council decisions that effect them and their neighbors.

At the helm of all the motions, seconds, votes and seemingly endless discussions is Charlevoix Mayor Josh Barnes. He is charged with running the meetings in fairness and efficiency.

At council's last meeting, July 15, that responsibility was abandoned by the mayor. He became frustrated with citizens' and their persistent desire to have the Venetian carnival moved out of the downtown and those who insist on living on Belvedere — not Hurlbut.

The ongoing controversy involved in each topic and the amount of energy already put into making council's decisions cannot be discounted.

Issues once thought to be settled were again being questioned. And suddenly, the mayor is missing his gavel and council is left to step out from behind a silent leader.

Barnes ended his leadership for the meeting by stating that he didn't feel as though the meeting "was getting anywhere." He just slid his gavel to council member, Alwyn "Butch" Russell.

During Barnes' siesta, Russell projected confidence and kept order in the meeting. He referred street addressing back to the original committee and closed the meeting.

We understand that frustrations come, some situations seem to never end. However, if the city treasurer were to step out of his role, who would pay the bills? If the police chief were to relinquish his duties, who would keep law and order throughout town?

There's always somebody to pass the torch — responsibilities — to. But it should only be done in the mayor's absence, not out of frustration.

Throughout much discussion, council lacked the mayor's guidance.

Being mayor means more than opening meetings, calling for votes, authenticating documents with his signature, leading parades and offering ideas to improve city operation. It means, according to Robert's Rules of Order, restraining council members when engaged in debate within the rules of order. It means representing and standing for the council. It means controlling oneself in order to control the meeting.

The mayor does have the right to appoint a chairman pro tem, which is a temporary assignment. In the most informal way, he did pass on his duties. But rather than appear beaten and frustrated, the mayor would have been better to take a breath and end discussion once all points are made.

City council has the right to impose time limits on public comment to ensure that people stay on the subject, let their opinion be known and sit down.

Long-lived discussions that are presented, decided and rehashed with passion can be tiring. But setting an example of leadership and patience should also be a goal for Charlevoix's mayor. After all, he represents more than the city council. He represents the entire community.

No matter where the individual wars may try to pull city council meetings, we ask that Barnes fulfill his responsibilities in leading city meetings as long as he is present and serving as mayor.

Letters to the Editor

Keep post office downtown

Editor:

I wish to protest any movement to move the Post Office to the city limits. Logically, the Post Office should be within walking distance of the center of population. The trend in this area of micro chips and computerization is to minimize not maximize. Jeff Stosek should do his homework. Land is available in the downtown area. Also, are we not creating another area of traffic congestion when locating the post office in an already growing commercial area?

Respectfully,
Ralph Hamilton

Rid paper of spelling errors

Editor:

In the last two issues of the Courier, I have noticed spelling boo-boos, incorrect picture captions, and incomplete sentences. This probably shouldn't bother me, but it seems to me that a new editor should be trying to make the paper the best that it can be, especially in the area of spelling and content accuracy and grammar.

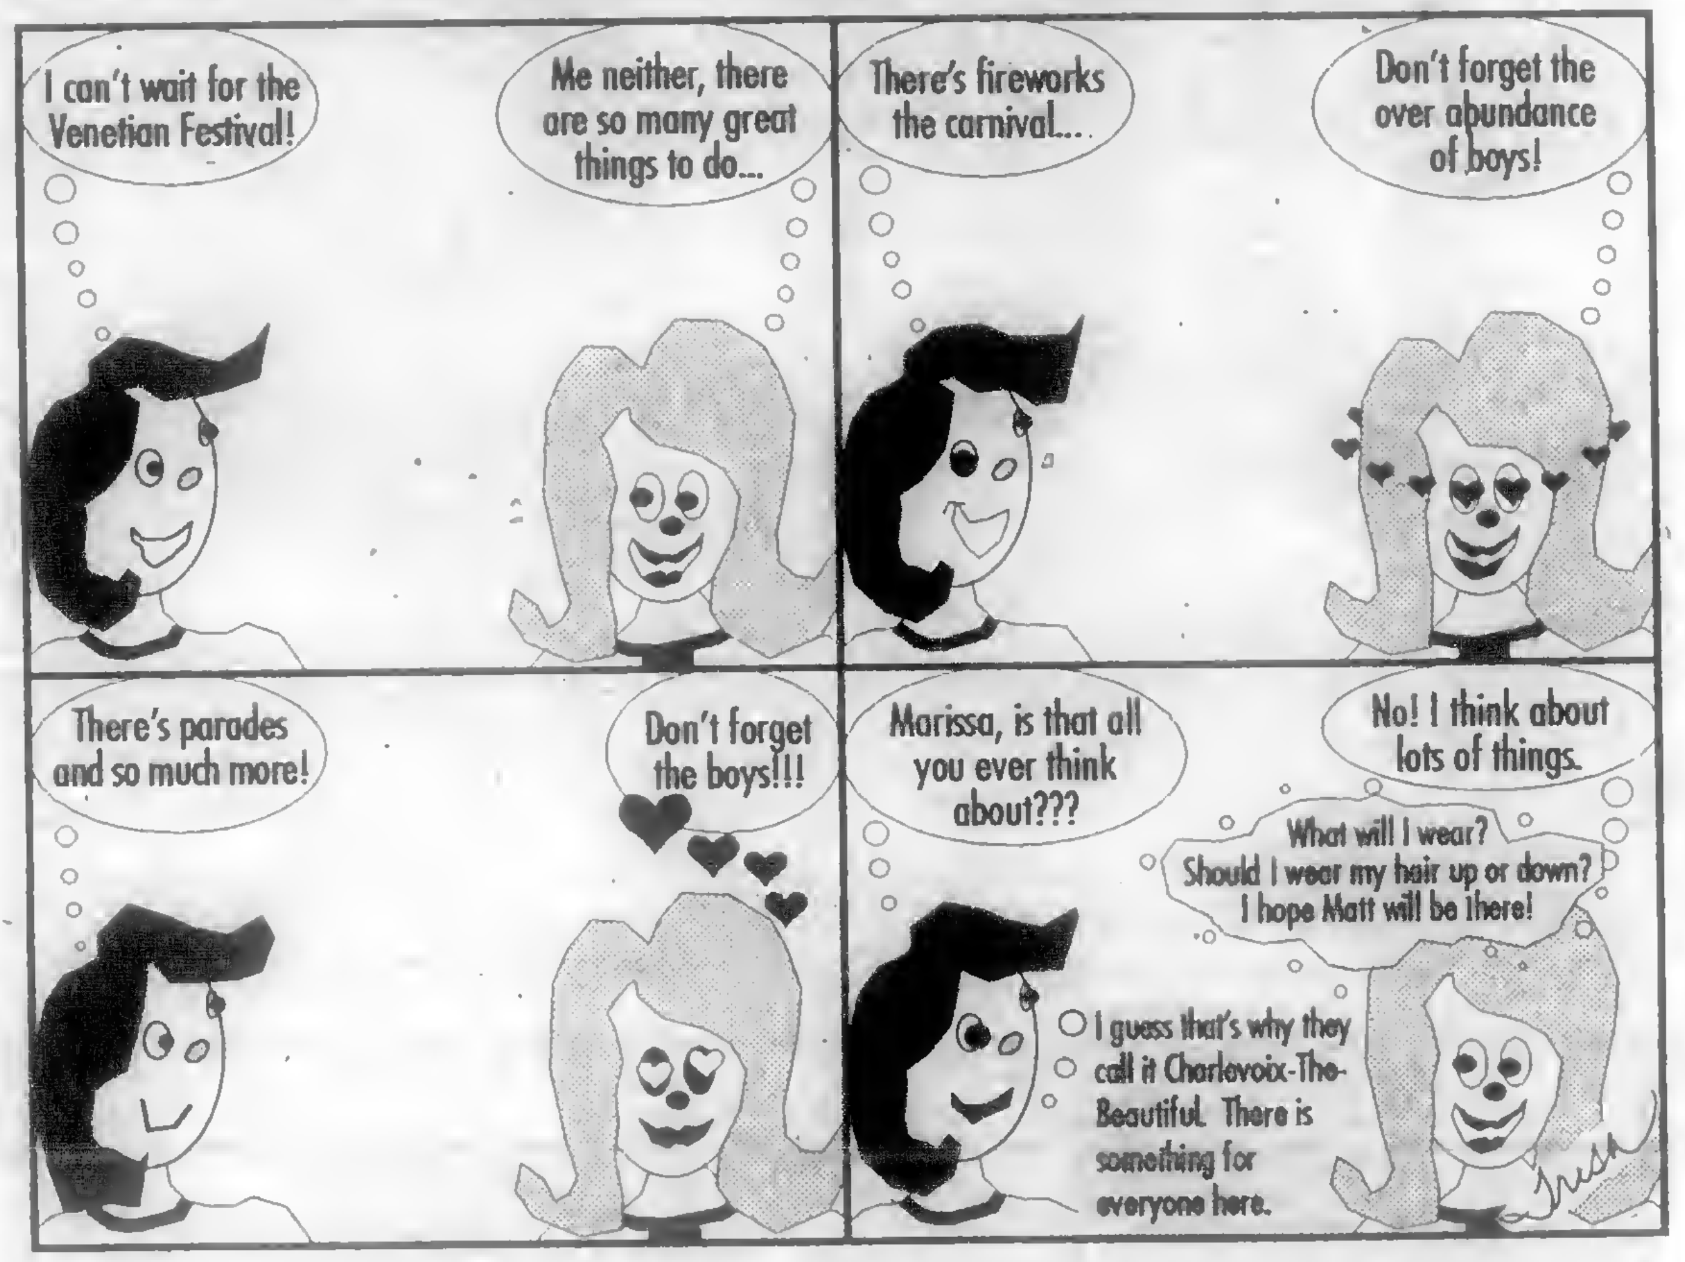
The spelling and caption errors were in the July 3 issue where a small boy was shown with a golf club in two pictures, getting ready to "put" and watching his "put," but he wasn't putting. In the July 10 issue, the correct spelling of "putt" was used in the caption of the Charlevoix Gold Club picture, but she also wasn't putting. Both golfers were swinging away — the boy with an iron in the first two pictures, and the lady with what appears to be a driver in the third. My wife, who is not a golfer, even caught this one.

On page two of the July 10 issue, the third paragraph of the Beaver Islander story seems to be incomplete. After starting with "Although ...." it kind of left me hanging, wondering what else he said. On page 19 was a typo in the date the 100 acres of land was bought by the Charlevoix Golf Club. I assume it was supposed to be 1900, not 1990.

All these little things make your paper harder to read smoothly. Perhaps your proofreader needs more time to do a better job.

In closing, I would like to compliment you on the improved layout with the new headers and front page. It really looks nice.

Sincerely,
Dick Peel



I can't wait for the Venetian Festival!
Me neither, there are so many great things to do...
There's fireworks the carnival...
Don't forget the over abundance of boys!
There's parades and so much more!
Don't forget the boys!!!
Marissa, is that all you ever think about???
No! I think about lots of things.
What will I wear? Should I wear my hair up or down? I hope Matt will be there!
I guess that's why they call it Charlevoix-The-Beautiful. There is something for everyone here.

Guest commentary

This guest commentary was submitted by Charlevoix resident Jo Anne Beemon.

As the "environmentalist" representative to Consumers Power Co.'s Big Rock Point Nuclear Plant's Citizen Advisory Board, I would like to share a few observations. The advisory board was created a little over a year ago by Consumers Power Co. Utilities across the United States have found it helpful to form citizen boards, establish working relationships and to share information that will expedite the goals and agenda of the industry. These boards can provide a real service to the community by opening lines of communication and apprising citizens of developments in their local nuclear facilities.

Honest communication and factual dialogue are essential to making responsible earth stewardship decisions. My goal, when I accepted a position on the board, was to work to gain the respect of the board and the utility representatives, to learn and to share information when appropriate. I did ask that in the event the board make a public statement, I be given the opportunity to express a dissenting opinion. Also, because I was asked to represent "environmentalists," I did not want to appear to support action or legislation that I saw as negative to the health of the environment or human rights.

At the June 28 meeting, Tim Petrosky, Big Rock Point public relations person, presented a draft letter supporting U.S. Senate Bill 1271 to the board and asked for our support. Utilities across the United States have drafted similar letters asking for bill passage because it would in part, move the liability of possession of high-level nuclear waste from utility sites to a temporary, publicly-owned site. Basically, the legislation slashes environmental standards, preempts local and state laws, and calls for the siting of a high-level waste "interim" storage facility at the Nevada Test Site before a decision is made on nearby Yucca Mountain's suitability as host for a proposed repository.

"Spent fuel" is nuclear fuel that has been irradiated in a reactor. It is perhaps the most deadly toxin known to man. It is a carcinogen for hundreds of thousands of years. To handle high-level nuclear waste demands our best technologies and no mistakes. The fuel must be shielded at all times from human contact (a few seconds of unshielded exposure to a fuel rod is deadly) and the dropping of fuel could cause a critical accident. Handling of radioactive fuel rods should take place only when absolutely necessary.

In the citizen board's discussion following Mr. Petrosky's presentation:

1. I requested that the bill be sent to board members for review before a vote was taken.

2. I expressed concern that the permanent high-level waste site at Yucca Mountain was still in the exploratory stage and that the people of Nevada do not want our waste. (Some groups are threatening to defend their borders with arms if necessary!).

3. I shared information that a fire or explosion occurred on May 28 when welding a cask loaded with high-level radioactive waste at the Point Beach Nuclear Power Plant near Manitowoc Wisconsin. The Board was informed by Consumers personnel that it was not an "explosion" or a "fire," but rather a "small hydrogen burn" due to a combination of chemicals. Whether a "gas ignition" or "burn," a "short combustion" or "energetic disassembly," the "WOOF!" was sufficient to blow a 4,400-pound, 9-inch thick lid off the kilter. This seemed to indicate a less than perfect technology. Before lids are welded at Big Rock, (each fuel rod carries radioactive materials equal to several Hiroshima sized bombs) I would like to see the technology improved. It also concerns me that forcing citizens of Nevada to take high-level nuclear waste (Nevada has no nuclear power plants) sets a dangerous precedent for more intrusive, bigger government. (Diversion of water from the Great Lakes next?)

We know high-level nuclear waste must be shielded and guarded and kept isolated for 200,000 years at least. Mind boggling when we remember that the last ice age was a mere 10,000 years ago! An Indian saying tells us to "walk as if your footstep effects 7 generations." Nuclear waste is our legacy to over 7,000 generations! Congress and the Department of Energy have been accused of misappropriating funds for high-level waste disposal. They have and they're wrong. However, to fault them for failure to resolve the permanent disposal problem is a little like accusing the alchemists of sluffing on the task of turning lead into gold. We must have the courage to re-evaluate the magnitude of the problem, and the integrity to avoid the temptation of quick, band-aid fixes that will cause expense and misery for generations to come. The task is monumental. We are nowhere near a solution.

It is becoming increasingly clear that rather than throwing good money after bad, in the fervent hope of creating "miracle" technologies to safely "dispose" of high-level radioactive waste forever, we need to take a deep breath and resolve that we need to plan for near eternal vigilance of high-level wastes. As difficult and unpleasant as it is, we must assure that waste remains in sight and mind so that as waste containers and storage vaults degrade, future generations will be aware of the need to retrieve, repair and replace them. It is wrong to gamble that containers will hold and the earth will stand still epoch after epoch!

The moral decisions we make about how we use resources today effects all the children of many tomorrows. We must decide if we will put our faith for the future in respectful careful stewardship of creation, or in faith in the ability of technology to bail the children of tomorrow out of the crises we create today.

I voted no on the motion and asked that my dissent be noted as follows:

1. The storage technologies for high-level radioactive wastes are in the developmental stage and have not been shown to be safe.

2. I cannot morally justify forcing citizens of Nevada to take high-level radioactive waste generated in Michigan by Consumers Power Co.

3. The action encourages federal intervention over states' and human rights and could set a precedent for diverting the waters of the Great Lakes.

If it is possible for the human race to live well without creating nuclear waste, it would seem prudent to do so. In the meantime, we must continue to share information, honest dialogue and ideas if we are to deal with the important issues of nuclear waste and energy production.

I would like to thank Tim Petrosky and Consumers Power Co. for inviting me to serve on the board.

Out of the Blue

The best policy? It's honesty,
Like we always used to say.
It still is such, but isn't much
In use from day-to-day.

Students award self funded scholarship

Marcy Wojan

Marcy Wojan, a recent Charlevoix graduate, is receiving money for college from her fellow Charlevoix High School National Honor Society members. She is the recipient of a $750 scholarship, which began four years ago as an annual service project. Money was gathered through club fund-raisers.

Scholarship applicants were required to have a grade point average of 3.5 or better, respond to three essays, provide three letters of recommendation and be accepted at a college or trade school.

Marcy, the daughter of Dennis and Florence Wojan, will be attending St. Mary's College of Notre Dame in the fall.

People around town might think their carrier is driving a new postal truck. But the old ones are really just returning from annual maintenance. Post master, Jay Wheatley, said the trucks were given whatever body work was necessary, painted and the motors tuned up. "The only thing they didn't do, is turn the odometer back," he said.

Use life's pressures as an advantage

People can't rid themselves of job-related stress. In fact, they need a certain amount of stress of perform their jobs. But how people handle pressure can mean the difference between being happy and productive, or frustrated and anxious.

A Stress Management workshop is being held at North Central Michigan College's library/conference center from 9-11 a.m. Friday, Aug. 16, with registration at 8:30 a.m. or by calling the Petoskey chamber at 347-4150. Cost is $15.

BEACONS OF BLESSINGS

By Rev. Bruce Hamilton
Community Church of God

Have you ever thought about how blessed we are to have Charlevoix Area Hospital? There are not too many communities our size that have not only the facility that we do but also the compassionate and loving staff that makes patient care so special.

I celebrated the end of winter by taking a fall in one of the last snow storms of the season and breaking my wrist. After about a month in the cast, the bone specialist sent me to Charlevoix hospital's physical therapy department. At first the pain was a little more than I had been prepared for, but oh what a difference their attention has made.

What touched me most was during a recent visit for a treatment session. It was obvious that they were having a "bad" day. There were patients jammed in every nook and cranny of the treatment area and every therapist had his or her hands full with either an exercise program, an ultrasound treatment or something else to help the patient. As I looked at the folks with hip problems, back problems, knee problems and other things, suddenly my little old wrist didn't seem very important at all. In fact, I had made up my mind that I would leave and come back another day when they weren't so loaded down.

When I told the young woman who had more or less been in charge of my care that I would come back another day when they weren't so occupied with such serious cases, she said something truly special. After thanking me for my gesture, she said, "Bruce you're just as important as anyone else here and your full recovery is just as important to me."

I have to confess that I kind of liked hearing that. A pastor, by the very nature of their calling, is used to deferring their concerns on behalf of the loved ones they serve. It was neat to think that I was viewed with such concern by someone else.

Should it be all that hard to follow where I'm heading next? You really are important in the eyes of God as well. There is nothing too great. There is nothing too small. There is nothing you face that is too insignificant for God's loving care. If it is a burden to you, it is a burden to your Father in heaven. If it pains you, He feels the heartache, too. He will do everything in His power to go out of His way to be sure you know that you really are important in His eyes, that whatever you are facing is worth His full attention.

And when you recognize the true nature of the Father's love for you, you ought to let Him know how you feel. You ought to let Him know that you are grateful that there is nothing too great or too small when it comes to His care for you.

Which reminds me. Thank you Susan, Dawn, Boh, Sonya, Pat, Cindy and all the staff in physical therapy. Thank you for the care and concern you have shared with me. Thank you for taking such good care of everyone who has been blessed with your skill and expertise. You make a difference in people's lives and you need to know that you are appreciated.

Watch for swimmers itch, children especially prone

Health department issues prevention warning for water

Cases of "swimmers' itch" have been reported to the health department.

Swimmers' itch is a skin rash caused by certain parasites of birds and mammals. Parasites are released from infected snails and migrate through waters.

People who swim or wade in infested water may experience the itching rash. Children are often infected because of their habits of swimming or wading in the water and playing on the beach as the water evaporates from the skin.

Parasites may enter the skin of bathers or swimmers in different ways. Some penetrate while swimming, while other species appear to enter only after the person has emerged from the water.

Entry can be felt as a dull, prickly and itchy sensation. A victim's first exposure to infested water may not result in the itchy rash. Repeated exposure increases a person's sensitivity to the parasite and increases the likelihood of a rash.

Symptoms may appear within one to two hours of exposure. Intermittent periods of itching will continue for several days.

The victim suffers the most during the first four or five days after exposure. After a week, the reddened areas usually disappear, leaving a spot that resembles a small bruise. Individuals should contact their family physician when the diagnosis is unclear, complications such as infection are present, or the reaction is intensely itchy and intolerable.

Avoid situations that encourage birds to remain in areas where people frequent water. Feeding birds should be discouraged. Some species of snails deposit their eggs on concrete walls or on rocks that have been used as rip-rap to prevent erosion of the shoreline. It appears that most swimmers contact parasites while swimming on eastern and southern lake shores. It should be noted that children who continually go in and out of the shallow water often get heavy cases of swimmers' itch. Continuous swimming along the shore should be avoided because large numbers of parasites can accumulate there.

A final preventive measure for combating swimmers' itch is through washing and toweling off immediately after leaving the water. Floating parasites are sticky and attach to the body as the bather leaves the water. As an individual emerges from the water, the parasite enters the skin as the body air dries.

For further information, contact your family physician or local health department.

BEACONS

OF BLESSINGS

By Rev. Bruce Hamilton
Community Church of God

Have you ever thought about how blessed we are to have Charlevoix Area Hospital? There are not too many communities our size that have not only the facility that we do but also the compassionate and loving staff that makes patient care so special.

I celebrated the end of winter by taking a fall in one of the last snow storms of the season and breaking my wrist. After about a month in the cast, the bone specialist sent me to Charlevoix hospital's physical therapy department. At first the pain was a little more than I had been prepared for, but oh what a difference their attention has made.

What touched me most was during a recent visit for a treatment session. It was obvious that they were having a "bad" day. There were patients jammed in every nook and cranny of the treatment area and every therapist had his or her hands full with either an exercise program, an ultrasound treatment or something else to help the patient. As I looked at the folks with hip problems, back problems, knee problems and other things, suddenly my little old wrist didn't seem very important at all. In fact, I had made up my mind that I would leave and come back another day when they weren't so loaded down.

When I told the young woman who had more or less been in charge of my care that I would come back another day when they weren't so occupied with such serious cases, she said something truly special. After thanking me for my gesture, she said, "Bruce you're just as important as anyone else here and your full recovery is just as important to me."

I have to confess that I kind of liked hearing that. A pastor, by the very nature of their calling, is used to deferring their concerns on behalf of the loved ones they serve. It was neat to think that I was viewed with such concern by someone else.

Should it be all that hard to follow where I'm heading next? You really are important in the eyes of God as well. There is nothing too great. There is nothing too small. There is nothing you face that is too insignificant for God's loving care. If it is a burden to you, it is a burden to your Father in heaven. If it pains you, He feels the heartache, too. He will do everything in His power to go out of His way to be sure you know that you really are important in His eyes, that whatever you are facing is worth His full attention.

And when you recognize the true nature of the Father's love for you, you ought to let Him know how you feel. You ought to let Him know that you are grateful that there is nothing too great or too small when it comes to His care for you.

Which reminds me. Thank you Susan, Dawn, Bob, Sonya, Pat, Cindy and all the staff in physical therapy. Thank you for the care and concern you have shared with me. Thank you for taking such good care of everyone who has been blessed with your skill and expertise. You make a difference in people's lives and you need to know that you are appreciated.

LexaLite International gets closer to SUMMA merger

By Janenne Irene Froats
Courier editor

A pending merger between LexaLite International Corp. and SUMMA Industries isn't expceted to alter business as usual in the companies, two plants.

"The anticipated merger should be considered a transparent activity for our customers, suppliers and certainly all our employees," said LexaLite president Tom Phillips.

LexaLite has plants in Charlevoix and Dickson, Tenn.

SUMMA has entered into a definitive agreement to acquire all of the outstanding stock of LexaLite International Corporation in exchange for shares of its common stock, according to SUMMA, a California-based company.

The agreement was unanimously approved by both boards of directors from the two companies. It is subject to a number of conditions, including approval of the shareholders. Proxy statements and ballots are expected to be mailed this fall, according to a news release.

Phillips said that major stockholders have been involved in extensive discussions about the possible merger. Ballot results are expected to be gathered by year end.

LexaLite employees between 275 and 300 people, about 180 of which work in the Charlevoix plant.

The company designs and manufactures injection-molded lighting components, refractors and reflectors, and other plastic products. It was founded in 1963 to provide plastic lighting part which would withstand vandalism while eliminating a safety hazard associated with glass parts.

The merger isn't expected to effect the way LexaLite does business, where it's located or the number of employees, Phillips said.

"LexaLite will continue to be LexaLite just as we know it," he said.

Phillips believes that the merger provides LexaLite with opportunities to continue growing while maintaining its name.

"We can remain LexaLite International without having to be absorbed by any other company," he said.

If approved by shareholders from both companies, the merger is expected to be a tax-free reorganization in which 1.5 shares of SUMMA's common stock will be issued in exchange for each share of LexaLite's outstanding stock.

SUMMA is a holding company whose subsidiaries manufacture industrial components, including engineered plastic injection-molded conveyor components.

For the year ended Aug. 31, 1995, SUMMA earned $676,000, or 44 cents per share from sales of $10.2 million. For the nine months ended May 31, 1996, the continuing operation average 34 cents per share, with sales on $8.9 million. About 1.6 million shares of SUMMA's common stock are outstanding.

LexaLite earned $1.3 million on sales of $32.8 million for the year ended June 30, 1995. For the nine months ended May 31, 1996, it earned $1.1 million on sales of $25.9 million.

Phillips said even if the merger is made, a local LexaLite board of directors will serve as liaison to SUMMA Industries.

"Nothing changes," Phillips said. "Overall management will remain the same."

Bartletts' expands

By B. J. Hetler
Courier reporter

The enormous task of unpacking boxes and sorting out items is nearing an end at Bartletts' Home Interiors' new store, said business manager Robert Atkinson.

"I'm sure we've doubled our inventory," he said. "And we've tripled the amount of showroom space."

The inventory lines are expanded to include a Lane Action Gallery, a Sealy and a Stearns and Foster Sleep Center, new lamp and accessory lines and new carpet and other floor covering lines.

The space has increased from about 12,000-square-feet at the old location downtown to 34,000-square-feet on three levels at the new store.

Bartletts' has also added three people to its sales staff and several other employees.

A 30 percent increase in sales at the former store prompted owners Bruce and Sue Bartlett to build the new store, after 25 years at the old location.

"This is a growing area," Atkinson said. "The old store got too small." Bartletts' customers include part-time as well as year-around residents, he said.

Bartletts' Home Interiors, located at 06499 M-66 North across from the K-Mart plaza, hopes to hold its grand opening in a few weeks. The new store hours are 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Mondays through Thursdays, 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. on Fridays, and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Saturdays.

Venetian events pack fun-filled weekend in Charlevoix

The popularity of the Venetian Festival stems from being a long standing tradition in the community, says overall chairman Tom Phillips. "It's not done virtually anywhere else. It's almost synonymous with Charlevoix."

The festival and its events are designed for the family.

In his first year as overall chairman, Phillips said the festival will keep close to tradition. The festival has been well organized over the past three years under the direction of John Taylor and it has worked out well, he said.

The parade will be somewhat larger, with six bugle corps participating, but overall the scene will be what is expected in Charlevoix this time of year.

One minor change will be in the location of the carnival, which will run up Mason Street from the corner of Bridge and back north in two public parking lots behind the stores. Even though there has been some controversy over the number of parking spaces to be covered by the midway, Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce Director, Jacqueline Merta, said the carnival will be set up in the lots.

After months of preparation, and numerous committee meetings by a team of volunteers, the sights and sounds of Venetian are about to descend on Charlevoix.

"Everything's right on schedule," Merta said. "All the chairman have all of their assignments taken care of. We're all looking forward to a great Venetian."

The festival begins Thursday, July 25, with Challenge the Chess Master from 2-6 p.m. The midway opens at 5 p.m. and carnival goers may ride all night for $8 on Thursday only. The carnival remains open through Saturday.

At 6:30 p.m. Saturday the city fire department will demonstrate the Jaws of Life. And karaoke music will flow from the Odmark Pavilion from 7-9 p.m.

Friday features tours of the Coast Guard Cutter Acacia from 1-4 p.m. and 6-8 p.m. A martial arts demonstration and a mime troupe performance also are planned for the evening.

Saturday features a full slate of events, beginning with the Drenth Memorial Foot Race at 8 a.m. Beach volleyball tournaments take place between 10 a.m. and 5 p.m. and the Street Parade begins at 11 a.m. Miss Charlevoix will be crowned at 8:30 p.m. and the Boat Parade begins at 10 p.m. The day's grand finale is the fireworks, which will be set to music in and around East Park.

Sunday is kicked off by a pancake breakfast at the American Legion Hall and at the Masonic Temple (Order of the Eastern Star) from 8 a.m. to noon and volleyball finals take place.

The festival is crowned by the changing of command ceremony at the Coast Guard Cutter Acacia where Lt. Cmdr. Steven R. Corporon will turn over command to Lt. Cmdr. Karl L. Schultz.

Venetian briefs

Band seeking alumni

Charlevoix school alumni are welcome to bring their instruments and perform with the Charlevoix Community Band during Venetian weekend.

To be in the parade, meet in the high school band room by 11 a.m. Saturday, July 27. To play in Saturday's concert in East Park, meet in the band room at 6:30 p.m. for rehearsal. The concert will begin about 8:15 p.m.

Odie update

Names are being collected and checked for a listing of contributors of $100 or more to be placed on the Odmark Pavilion.

The names will appear in the Wednesday, Aug. 7, issue of the Courier for public review before inscribing of the plaque.

Donors who have not reached $100 can send checks to Robert Hoffman, C.P.A., 100 Michigan Ave., Charlevoix, MI 49727.

Semi-pro game cancelled

The baseball game previously scheduled for Sunday between the Manistee Saints and the Charlevoix Allstars has been cancelled.

Events in brief

Venetian carnival remains behind Bridge Street

Despite opposition and a petition, the Venetian carnival will be placed on Mason, at Bridge Street, and occupy two public parking lots just north of Mason.

The city and chamber of commerce has indicated that they will try to accommodate Birdie Whitley, who's hair salon is being blocked without street access for customers.

As the carnival sets up Wednesday, customers with health problems will be allowed to drive beyond the barricade for closer parking. However, because of safety concerns, that exception will not be made during weekend operation, Charlevoix Police Chief, Dennis Halverson said.

Don't ride bikes, skateboards, inline skates on downtown sidewalks

A bicycle rider just about pulled a lady to the ground downtown when her pocket caught on the handle bar of the passing bike, said Charlevoix Police Chief, Dennis Halverson.

Bikes are only allowed to ride on the road, Halverson said.

Also, tickets are being issued to people riding on skateboards and inline skate downtown. They cannot be legally used in any downtown area, he said.

Lake association meeting Saturday

The Lake Charlevoix Association is holding its 26th Annual Meeting from 9-11 a.m. Saturday, July 27, at One Water Street in Boyne City.

The morning will begin with registration and a continental breakfast. Following a business meeting, there will be presentations on the Ironton Buoy Project and water safety.

Beaver Island sports jazz concert during Charlevoix's Venetian

A swing band concert is going to set Beaver Island to music from 7-10 p.m. Saturday, July 27, at Christian Brothers' Retreat. The 20-piece band will play rain or shine under the tent, just south of the village, on King's Highway.

Bring legless chairs, blankets and a beverage for comfortable listening.

The concert is $15 per person or $25 per couple. The money will fund the Christian Brothers' effort to provide teachers for needy schools, in the United States and abroad.

City planners meeting cancelled for today

Today's 7 p.m. city planning commission meeting has been canceled. The next scheduled meeting is 7 p.m. Monday, Aug. 12.

Grant, local business held Beaver Island health center

Kathleen Meggison recently presented a check from CB North to Philip Lange, board president of the Beaver Island Rural Health Center.

The check for $3,300 is for the enlargement and renovation of the center's waiting room.

The money represents matching funds for part of the Michigan Department of Health grant, which is also to be used for modernization.

AIDS discovery shows possible resistance

The HIV virus and AIDS is spreading in northern Michigan, the United States and the world. However recent research is showing that there is a possibility of eventually eliminating the virus from infected people.

One key research result is the effectiveness of a combination of different HIV drugs.

Northern Michigan's Region 7 HIV/AIDS Community Planning Group, a consortium of health professionals, health department personnel and concerned volunteers in lower Michigan's northern 25 counties, has expressed encouragement about the findings.

Scientists believe that treating patients early with a mixture of HIV drugs may reduce the virus to a level that the still-intact immune system can handle.

Reacting to the news, Dr. Gunner Deery, M.D., in the infectious disease department of Petoskey's Burns Clinic.

"We in the infectious disease community are finding that what was reported and what we have known for the last six months, is that combination therapy is highly effective in decreasing the amount of virus in a person's body," Deery said.

"It indeed is putting people into a remission of their illness". Dr. Deery said. "Practitioners don't know exactly how long this will last but hopefully we will be treating HIV like a chronic illness such as diabetes rather than something that kills people relatively quickly."

He pointed out that this is true in northern Michigan as well as the rest of the country.

HIV tests are now available at local clinics, hospitals and physician's offices, and free at all northern Michigan health departments.

Wilderness class on handling emergencies

Glacier Wilderness Guides is sponsoring an intensive back country medical training course in Charlevoix. The course will be held Saturday, Aug. 24, to Saturday, Aug. 31.

This 72-hour, hands-on Wilderness First Responder course will enable students to deal with medical emergencies when they are miles from help and dialing 9-1-1 is not an option. The course is recommended for all outdoor professionals and those who spend time in remote areas.

Graduates will receive certification by Wilderness Medical Associates valid for three years, as well as CPR and anaphylaxis certification.

Wilderness medicine differs from traditional first aid in three respects. First, transport times are measured in hours and days rather than minutes, so many phases of patient care that usually occur in a hospital must be carried out in the field. Second, severe environments dramatically increase the complexity of any emergency and heighten risks to patients and rescuers alike. Third, limited equipment makes improvisation and resourcefulness essential.

Skills will be developed for use in the field, whether in a national park or on the high seas.

Classes are fast-paced with an emphasis on practical skills. Mornings are devoted to lectures, while afternoons and evenings are spent outside working on everything from litter construction to full-scale rescue simulations. Realistic simulations, complete with fake wounds and stage blood, will be conducted. All simulations will be videotaped and debriefed for enhanced learning.

Call the toll free, 24-hour, message line, (888) WILD MED, or (888) 945-3633), for more information.

Acacia captain says bon voyage to Great Lakes, Charlevoix

Although Corporon and his family will leave Charlevoix, they will leave their mark behind. Since he took over the Acacia in 1993, Corporon has concentrated on making the ship more a part of the community and the community more a part of the ship.

Before he arrived, the ship had had eight commanding officers in four years. Some of them transferred out, one was relieved of duty for alcoholism. The Acacia had been assigned to Charlevoix after the Mesquite was run aground.

There had been little stability since Tom Conlan was commander. He retired in 1989.

Much of the crew was still driving home to Grand Haven on the weekends. Corporon saw that ties needed to be re-established.

"It was almost like an arranged marriage that had never been consummated," he said.

Corporon began the consummation. Most of the ship's crew now lives in Charlevoix. It sponsors a 5K foot race each year that raises money for the community pool, student and public groups tour often and officers make presentations in classrooms.

One of Corporon's highlights of commanding the Acacia has been its crew. He refers to them as "professionals."

"They make my job nonexistent," he said. "They do everything."

Corporon said being fair and consistent, and an open communicator, has helped him lead the crew through buoy maintenance, chaperoning sailboat races, island cleanups and a tour to Haiti.

Sunday, Corporon will haul his commissioning pennant down, make his final inspection of the troops and bid his official farewell to the Acacia and the community when he passes command onto Lt. Cmdr. Karl Schultz.

Any action taken under this Section shall not prevent civil proceedings for abatement or termination of the prohibited activity. Any person who is found responsible for violating this Ordinance and is not a repeat offender shall pay a minimum fine of One Hundred Fifty and 00/100 ($150.00) Dollars. Any person who is found responsible for violating this Ordinance for a second time within two (2) years of the date on which the person was found responsible for the first violation is a repeat offender and shall be subject to a fine of not less than Three Hundred and 00/100 ($300.00) Dollars. In addition, the court shall impose a lien for fines and costs which are assessed as a result of a civil infraction on land which is affected by the zoning violation as permitted by law. Civil infraction tickets may be written by the zoning administrator, city planner or by a city police officer. The term "person" as used in this section means any entity and includes, but is not limited to, an individual, partnership, corporation, association or any other form of organization.

(c) VARIANCE REQUEST. In the event that a zoning violator files a request for a variance, the zoning administrator may delay enforcement proceedings until a hearing is held on the variance request.

Written comments may be sent to the City Manager's Office, 210 State Street, Charlevoix, MI or may be presented at the City Council meeting.

Unraveling the mystery behind "Generation X" employees

Executives explain how to attract and keep these employees

Generation Xers, the latest labor force anomaly that continues to intrigue and confound much of corporate America, is also seen as a key hiring source worthy of special attention, according to executives in a recent poll.

Managers surveyed said that in order to attract this segment of the workforce, employers must recognize quality of life issues, cited by 36 percent of respondents, and encourage creativity, mentioned by 22 percent.

The survey was developed by OfficeTeam, the nation's leading staffing service specializing in highly skilled temporary office and administrative professionals. It was conducted by an independent research firm, which polled 150 human resources and other executives from the nation's 1,000 largest companies.

Managers were asked, "What , if any, is the most important change businesses will have to make in order to attract skilled professionals from Generation X?"

Their response:

Recognize quality of life needs, 36 percent.

Encourage and reward creativity, 22 percent.

Offer training and enrichment programs, 16 percent.

Reduce bureaucracy in their firms, 12 percent.

Pay greater attention to employee recognition, 10 percent.

All of the above, 1 percent.

Change nothing, 1 percent.

Not sure, 2 percent.

"Generation X has been one of the most talked about and analyzed labor segments in recent years," said Diane Domeyer, executive director of OfficeTeam. "And while it may be difficult for managers to fully understand the mindset of this 20-something group, they realize that these workers are an important part of their labor supply.

"Managers are saying that to 'change nothing' to get Generation Xers recruited is not an option today. These are tomorrow's executives, and companies need to foster their professional growth," Domeyer said.

She added that companies are attracting these workers with programs that recognize quality of life needs, promote innovative thinking and provide skills enhancement, among other progressive workplace approaches.

Oh boix

A collection of accomplishments by people from the Charlevoix area.

Beaver Island High School students Ryan Wojan and Lindsay Russell have received scholarships from the E. Darrell Dinwiddie Memorial Fund for leadership training.

The honor roll students will attend the Michigan Association of Student Councils High School Summer Leadership Workshop at Aquinas College in Grand Rapids. The week-long workshop will prepare them to assume key responsibilities within their schools, train them in effective leadership skills and emphasize the importance of democracy as a way of life.

The Dinwiddie memorial fund was established with the Charlevoix County Community Foundation to honor E. Darrell Dinwiddie, an accountant who advised many island businesses and individuals. Income from the fund is used to provide scholarships, grants, and enrichment opportunities to young islanders.

Two members of Boy Scout Troop 11 have completed projects required for the Eagle rank, which is the highest honor in Boy Scouts of America. Every Eagle candidate must complete a project that will benefit their community, church or school and demonstrate their leadership capabilities. Scouts from two troops helped with the labor.

Brian Martinus, son of Steve and Jenny Martinus, recovered and replaced poles throughout Charlevoix's downtown. Plaques reading "May Peace Prevail on Earth" were becoming unreadable. He also recovered some from the city police department that had been vandalized.

John Chase, son of Gerald and Kay Chase, spent two days digging out the washed out and overgrown steps of the wooded park on Park Avenue and refilling them with wood chips. Handrails were also repaired.

Derrick Carroll, a recent Charlevoix resident, recently became a new trooper with the Michigan State Police. He was one of 72 graduates of the 114th recruit class.

Carroll served 10 years in the U.S. Coast Guard, some of which he was stationed in Charlevoix. As a police officer, he is stationed at the Alpena Post.

Charlevoix residents, visitors come together for another celebration of summer.

Connor Klooster just got tuckered out playing in East Park during Charlevoix's biggest celebration of the year. He was, however, rejuvenated enough to later climb through the Raiders fun house at the carnival.

Many locals run for county offices, primary Tuesday

Charlevoix County Sheriff

George T. Lasater, 59, of Boyne City, is the Republican incumbent sheriff. He has lived in the area for 32 years and has three children.

George Lasater

Lasater has been sheriff for 20 years. He said he is running again to continue the programs he has helped implement. His goals are to continue aggressive law enforcement and to increase efforts on programs such as Neighborhood Watch, Crimestoppers, Triad for senior citizens and "Ride Along." Lasater also plans to expand services to sheriff's sub stations, to expand animal control officer services and to continue community policing.

Lasater sees continued professional law enforcement that is responsive to the public as an election issue.

He is a Little League coach, a member of the Boyne City Rotary, a Boy Scout committee member and an associate member of Barnard Grange.

Lasater listed some of his accomplishments as the establishment of sheriff sub stations, the 1981 county-wide drug investigation that resulted in the apprehension of 78 drug dealers, the establishment of a criminal justice program for high school seniors, setting up a daily phone contact program for senior citizens and handicapped people, and his part in the establishment of the Charlevoix County Citizen's Grand Jury to investigate drug trafficking.

Lasater's opponent is East Jordan police chief Jerry L. Alward. The 47-year-old Republican lives in East Jordan and has spent his life in the area. He is married and has two children.

Alward was a deputy sheriff and a detective before becoming police chief.

Jerry Alward

He sees a need for improved cooperation among city, county, state and federal law enforcement agencies. He said the county needs someone who will stick to his goals and accomplish them and who can lead the citizens into the future.

If elected, Alward plans to bring a high level of cooperation among law enforcement agencies, officials and citizens. He would have an open door policy to allow anyone the opportunity to speak one-on-one and to be treated with courtesy and respect. Alward plans to increase specialized training so that deputies can keep up with the changing world of criminals and to provide a safe and secure environment for all citizens.

Other goals are to meet with city, county and township officials on a regular basis to address concerns and to create a full-time animal control officer.

County Clerk

Jane E. Brannon, 44, of Charlevoix, is the county clerk and has held the position since 1980. The Republican is married and has lived in the area for 24 years.

Jane Brannon

She said she plans to continue to serve the people of Charlevoix County. Her goals include continuing computerization of as many facets of the office as is efficiently possible to give the taxpayers easier access to the clerk's records.

If re-elected Brannon said she pledges to continue providing concerned, courteous, efficient assistance to the public. She said her years of public service have provided valuable insight to the public's needs. She said she has continued to improve her academic and professional skills to provide better service.

Brannon's opponent is Dolly A. Louiselle. The 52-year-old Republican lives in Charlevoix and has been a lifelong resident of the area. She is married with three children.

Louiselle is the co-owner of a private business. She has experience in office management, computers and accounting.

Dolly Louiselle

Louiselle said she is running for county clerk to become involved and to make a difference.

"I have a strong desire to work with the local public," she stated in the Courier questionnaire. "I believe that being a public servant can be very rewarding. I want to provide friendly, efficient, and courteous public service."

Louiselle's goals if elected include getting online with the state for voter registration, holding training seminars on elections and keeping accurate and accessible circuit court records. She plans to maintain an open-door policy with the public and the departments.

County Commission

District No. 1- Hayes, Bay, Evangeline, Melrose, west of U.S. 131.

Carl Price, 59, of Charlevoix, is an unopposed three-term county commissioner. The Republican has lived in the area for 55 years. He is married and has four sons.

Price said he will continue to work for the betterment of county government. He supports the search for a county administrator who will coordinate the everyday operations of county government.

District No. 2 - Chandler, Hudson, Boyne Valley, Wilson, Melrose, east of U.S. 131.

James Behling, of Boyne City, is unopposed and has been on the commission for six years.

District No. 3 - Boyne City.

Phillip Johnson, of Boyne City, is unopposed and has been on the commission for eight years. He is currently chairman.

District No. 4 - East Jordan, South Arm Township.

County commissioner, Howard G. Hosler is retiring. Running for his seat are Victor R. Patrick and Michael Burr. Burr did not respond to our request for information.

Victor Patrick, 58, of East Jordan, is a Republican candidate. He is married with three children and has lived in the area for 19 years.

Patrick is retired from the Michigan Department of Natural Resources. His experience also includes working for the Muskegon County sheriff and dealing with the Muskegon County Board of Supervisors on budgets, expenditures and state aid programs.

Patrick wants to improve the East Jordan area and maintain the best interests of the people. If elected, he plans to work for adequate representation of his area. He said he will work with county commissioners to get a fair share of state and federal aid for the county.

Victor Patrick

He supports hiring a county administrator to assist and expedite the various issues dealing with the running of the county government. He states that he is experienced in formulating and administering state aid programs that deal with grants to counties.

District No. 5 - Charlevoix Township, Norwood, Marion, Eveline.

Donald Smith, 49, of Charlevoix, has been a county commissioner for 14 years. The Republican is a lifetime resident. He is married with two children.

Smith is a Petoskey High School teacher. His experience includes chair of the county commission for five years, and trustee of Charlevoix Township, the planning commission and a charter member of the Charlevoix Township Fire Department, two years as chairperson of the Northwest Regional Council of Governments and Northern Michigan Community Mental Health Board.

Don Smith

"I have something to contribute to my community and enjoy local government," Smith said. "I try to do what is best for Charlevoix County and take pride in what has been accomplished. ... I enjoy working with people to solve problems and to face the challenges of the future."

If re-elected, Smith said he will continue to represent his constituents by being open-minded, fair and willing to express his views.

Smith said he wants the county to hire a human resource director and board coordinator, not a full administrator. He also wants to see remote computer access implemented for land information and said the county needs to look at an equitable method to increase revenues to maintain roads.

Joan Blanchard, 63, of Charlevoix, is Smith's Republican challenger. She has lived in the area for 52 years and has three children.

Blanchard is retired as county equalization director after 27 years. Her experience includes nine years on the board of the Charlevoix Federal Credit Union, an appointment by the Governor to the State Assessor's Board and a member for eight years, and vice chair of the Charlevoix County Republican Party.

Joan Blanchard

Blanchard said that the growth in local government has created too much distance from the people. If elected, she plans to be instrumental in bringing local government back to the people.

"I want more 'openness' in county government and improved communication between the board, the departments of the county and the people of the county," Blanchard stated in our questionnaire. "There is a need for a woman on the board to bring a balanced perspective to the process."

Some of Blanchard's goals are to see the high quality of life in this area maintained for future generations, and to listen to concerns and suggestions to better serve citizens. She said she will bring professionalism to governing, along with more harmony and cooperation into the county offices.

Blanchard said that land use may be one of the county's foremost challenges.

District No. 6 - City of Charlevoix, St. James, Peaine.

Richard Gillespie, 41, of Beaver Island, has been a county commissioner for four years. The Republican has lived in the area all of his life. He is married with four children.

Richard Gillespie

Gillespie said he is running for re-election to make a difference. He said he believes government

County administrator pending

By Janenne Irene Froats
Courier editor

Charlevoix County Commissioner, Don Smith, still isn't in favor of hiring a country administrator. He's especially opposed to giving that person the power to hire and fire non-elected department heads who are employed by the county.

"This can lead to the same thing that's happening in East Jordan," Smith told commissioners at their July 24 meeting on Beaver Island. In East Jordan, the city administrator fired a long-standing employee. City council intervened and rehired city clerk, Kathy O'Rear. Discipline/dismissal of the city administrator is pending.

The board reviewed a proposed job description of the administrator's job. According to the document, which was submitted by Emmet County Administrator, Lynn Johnson, upon request of commissioners, the main task of the administrator would be to coordinate and carry through to completion the activities and policies of the county board. The person would also supervise appointed departments, assist the board in preparing and submit and review the annual budget.

Wording of the job description Smith said made him uncomfortable was "plans, organizes, directs and controls all non-elected departments of the county."

Smith said the personnel committee never came to the full board with plans to expand the tentative position from a human resources/personnel person to a full-fledge administrator who can hire and fire.

He said there was never a discussion on increasing the job responsibilities. And he first heard of a board consensus to do so in the media.

Commissioner Carl Price said the proposed job description wasn't ready for the July 10 meeting for full-board discussion.

Outgoing commissioner, Howard Hosler, said that since the board will make the policies the administrator must follow, there's no need for concern. He said the East Jordan City Council is in its current situation because it "stuck its nose into an administrators decision," according to city charter.

Commissioner Jim Behling said the personnel committee is unanimously in favor of a full administrator because it's needed. In addition to the duties outlined in the proposed job description, the board wants to add purchasing responsibilities.

Hosler said the board needed to clear that the job descriptions matches their expectations, instead of agreeing with Smith to hire for the human resources job and then let it develop.

"You want a four-cylinder person and then expand and fire them," he said.

"Yah, but when you go ahead and buy that eight-cylinder, you got six speeding tickets before you know it," Smith responded.

The board will further review the proposed job description. Smith said county department heads should be consulted before approving the role of what would become their boss.

As the process continues, Behling is confident that the tentative changes will reintroduce qualified people who for a variety of reasons didn't work out for the position before.

"We could have four or five well qualified applicants without even advertising," he said.

Charlevoix man gets sentenced to prison for cocaine delivery

By B. J. Hetler
Courier reporter

Henry "Hank" Stubbs of Charlevoix was sentenced Friday in 33rd Circuit Court to 2 1/2-20 years in state prison for delivery of cocaine under 50 grams.

His attorney said he will appeal.

Stubbs was found guilty by Judge Richard M. Pajtas at a bench trial July 2. Stubbs had sold cocaine to a confidential informant in a controlled buy arranged by detectives from Straits Area Narcotics Enforcement on December 29, 1995.

With the bailiff in tow, Stubbs sauntered into Judge Pajtas's courtroom armed with his own envelope of notes. His attorney, Mark M. Muniak, told the court that Stubbs wanted to make his own statement after the sentencing. But when Pajtas told Stubbs that anything he said after sentencing would not have any bearing on the sentence, Stubbs declined to make his statement.

Instead, Stubbs stood with his arms folded across his bright orange county jail uniform, shifting from one hip to the other and listening to the judge, Muniak, Charlevoix County Prosecutor Mary Beth Kur and special prosecutor for the drug enforcement team, Maria Barton.

Muniak stated that his client, who has high blood pressure, complained that his medical needs were not met while incarcerated in the county jail. Stubbs, through Muniak, requested that he receive proper medical care if he were "handled by the state."

Prior to sentencing, special prosecutor Barton urged the court to accept the probation department's recommended sentence of two-and-a-half to 20 years. She asked the court to take into account the long history of substance abuse by Stubbs who had admitted to using cocaine and daily use of marijuana.

Stubbs was an influence on young people in the community, Barton said, and he had sold cocaine to someone in their twenties. Stubbs is in his fifties.

Muniak said the person who bought the cocaine was an adult with a record of his own.

Before handing down the sentence, Judge Pajtas reviewed Stubbs' history noting that he was a single man who, and with the exception of a job he once held as a male stripper, had no employment record. Stubbs receives disability benefits of more than $400 a month.

Stubbs has one prior felony conviction and one misdemeanor conviction, the court also noted.

Stubbs received 114 days of credit for time served. Bond had previously been revoked.

After making brief remarks to his attorney, Stubbs was escorted from the courtroom by the bailiff.

OPINIONS

Many local seats to be decided in Aug. 6 primary

EDITORIAL

Vote.

Upon the mention of that word at the beginning of an editorial, many people will roll their eyes and prepare to turn the page.

Where has our passion gone for the right and privilege we've been given as citizens of the Land of the Free and the Brave?

We take this time, and these inches, to invoke that passion before the Tuesday, Aug. 6, primary and our coming presidential election.

One vote does make a difference. And next week's primary election in each township and city is one of the most important times to speak from the ballot box.

Many races will be decided during the primary because the candidates opposing each other are filed under the same political party. For these positions, the November election will be nothing more than a formality, since the opposition will already have been eliminated.

The sheriff, half of the board of commissioners and clerk will be determined for Charlevoix County in the primary.

Don't sit back and wait for the fallout before deciding who to vote for in November. Your candidate could already be gone. Help decide who should lead our county and many of our townships in the coming years.

Some of the township races that will be decided Aug. 6 are the supervisors for Peaine, St. James, Marion and Hayes townships. The Bay Township treasurer, and Hayes and Eveline clerks will also be determined..

The primary is more than narrowing down same-party candidates. It's the first and final say for many positions.

Some Americans say that corporate America and governmental hierarchy control the destiny of our country.

Yes, they play a power part. And we don't control who is promoted up the corporate ladder to lead the nation's most influential companies. But through the democracy of our country, we are allotted our say in who makes laws that affect our lives, and those who will walk the fields and roadways behind us.

Hopeless pessimism will never improve any situation. If we don't like the direction our country is heading, we need to speak out, campaign for change and vote. If we like the direction our country is heading, we need to speak out, campaign and vote.

People in South Africa died for the right to vote. Our forefathers fought for the right to vote. African Americans were denied the right to vote until a few decades ago.

Don't let apathy kill part of the American dream that isn't affiliated with gold medals and the Olympic games.

Unfortunately, politics has become affiliated with slanted, negative campaigning. Taking time and digging beyond the polished presentation and into what each candidate has to offer our county and country takes commitment and work. But our nation and future is worth the effort.

Vote with pride. Be an American.

Letters to the Editor

More emergency rescue workers, boats needed for Charlevoix area

Editor:

My friends and I were present shortly after the disaster that occurred on Friday, July 5, on Lake Charlevoix when one man was killed and the second badly injured. Because of circumstances we were present when assistance was required in a vain attempt to save the life of a man thrown from a boat traveling at a high speed on Lake Charlevoix. I have come to the conclusion that if you are involved in a disaster you better be prepared to help yourself. This information was gleaned during a discussion with a Coast Guard official:

1. There is no comprehensive disaster plan or program that includes the Charlevoix sheriff's office, a 9-1-1 authority, U.S. Coast Guard, state police, department of natural resources or any other police agency that assists in search and rescue on Lake Charlevoix and surrounding waters.

2. Since 9-1-1 has been implemented just recently, no chain of command exists.

3. It does appear that all the units I have mentioned above operate on their own radio frequencies, although there is some overlapping if they monitor each others' radio.

Because of minimal staffing, the Coast Guard operates two emergency vessels which cover an area from Cross Village to Beaver Island to the middle of Lake Michigan which includes the Grand Traverse Bay to Traverse City. The only boats that are immediately available are two boats operated on Charlevoix Search and Rescue which includes a hard shell inflatable, approximately 22-feet, and a 41-foot rescue boat. Due to manpower restrictions, there are only three qualified coxswains available to captain those vessels. The DNR and the sheriff maintain several boats. The DNR operates independently and maintains vessels that can be called upon to assist. The sheriff's vessels do not appear to be readily equipped for emergency services. There are three Coast Guard auxiliary in this patrol area.

Then in further discussion with the authorities I determined that comprehensive maps were not available which would allow the authorities to pinpoint lake accesses, road names, and other directional information that would assist them in making a rapid response in an emergency situation.

This accident occurred on one of the busiest weekends on Lake Charlevoix. It was only by a stroke of luck and good fate that my friends and I avoided the mishap which would have probably claimed eight more lives and that the boat involved did not cause greater damage and tragedy than what did occur. I would suggest that Sheriff Lasater, the officer in charge of the Charlevoix Coast Guard Station, 911 authorities, the DNR and the State Police immediately coordinate their efforts to come up with a plan setting forth a chain of command, areas of responsibility and a much more comprehensive communication system for supervising should an emergency occur. And of equal importance to publicize the plan so that the citizens and the boaters in this community are aware of what they can do to assist so as there will certainly be more and more emergencies in the future.

"Community led" election adds yes votes

Editor:

The operational expenses of public schools have recently been shifted from property taxes to sales taxes. Now school districts all over the state have discovered that they urgently need extensive capital expenditures for schools and equipment that will increase property taxes again.

Educational professionals insist that the initiative for a successful fund-raising campaign must be citizen led. The professionals only provide information.

According to the fund-raising strategist for the bond company, the citizen led bond campaign in Charlevoix will consist of 20 teachers from each of the three schools, who will persuade 20 parents each to support the fund-raising campaign. That makes a total of 1200 citizen supporters.

Since each student usually has two parents, that would likely result in 2,400 yes votes to start with in this citizen led fund-raising campaign.

EDITH GILBERT

Today's "Harbor Vista" restaurant is a far cry from the original "Sugar Bowl".

In 1910, George and Maude Glados opened their small ice cream parlor and candy store, which they ran successfully until the mid-forties. After that, the place was leased for some time, and finally sold to Chef Leutheuser. It was Leutheuser who opened up the former kitchen and created the dramatic view of Round Lake. Then it was sold again and renamed "218 Bridge Street".

But long before Charlevoix had sidewalks, the "Sugar Bowl" candy store facing Bridge Street was one of the busiest places in town. Not only was it the hang-out for the younger set, but parents never worried about their children because they knew George Glados would keep the kids in line.

George was born in Greece. At the age of fifteen he arrived at the Soo in Canada, where his uncle had a candy store. Here he lived in the basement and worked fourteen hours a day for $1 a week. He learned not only to speak English, but also how to make hand-dipped chocolates, taffy, peanut brittle and vanilla, chocolate and strawberry ice cream.

In 1900, he bought his first candy store in Escanaba, which he sold and subsequently moved to Charlevoix in 1908, where he met and married Maude Williams of Ironton. She was a former telephone operator, and remembers Charlevoix when it was nothing more than a lumbering town. Among other duties, she used to give loggers their wake up calls in the morning. Glados bought a former office building, remodeled it and opened the "Sugar Bowl". The couple lived their entire married life above the store in the four bedroom, 2 bath apartment, with their two daughters, Julia and Mary. Maude kept the books and both daughters learned to wait tables as teenagers.

George was an avid sports fan and always closed the store to attend basketball and football games with his whole family. Just before the games ended, they would race back and open the store to welcome the hungry after-game crowd. After the games - win or lose - the team could always count on having free sundaes at the "Sugar Bowl" At the end of the season, George always gave a dinner for the whole team. One year, the boys found out that it was George's birthday and they took up a collection. At about 8 p.m. on a Tuesday, they all gathered at the "Sugar Bowl" and George wondered why the kids were packed in his place on a school night. At a given signal they sang "Happy Birthday", and presented him with a large box. In it was a sport coat, tie and a card with 120 signatures on it.

Although George never learned to read or write English, he was a smart businessman. According to his daughter, Mary, he knew how to treat people well and what friendship meant. The kids all loved him and he was well respected in the community. He treated his help fairly by giving his waitresses incentives. He paid them a bonus of 1% each week of the amount that he took in. This system encouraged the women to suggest extra items to the customers which would increase both the guests' bill and the women's bonuses.

The original "Sugar Bowl", with its good food and low prices, occupied the area that now serves as the bar in the "Harbor Vista" restaurant. The present new dining area was once the site of the movie theater. A lot of good food has passed over these counters since the "Sugar Bowl" opened its doors in 1910 and it looks like it will continue to be a popular dining place under the ownership of Steve and Jodi Ager for many years to come.

Thanks for golf scholarships

Editor:

We all recently were awarded scholarships to attend a week of golf camp at Ferris State University as members of the Charlevoix Area Junior Golf Program. We all agree it was a terrific experience, and we have learned a lot about golf and about ourselves while away from home for nearly a week.

All of this was made possible through the generosity of the local golfers that support the "Supe" Open, the primary fund-raiser for our Junior Golf Association. We wish to thank all the many people that organize and administer the tournament and the participating golfers.

In addition to providing golf camp scholarships, the tournament funds enabled 129 junior golfers from ages 7 to 17, to enjoy a summer of instruction and play at the three local golf courses.

On behalf of all of the Junior Golfers, we want to express gratitude to those responsible for our Junior Golf Program. It's our hope that experiences like ours can continue for youngsters in Charlevoix as a result of everyone supporting the "Supe" Open August 26th.

Zoning goes beyond guiding taxpayers, it infringes on freedom

Editor:

Government should assist and protect citizens, not dictate to and enslave them. Zoning ordinances are no exception. Too many public servants seemingly have forgotten this, or never understood the word service.

For those who have followed the Wilson Township zoning fiasco, the following is in the interest of preserving the rights of property owners, community esprit de corps, and the basics of constitutional democracy which local governments are gradually stealing from us — mimicking state and federal antics.

I believe zoning is a very questionable governmental "service." One, because it is not voted on by those subjected to its dictates, and two, because its rules and regulations are too often arbitrary, unreasonable, and also, as in our case, unconstitutional.

Not to mention the many other home owners who have been subjected to the blatant indignities such as being forced to sign a statement — unseen — saying they will abide by the township's zoning ordinance, and then further, demands for a fee; as if they hadn't already paid, via their property taxes, for the privilege of being humiliated by these hard-eyed, indifferent public servants.

The Township Rural Zoning Act, the state's initiatory legislation has as its prime purpose "to promote the public health, safety, and general welfare." It also states that zoning ordinances shall follow its guidelines as to limiting the improper use of land and buildings and that there should be reasonable variations therefrom.

If zoning has any real validity it should be the prevention of unfairness in land and building relationships and the ability to settle any differences without the need to go to court; where final solutions are always available.

Because I choose to practice a smidgen of civil disobedience and defy a constitution violating Wilson Township's zoning ordinance does not give Charlevoix County Circuit Court Judge, Richard Pajtas, any extraordinary judicial, nor police powers.

Aping a lord of the manor manner in this matter, Pajtas' crowning act was to threaten (via court order) to tear down and remove a legally, according to some of Wilson Township's zoning ordinances more reasonable language, allowable restored barn/garage/storage building. All the victims had to do was knuckle under to signing the usurping zoning statement and pay a $15 fee, plus a $15 fine.

It is unbelievably medieval.

Or are we back in the 1770s, under that old tyrant King George III.

Judge Pajtas has no right whatsoever, in collusion with Wilson Township's lawyer, to practice this kind of uncivilized overkill. Also called fraud.

I challenge him to rethink the entire matter on his own volition.

Otherwise, I will try in my humhle, non lawyer, way to assist him toward that end ...

Meanwhile, nursing amusing Machiavellian solutions, I am,

Karl Waldner

Local girls in East Jordan musical

Two Charlevoix eighth-graders are among the cast of 14 who will present "The Tale of the Barber of Seville," an adaptation of Gioacchino Rossini's 1775 comic opera. The new musical play is the second production of Jordan River Arts Council's fifth annual children's theatre festival.

Charlevoix eighth-grader, Laura Borths, reacts with a smile as her character, Berta the maid, eavesdrops on Count Almaviva and Rosina during a rehearsal of the musical.

Laura Borths plays and sings the part of Berta, the sneezing, snooping maid who spies on events taking place in her master's home. She was the Princess Pocotelo in "The Princess and the Pea" and Milady DeWinter in "The Three Musketeers,"both productions by Jordan River Players, the arts council's theatrical arm.

Jenny Dean, making her stage debut, plays dual roles as a violinist and a police officer.

The plot revolves around the count's attempts to pursue Rosina, while her guardian Bartolo schemes to keep the lovers apart.

The play, written by East Jordan playwright Lenore Bechtel, is directed by James Taylor McKinney, with musical director Fran Tollas and stage manager Renee Stevens. Performance music was recorded by pianist Elizabeth Humphrey, and musical assistance provided by Margaret Thomson.

Lauri Petrie designed and sewed the eighteenth century Seville costumes, with assistance from Judith Mabec.

Performances will be 7 p.m. Thursday and Saturday, August 8 and 10, and 2 p.m. Sunday, August 11. Tickets, available at the door 30 minutes prior to curtain, are $4 for adults and $2 for children.

Jean Dean plays violin as Count Almaviva serenades Rosina during a rehearsal of "The Tale of the Barber of Seville." Jean is also a Charlevoix eighth-grader.

Sealed bids accepted for auction

For the convenience of those unable to attend the Charlevoix Friends' of the Pool auction Sunday, Aug. 4, sealed bids will be accepted until 3 p.m. Saturday at the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce. Bids should state the item, dollar amount and bidder's telephone number.

A brochure listing vacation and golf packages and other auction items is available at the chamber. New items listed since publication include a cruise on the Medusa Challenger, and a week at a home in the Bahamas.

Keep Charlevoix Beautiful will sponsor its petunia dinner at the Charlevoix Country Club prior to the pool auction.

"It looks like another sell-out so call 547-0572 for ticket availability," said Keep Charlevoix Beautiful President, Bruce Mac Arthur.

Proceeds from the auction will be used toward construction of the Charlevoix Community pool. Dinner proceeds are for next year's petunia project.

BEACONS

OF BLESSINGS

By Rev. Bruce Hamilton
Community Church of God

Way back in 1965 I was in my first year of high school. What I thought was an over zealous gym teacher called on all his first-time students to attempt to do a walk across an elevated cable. That was something I had never even remotely contemplated in my life. But, since everybody else was doing it, I got in line with the rest of the guys and waited my turn.

One, two, three steps...oh no! I'm falling. My first day of high school and I'm carried off the field with a broken arm. (Yes, the same left arm that is just about healed from an April adventure with the snow.)

Now move the clock ahead 31 years. I'm a part of a class that has been studying leadership development and team building all week long. We're at a ropes course in Petoskey. Although the instructor tells us that it is a "challenge by choice," before me lies a smaller version of my high school nightmare from years ago. This time though things are different. We're not tackling it as individuals. We're looking at it as a team, helping each other get across.

I hang back watching everybody else and fingering the brace on my wrist. I don't really want to do this, and yet I must do it. Everyone had pretty well assumed I wouldn't do it. Then suddenly when they start thinking someone else should come, I realized I needed to conquer this "fear" once and for all. With their help and their encouragement, I made my way along the wire. I did it! After 31 years, that cotton picking high school disaster has been atoned for.

There's not one of us who hasn't had some moment, some episode in our lives that marked us, discouraged us, even frightened us. How you handle those moments really can make a difference in how you handle your life. I learned a lot about trusting others on that ropes course. These were people I hardly knew and they rooted for me, supported me, and worked with me to get me through some things they hardly realized were happening in my heart.

God's family works much the same way. What's even neater is realizing that a lot of folks have experienced the same fears, doubts and struggles that you have. They understand what it means to face them and attempt to overcome them. On our own, we have been known to walk away from such challenges. With the help of good people, we need not fear confronting them.

You see one of my favorite sayings of Jesus is that "you shall know the truth and the truth shall set you free." God has never said that He would help us make the most of them.

With brothers and sisters in Christ surrounding you and the love of God's Spirit within you, you'd be amazed at how much of your past you can really put behind you and how much brighter the future can really be.

Big Rock Point opens for guided plant tours

People can satisfy their curiosity of what the inside of a nuclear power plant is like by attending Big Rock Point nuclear power plant's open house 10 a.m., noon and 2 p.m. Monday-Friday, Aug. 12-16.

During the week-long program, visitors will be guided by plant employees as they tour the plant site, including the turbine deck and control room.

Because of the popularity of the tour, tickets are required. Free tickets are available at the Charlevoix and Petoskey chamber of commerce offices. Participants must be at least 10-years-old and have photo identification.

Tours will begin in the plant auditorium with a briefing and video presentation. Visitors are then provided with hard hats and safety glasses. After passing through the security building, visitors will tour the plant grounds and visit the control room area and turbine deck. Each tour will take about one-and-a-half to two hours to complete. Visitors should wear comfortable walking shoes. Sandals or open-toe shoes are not allowed. Photographs of the plant are permitted from the parking lot. Cameras are not allowed inside the plant.

Big Rock Point was the world's first high power-density boiling water reactor and an important research site for the nuclear power industry. The plant has generated electricity since 1962 and was named a Nuclear Historic landmark by the American Nuclear Society.

Three of six county commissioners challenged Tuesday should be responsive and responsible. He plans to follow through on projects he helped start, such as the county building renovation, the computer system, the Grandvue addition, a renewed road commission and better cooperation between Beaver Island and Charlevoix.

Gillespie said there's a need for improved communication and cooperation among all county departments and more road funding, possibly through a gas tax.

"I am no proponent of raising people's taxes," he stated on our questionnaire, "but we cannot stand by and watch our road network fall apart."

Gillespie said he has made strong political in-roads in state government. He said he offers strong leadership.

His opponent, Shirley Roloff, of Charlevoix, has lived in the area for 23 years and is married. She has had three children.

Roloff is co-owner and business manager of Charlevoix Canvas. Her experience includes 12 years on city council, six years as mayor pro tem. She has been active in business community projects, such as hiring a city manager, the budget and the building of the water treatment and sewer plants. She helped obtain Pine River Place for senior housing, and has been involved in Charlevoix airport and Beaver Island Boat Co. changes.

Shirley Roloff

One county issue Roloff said she's upset about is the amount of benefits commissioners receive for just a few meetings a month. She sees serious problems with the county board and said it's always in a political storm. She sees a lack of communication between commissioners and the department heads.

"I feel the department heads are the backbone of the whole system and should be able to view their ideas with the commissioners and know what's happening before they read it in the paper," Roloff said.

If elected, Roloff said she wants to reinstate the committee of the whole meetings and will work for more citizen involvement.

Roloff supports hiring a county administrator and the completion of Kings Highway on Beaver Island.

Prosecutor

Mary Beth Kur, 33, of Charlevoix, was appointed prosecutor in 1995. The Republican is unopposed. She is married with two children and has lived in the area for three years.

Prior to becoming prosecutor, Kur served as chief assistant prosecutor for the county and as an assistant prosecutor in Genesee County.

Mary Beth Kur

Kur said she enjoys trial work and will continue to be an aggressive advocate for crime victims and county citizens. Her goals are to continue to work with schools to promote drug and alcohol awareness programs, and to continue a tough stand against adult drunk drivers, violent criminals, drug dealers and those who commit crimes against children.

County Treasurer

Joan L. Balch, 49, of Charlevoix, has been the treasurer for nine years. She is unopposed. The Republican is a native of the area and is married with two children.

Joan Balch

"I enjoy working with the public and being a dedicated public servant," Balch said in the Courier questionnaire. She plans to continue to upgrade the county's computer system and open communication between departments and officials.

Register of Deeds

Charlene M. Gaskin, 54, of Charlevoix, is the Register of Deeds and has been in the office for 18 years. She is unopposed. The Republican has lived in the area for 41 years and is married with one child.

"I would like to continue maintaining the records of Charlevoix County in the most efficient and courteous manner possible," she said. One of her goals is to improve services with remote access phone modems and imaging.

C. Gaskin

Surveyor

Mary C. Feindt, 80, of Charlevoix, is the county surveyor and has been since 1944. She is unopposed. The Republican has been in this area for 58 years. Her husband is deceased and she has one child.

Mary Feindt

Feindt said she will continue to promote the profession and to support re-establishing and preserving original government survey corners.

Events in brief

Smooth Venetian weekend

Police spent more than two hours directing traffic to clear the city following Saturday's fireworks display, said Charlevoix Police Chief, Dennis Halverson.

He said there was a larger-than-average crowd in town for the highlight of this year's Venetian Festival. And it was 1 a.m. before police were able to let traffic flow naturally.

The extra numbers drew additional support from state and county law enforcement officers. Halverson said the crowd was "extremely well-behaved" and only predictable alcohol-related complaints occurred over the weekend.

Charlevoix in line for harbor grant

Charlevoix could be granted $80,000 to maintain its harbor through the U.S. Energy and Water Development Appropriations Bill, which was approved by the House July 24.

The bill for 1997 funding awaits Senate approval, according to Rep. Bart Stupak, D-Menominee.

Included in the bill are funds for 15 rivers and harbors. Other area harbors up for funding are Petoskey, Cheboygan and Mackinaw City.

Charlevoix fast pitch team state champs

Pat McKeown Ford's championship in the Class C Women's State Championship in Petoskey July 28 came down to a nail-biting finish, according to team manager, Leroy Buchanan.

Winner pitcher, Stacy Barber-Walker, speared two line drives in the bottom of the ninth inning, the last one making the final out and a tying run.

The dramatic ending at Ed White Field has McKeown Ford, champions of the Petoskey Women's League A, a 4-3 victory over Metal Works, of Ludington, and a 4-0 tournament record. McKeown now qualifies for the National Class C Championship at Gadsden, Ala., Thursday-Sunday, Aug. 15-18.

In he title game, McKeown Ford was within one of winning in the seventh inning. But a bloop single brought home the tying run, 3-3. Both teams threatened in the eighth inning, but in the top of the ninth, Meg Fowler singled for McKeown, was sacrificed to second and scored on a two-out single by Christin Grunch.

Rhonda Buchanan started pitching for the winners, giving up 11 hits in six-and-one-third innings. Barber-Walker worked two-and-two-third innings, giving up five hits.

McKeown totaled 16 hits in the contest as Barber-Walker, Meg Fowler, Pam Friske and Liz Grunch all had two hits. Metal Works, which came to the tournament with nine players and played four times on Sunday, also had 16 hits with Christy Chrismas getting four hits.

McKeown opened tournament play Saturday with a 3-1 victory over the Port Huron Travelers, scoring three times in the fourth inning. Winning pitcher was Barber-Walker on a three-hitter. Pam Friske led the hitting attack with two hits, one a double, while Barber-Walker tripled. Barber-Walker struck out 11 batters and walked one.

Saturday night, McKeown beat the Michigan Mazers from Midland, 6-5. McKeown scored three times in the top of the fifth inning to take a 5-3 lead and added a run in the seventh inning. The Mazers scored two runs in the bottom of the seventh inning and had the tying run on third when the game ended. Barber-Walker was again the winning pitcher, giving up eight hits and striking out eight. McKeown had 10 hits, two by Barber-Walker and two by Friske. Christin Grunch doubled.

The Charlevoix team reached the finals Sunday morning with a 9-2 victory over Grays Jewelers, of Escanaba. The team jumped to a 4-0 lead in the second inning. Rhonda Buchanan was the winning pitcher, allowing seven hits. McKeown picked up 15 hits as Barber-Walker had three hits; Christin Grunch, two hits, one a home run; and Friske, Fowler and Melissa Cox each had two hits.

Four individual awards were handed out with two going to McKeown Ford players. Friske was named the top outfielder and Barber-Walker the top infielder. For the tournament, Barber-Walker batted 533 and Friske 500.

Team members are Dennis Winter, Randy Bearss, Tink Armstrong, Tracy Terrian, Sheryl Lavictor and Joanna Tshudy.

Norwood air filled with local music

Oomp-pa-pa, oomp-pa-pa.

The band concert was underway.

Saturday evenings were open band night at the town hall in Norwood a century or more ago. Townspeople were all invited to turn out and hear good music.

Bert Blakely of Eastport took a job at Coulter's seed warehouse on the flatland near Norwood's big sawmill in 1891. Every Saturday evening he made the snaredrum hustle at the band meetings. When he left Norwood, young Will Richardson took over the drum sticks. Fred Gillette played the big bass drum. Henry Kanagy from Atwood played solo alto and Will Hopkins played a mean B flat cornet.

Norwood's windmill-bandstand was built by Charles Ferguson in the late 1800s. The band performed from the landing near the top of the structure in good weather.

That same year of 1891 the "Band Boys" got new band suits. They cut handsome figures in their navy blue wool suits with red trim and shiny rows of brass buttons. Gold fringed epaulets on each shoulder set off the blue suits. Stylish red plumes stuck in each band hat swayed with the music.

In the warm summer months the band moved out of the town hall to Ferguson's windmill-bandstand for their concerts.

All of the larger homes before the turn of the century had their own windmills for pumping well water near the house and barns. But only the Fergusons enlarged their windmill with a porch for Norwood band concerts and fancy wood trim for ornamentation.

The Ferguson place, or Viewland Farm, as it was named by Mrs. Ferguson in 1878, was across the street and to the south of the Methodist Church in Norwood. Mr. C.H. Ferguson, a successful insurance agent from Chicago, summered in Norwood with his family and spent thousands of dollars improving his grounds and summer home.

A wide veranda wrapped around the 12-room house which boasted a billiard room inside and a 20-by-60-foot shallow cement pool outside. The pool was intended for the Ferguson boys and their friends to build rafts and to play Robinson Caruso. It was an impressive residence with its stables, grand house with a fountain in front, pool and private tennis court.

The windmill-bandstand east of the main house was the Ferguson's gift to the community. Townsfolk spread blankets and carried chairs to listen to open air summer band concerts on the lawn surrounding the structure.

When the Norwood sawmill burned in 1901 the town's economy began to fail. The state highway was rerouted three miles east of Norwood a few years later. Norwood's population rapidly dwindled.

Proudly worn band suits were packed away in family trunks. The Ferguson bandstand fell into disrepair and was eventually torn down in 1941.

One of the old Norwood band suits, worn by Will Richardson in 1893, survived the years. It now hangs in Norwood's town hall and museum. If you pause in front of the suit today and listen carefully, you may hear a piccolo trill, or the faint oomp-pa-pa from Norwood's band concerts long past.

Education put to the test

Students hired to build log cabin

By B. J. Hetler
Courier reporter

Students from Brian Certa's high school construction technology courses are earning cash instead of credit.

Building a three-bedroom, two-bath log home for a Charlevoix couple are Zac Bakker, Josh Skeel, Nate Martin, Scott Smith and Justin Coen. The students have completed two levels of Certa's courses which covered electrical, drywall, cabinet making and other techniques of building a house.

The students earn about $8 an hour and gain more experience. Certa works alongside them and supervises their work.

"It's an opportunity for my construction technology students to continue to learn during the summer," said Certa, who is a licensed builder, as well as a teacher.

The students have an advantage with a teacher instructing them, rather than having a contractor show them the ropes, Certa said.

Student, Zac Bakker, doesn't want a career as a builder, but will pursue it as a hobby. He said the experience will be useful in the future if he decides to build his own home.

Fellow student Josh Skeel agrees and sees another advantage.

"I can use this to earn money while I'm going to college," he said.

Last year students built a house on the school property as a class project. The house was moved to a new owner's property when it was finished. Certa said another house will be built this school year and sold in the spring.

Certa said he has no problem finding students for his classes and that the enrollment increases every year.

"It's developed into a very good program," he said. "Students see the value in it."

The construction technology courses started four years ago with six students. Certa expects 60 students this fall.

High school senior Zac Bakker and construction technology teacher Brian Certa work on roofing a log cabin they are building. Bakker and other students apply the knowledge learned in Certa's classes to construct the house and earn summer money as well.

High school student Zac Bakker waits for roofing material for a log cabin. Bakker is one of five students in Brian Certa's construction technology class helping to build the house this summer. Bakker said that while he doesn't plan to build as a career, he may use the experience to build his own home someday.

Area man killed in tractor rollover

A Charlevoix man was fatally injured in a tractor rollover accident Monday, in Norwood Township.

The Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department reported Lynn Long, 68, may have been trapped for as long as 10 hours before a friend, Richard Bartosik, Norwood, found him at 8 p.m. Long died Tuesday morning at Northern Michigan Hospital, according to a hospital spokesman.

Charlevoix City Ambulance and Charlevoix City Fire and Rescue units responded to the accident. EMS officers stabilized Long while rescue personnel used rescue bags and the Jaws-of-Life to lift the tractor off him, according to deputies. Charlevoix Towing Service assisted emergency crews.

Coach won't resign

School officials can not agree if soccer coach Mike Dennis has been fired or not. Dennis is just as unsure.

Dennis, was asked to resign last February, but he hasn't done so because he said he doesn't know why he was asked.

"I'm not trying to hold onto a situation," Dennis said Monday after the board discussed his situation in a public comment session of the regular school board meeting. "I won't resign because it was not done properly by the board. I want things cleared up for the program and for my integrity."

Dennis said athletic director Barry Anderson asked him to resign during a February performance review meeting.

"I was shocked," Dennis said. "I didn't know there were problems." Dennis is still not sure what the problems are, but he said they are not moral problems or problems with his superiors. He believes the action is politically motivated, but did not say by whom. Dennis, the pastor of First Baptist Church, is in his third year as soccer coach.

Some board of education members are not sure that he has been fired.

Board member Jerry Owens said there have been allegations that Dennis used bad language with the kids, had no control over the kids and did not get along with some of the parents. Dennis denies the allegations.

Owens said the whole situation was handled badly by the administration and that it didn't do things judiciously and in a timely manner.

"I really respect Mr. Dennis," Owens said. "He is one of the most outstanding citizens of Charlevoix that I've known. He's not only a neighbor, but a friend."

Owens also said it's not clear whether or not Dennis is fired. However, Superintendent Roberta Jackson said a letter was sent to Dennis in May that indicated there would be a change in the leadership of the soccer program. Jackson declined to comment on the reasons for a change, stating that it was Anderson who should comment. Anderson is out of town on jury duty and could not be reached.

The matter was set aside for a

Building a three-bedroom, two-bath log home for a Charlevoix couple are Zac Bakker, Josh Skeel, Nate Martin, Scott Smith and Justin Coen. The students have completed two levels of Certa's courses which covered electrical, drywall, cabinet making and other techniques of building a house.

The students earn about $8 an hour and gain more experience. Certa works alongside them and supervises their work.

"It's an opportunity for my construction technology students to continue to learn during the summer," said Certa, who is a licensed builder, as well as a teacher.

The students have an advantage with a teacher instructing them, rather than having a contractor show them the ropes, Certa said.

Student, Zac Bakker, doesn't want a career as a builder, but will pursue it as a hobby. He said the experience will be useful in the future if he decides to build his own home.

Fellow student Josh Skeel agrees and sees another advantage.

"I can use this to earn money while I'm going to college," he said.

Last year students built a house on the school property as a class project. The house was moved to a new owner's property when it was finished. Certa said another house will be built this school year and sold in the spring.

Certa said he has no problem finding students for his classes and that the enrollment increases every year.

"It's developed into a very good program," he said. "Students see the value in it."

The construction technology courses started four years ago with six students. Certa expects 60 students this fall.

High school senior Zac Bakker and construction technology teacher Brian Certa work on roofing a log cabin they are building. Bakker and other students apply the knowledge learned in Certa's classes to construct the house and earn summer money as well.

High school student Zac Bakker waits for roofing material for a log cabin. Bakker is one of five students in Brian Certa's construction technology class helping to build the house this summer. Bakker said that while he doesn't plan to build as a career, he may use the experience to build his own home someday.

Coach won't resign

School officials can not agree if soccer coach Mike Dennis has been fired or not. Dennis is just as unsure.

Dennis, was asked to resign last February, but he hasn't done so because he said he doesn't know why he was asked.

"I'm not trying to hold onto a situation," Dennis said Monday after the board discussed his situation in a public comment session of the regular school board meeting. "I won't resign because it was not done properly by the board. I want things cleared up for the program and for my integrity."

Dennis said athletic director Barry Anderson asked him to resign during a February performance review meeting.

"I was shocked," Dennis said. "I didn't know there were problems." Dennis is still not sure what the problems are, but he said they are not moral problems or problems with his superiors. He believes the action is politically motivated, but did not say by whom. Dennis, the pastor of First Baptist Church, is in his third year as soccer coach.

Some board of education members are not sure that he has been fired.

Board member Jerry Owens said there have been allegations that Dennis used bad language with the kids, had no control over the kids and did not get along with some of the parents. Dennis denies the allegations.

Owens said the whole situation was handled badly by the administration and that it didn't do things judiciously and in a timely manner.

"I really respect Mr. Dennis," Owens said. "He is one of the most outstanding citizens of Charlevoix that I've known. He's not only a neighbor, but a friend."

Owens also said it's not clear whether or not Dennis is fired. However, Superintendent Roberta Jackson said a letter was sent to Dennis in May that indicated there would be a change in the leadership of the soccer program. Jackson declined to comment on the reasons for a change, stating that it was Anderson who should comment. Anderson is out of town on jury duty and could not be reached.

The matter was set aside for a

Area man killed in tractor rollover

A Charlevoix man was fatally injured in a tractor rollover accident Monday, in Norwood Township.

The Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department reported Lynn Long, 68, may have been trapped for as long as 10 hours before a friend, Richard Bartosik, Norwood, found him at 8 p.m. Long died Tuesday morning at Northern Michigan Hospital, according to a hospital spokesman.

Charlevoix City Ambulance and Charlevoix City Fire and Rescue units responded to the accident. EMS officers stabilized Long while rescue personnel used rescue bags and the Jaws-of-Life to lift the tractor off him, according to deputies. Charlevoix Towing Service assisted emergency crews.

Police probe attempted assault, robbery

No witnesses have surfaced in an alleged attack on a 23-year-old Charlevoix woman who said she was assaulted and robbed in her car on July 27 on Burgess Road.

The victim said she does not know the attacker who hid in the back of her white, 1994 Ford Station wagon. She had run out of gas on U.S. 31 near Nine Mile Point and a woman stopped and took her to get gas and returned her to her car. After the victim proceeded on U.S. 31 the attack began. A forensic examination of the victim's clothing is pending.

According to police reports, when the victim reached the U.S. 31 and Camp Daggett Road area, she said a white male grabbed her from behind and told her to keep driving. As the victim became nearer Petoskey, the suspect then told her to turn around. After driving back into Charlevoix County the suspect took the victim's money and attempted to rape her. The assault ended when a small black car came into sight and the suspect fled. He was last seen running into the woods.

The woman sustained injuries and was treated and released from Charlevoix Area Hospital. Her name is not being released at this time.

The suspect is described as. wearing a black ski mask, 175 pounds with a heavy build. He is reported to have brown eyes. The victim could not tell how tall the suspect was due to his sitting in the car. The suspect was wearing a dark, short sleeve T-shirt and blue jeans. Police believe he is familiar with the area.

The sheriff requests that the people who helped the victim contact Sheriff George T. Lasater or Sgt. Don Schneider at 616-547-4461. If anyone may have seen any suspicious activity on U.S. 31 in the Nine Mile Point area or the Burgess road is encouraged to call.

The Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department is investigating a strong armed robbery which occurred in Wilson Township, Charlevoix County about 1:30 a.m. July 28.

An 18-year-old male and Charlevoix County resident was assaulted and robbed of his wallet and money by another male subject who left the victim on a rural road of Wilson Township.

The victim was able to walk out to a residence on the road and contacted the sheriff's department.

The subject has been identified and warrants are being sought from the prosecutor's office.

A 37-year-old Charlevoix man sustained a broken shoulder Monday when his motorcycle was struck by another motorist at the Bridge and Carpenter street intersection, according to Charlevoix City Police.

Randall Wells was treated and released at Charlevoix Area Hospital. He was injured when a Chevrolet passenger car driven by Melvin Reno, 75, Charlevoix, turned in front of the motorcycle. Reno was cited for failure to yield.

The accident occurred at 10:22 a.m.

Two Livonia men received minor cuts and bruises in a personal watercraft accident in Boyne City July 31, according to the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department.

Officer Ron Buckner reported the accident occured at 4 p.m. on Lake Charlevoix, west of the city landing.

Shawn R. Carldron, 19, and David Stevanovic, 19, took off at the same time from an idle position. Stevanovic turned and collided with Caldron. Caldron's watercraft was totaled.

Rescue training completed

Charlevoix Firefighters recently completed a "High Angle Rope Rescue Class," courtesy of Consumers Power Company, who provided the equipment and the instructor.

This training will allow the Fire Department and EMS to provide rescue services up to 300 feet high, when victims are out of reach of conventional ladders or ladder trucks. Coupled with our ambulance services; extrication rescue; confined space rescue; ice rescue; and dive rescue capabilities, this allows the Department to provide a full spectrum of rescue capabilities for our citizens.

We hope we are not needed, but the Department members have spent hundreds of hours training for any eventuality, in addition to regular Fire and Emergency Medical Technician required training.

Permits delayed

Changes to new computer software have delayed permits for antlerless deer until August 10. These changes will simplify the application process for some applicants and will provide more information for the customer on the receipt.

The computerized licensing system has been very successful in its first year of operation. These changes are part of an ongoing effort to make improvements to the system that will benefit the hunters and anglers, the license agents, and the DNR.

Tight rope training

Firefighter Jeff Riley gets instruction during a high angle ropes rescue class. Consumers Power Company provided the training for area firefighters. The training helps bring a full spectrum of rescue services to area residents.

New name for BI phone company

The Beaver Island telephone company has recently begun using the name of its corporate parent, TDS TELECOM, when answering calls and in advertisements. This has caused some confusion for callers and customers, who wonder, "Why the change?"

"TDS TELECOM has owned and operated the telephone service on Beaver Island and Bois Blanc Island since 1989," said Michigan Area Manager Eugene Newell. "This means Island Telephone Company is part of a strong, national corporation with the resources to provide a complete line of quality services. We're still the same local company, but we're updating our name to reflect our larger capabilities as TDS TELECOM."

The changing competitive environment in telecommunications is part of the reason for the company's move to a "brand" name.

"We want our customers to recognize TDS TELECOM as a national leader, one that is committed to bringing tomorrow's technology to the communities we serve," Newell said.

The local telephone company will make no changes in personnel, services or rates in connection with the name transition.

"We'll be the same phone company in every way - except we expect to grow even better at serving our customers' needs," Newell said.

Annual boat race slated

Amateur engineers and boaters alike can participate in Raven Hill Discovery Center's Fourth Annual Cardboard Boat Race. Kids design, build and race a cardboard boat from 2-4 p.m. Sunday, Aug. 18, at the center's pond.

Large waxed cardboard sheets for boat construction are available at Raven Hill for $5. Cardboard can be picked up during regular discovery center hours, 10 a.m.-4 p.m. on weekdays, noon-4 p.m. on Saturdays, and 2-4 p.m. on Sundays. Boats can be built from cardboard not obtained from the center. There are no restrictions on the boats except that they must be built mostly of cardboard and a person must be able to ride in them to race. Boats compete for speed in heats of two and endurance in the demolition derby.

Call Raven Hill at 536-3369 to register. Prizes will be awarded for creativity, participation, speed and overall endurance.

Carnival location caused few problems

EDITORIAL

Before the carnival came to town, there was much debate over whether it should be kept out of downtown or allowed to set up shop behind Bridge Street in two public parking lots.

City council was presented with 62 signatures on a petition opposing placement of the carnival downtown.

Concerns included loss of business, inability to get deliveries and trouble with young people either working at or attending the carnival.

In the end, many of the business people bordering the carnival experienced good business and few problems with their temporary neighbor.

"I definitely think it increased our business," said Jacqueline Mabee, owner of The Clothing Co. "We were busier than we have been for Venetian. And we've been here 21 years."

Not everyone experienced record breaking sales, but business was booming in Charlevoix Venetian weekend — carnival and all.

Gina Whitney, owner of Whitney's Oyster Bar of Charlevoix, has changed her opinion from opposing the carnival's downtown placement to welcoming it back next year. The only problem she had was people using her restrooms. A sign on the back door "employees only" took care of the problem.

The chamber of commerce and city worked with Birdie Whitney to help her customers get to her beauty salon, which was boxed in by the carnival.

Lani Ochs, pharmacist at Central Drugs, said she doesn't think the carnival effected their business one way or the other. However, she does feel bad for the local people who are inconvenienced by not having a parking place and those who live in the apartments above the Bridge-Street stores.

Keith Carey, who works at Carey's Shoes, said that a nice variety of people were in the store shopping and browsing. But although business went well, he prefers the carnival leave the central business district.

Yes, the downtown was crowded. Yes, there were some parking complaints. And yes, locals were inconvenienced at times.

But positive outcome of having the carnival downtown — with no major adverse effects — we don't see reason enough to boot the carnival out of town.

When you've got an event as popular as Venetian, most people come to town ready to walk. Once the car is tucked away on a streets a couple of blocks away, people can enjoy Venetian almost in its entirety without having to drive to another location.

Maybe in years to come, downtown business owners will be slower to attack and Venetian organizers will take the time to consult with businesses directly affected before making decisions.

The community needs to unite its purpose and accept the fact that Venetian will bring some inconveniences. Crowds always do.

The festival is about more than local homecomings. It's about sharing Charlevoix with thousands of people who want to get away from their downstate, out-of-state rut. And, recently the people of Charlevoix shared the town they call beautiful in an event-filled, friendly way.

Letters to the editor

Thanks to local good samaritans

Editor:

I thought you might be interested in learning of the phenomenal kindness and thoughtfulness shown us by some residents of the Charlevoix community on Tuesday, July 16, after we had been driving on the road along the north shore of Lake Charlevoix.

My wife Celia and I were spending a week at an Elderhostel program at North Central Michigan College in Petoskey. We were taking advantage of "free time" that afternoon to see if any vestige remained, along that shoreline, of a camp for girls called "Kamp Karephree," which Celia had attended 59 years ago. Traveling along that road from Charlevoix to Boyne City, we had just passed the area where she was convinced the camp would have had to have been. We had been hearing an increasingly significant noise in the engine compartment of our car and decided to turn around and return to Petoskey. As we turned off the road into a private driveway entrance, the motor died. Checking under the hood I realized we needed a tow truck. As I came out from under the hood to see what direction to walk to a pay phone, a young man drove up and asked if he could be of help. I indicated he certainly could, if he could tell me the direction and distance to go to a pay phone to call for help. He handed me his car phone to use to call AAA. While I was sitting in his car making the call (he told the AAA representative precisely where we were located) a young lady stopped her car and asked my wife if we needed any help, indicating her dad was a mechanic, living a short distance away, and who would be glad to help us. After the young man drove away, another young lady with evident expertise in car repair stopped to ask if she could help.

Within less than 15 minutes after these folks had left, the truck came and towed us to Petoskey.

We left the Charlevoix area feeling overwhelmed by the genuine and immense hospitality shown us by the people we met there.

Fire department appreciates help during festival

Editor:

Charlevoix Fire Department personnel would like to thank Butch Russell and Rick Wells, of Charlevoix Towing, for their time and effort in delivering and then removing the automobile used in the demonstration of the Fire Department's "Jaws of Life" and other extrication tools, at the Venetian Festival.

Their support, both in this instance and in the past, has materially assisted the improving of the firefighters and EMT's skill level, in regards to extricating victims from vehicles, and is appreciated.

Pennies bring pool group closer to goal

Editor:

The energy and enthusiasm invested by sixth graders in their Pennies for the Pool campaign is especially appreciated by Charlevoix Friends of the Pool.

In just a couple of months they collected over 11,000 pennies plus approximately $400 in bills and they're not finished yet.

They did it in a variety of ways - by giving up their allowances, baking cookies to sell, and turning in discarded pop cans for deposit money, for example.

The children are not only doing something to provide a much needed recreational facility for themselves to enjoy but also making it possible for the older generation to relieve aches and pains in soothing warm pool water.

Their effort is heartwarming and inspiring to our organization. On our part, we're not going to let these great kids down. We're continuing to work hard to make the Charlevoix Community Pool a reality for them and many others.

Petunias, committee complimented

Dear Editor:

I think it is appropriate to compliment Greenleaf Gardens, who supplied the petunias this year for the first time, on the beautiful plants that are flourishing in town. Of course, much credit is due also to the committee and the Bosses, who do the watering faithfully. We appreciate you.

Sincerely,
Herman and Marilyn Izor

Expanded enrollment authorized for Academy

Open enrollment complete

Due to a higher than expected response from prospective students wishing to enroll at Northwest Academy, the Academy's Board of Directors requested and received authorization from its chartering institution, Saginaw Valley State University, to expand its initial enrollment to 85 students.

The Academy had received over 65 student applications within its designated open enrollment period. That number exceeded the school's original planned minimal enrollment number. With the higher enrollment number, the Academy will still be able to provide classes at student/teacher ratio of less than 15 students per each teacher. The highly individualized approach to learning offered by the Academy is dependent upon that low ratio.

The applications received during the open enrollment period were from students residing in seven different public school districts, including Charlevoix, Boyne City, Boyne Falls, Harbor Springs, East Jordan, Ellsworth and Central Lake.

The academy will continue to receive applications until its expanded authorized enrollment is reached. An enrollment form may be obtained by contacting Sandy Maletwitz, the school's administrative assistant at 547-9175. As a public school the academy does not charge tuition and will accept any student who has completed the 5th grade and has not yet graduated from high school.

The Academy is finalizing its plans for the remodeling of its facility located at 105 West Hurlbut in Charlevoix into a school capable of providing a high tech education. The Academy expects to gain possession of the facility in the next few days and will begin remodeling almost immediately.

The Academy is also completing the formation of its team of instructors. After the completion of legally required background checks and finalization of individual contracts, the Academy will formally announce the composition of the team.

The board of directors of the Academy have scheduled regular meetings of the board on the 2nd and 4th Mondays of each month. Interested parents and students and the public are always invited to attend those meetings. All future meetings of the Board will be at the Northwest Academy Building at 105 West Hurlbut.

Academy elects board

At its organizational meeting, the Board of Northwest Academy was expanded by the appointment of Mark Muniak as a member. Mark is an attorney with offices in Charlevoix and resides in Boyne City.

An election of Board Officers was completed with the following results: President of the Board: Gerald M. Chase, Charlevoix, Vice President: Mark Muniak, Boyne City, Secretary: James Malewitz, PE, Charlevoix, Treasurer: Jackie Hice, Charlevoix.

Other members of the Board are James F. Stewart, MD, Charlevoix, and Patricia Sitzema, Charlevoix.

There remains a board vacancy and interested parties are invited to make their interest known to any member of the board or to attend a meeting of the board which are scheduled on the 2nd and 4th Mondays of each month at the Northwest Academy Building at 105 W. Hurlbut, Charlevoix.

Northwest Academy is a Public School Academy chartered by Saginaw Valley State University. The members of the Academy Board of Directors are appointed by the University's Board of Directors. The university typically approves a board nominated by local organizers of the charter school.

Paramedic training offered at NCMC

Students attending North Central Michigan College can now receive paramedic certifications through the college. The college, along with Northern Michigan Hospital and LifeLink, is starting an EMS/Paramedic Program beginning this fall.

Students can earn certification two ways: through an associate of applied science degree, or through straight certification as a paramedic.

In addition to classroom instruction from paramedics, health care professionals and college faculty, students will be involved in hands-on work experience with paramedics. The two-year program involves a combination of courses already offered by the college and new course work now being developed that will be offered in the third and fourth semesters.

Applications are now being accepted. For more information contact North Central Michigan College student services at 348-6605.

Concert series continues

The big band sound of the Larry Wojcik Band will entertain guests from the bandshell in East Park, as the Charlevoix Convention and Visitors Bureau's third summer concert series continues.

Wojcik and his band will perform Wednesday, August 7 at 8 p.m.

This group of musicians is known for the great diversity of its program, offering a variety of fare sure to please every musical taste. Their music is great for dancing or just toe-tapping entertainment.

The summer concerts are scheduled each Wednesday at 8 p.m. and Saturdays at 1 p.m. through August, except when other events are in the park.

Corporate Brass, the next act in the series, will appear at 8 p.m., Wednesday, August 14.

Students raise money for pool

Pennies for the Pool campaign of Charlevoix Middle School sixth graders produced 11,117 pennies towards construction of the Charlevoix Community Pool.

Science teacher Pat Miller suggested the project to the five sixth grade classes to correlate with this year's study of water. She explained the students raised an estimated $500 toward their goal of $1000 but currency has yet to be counted because it took so long to count the pennies. The project continues when school reopens in September with more bake sales, raffles and other ideas developed by students.

'Waves' on the gauge were made by a recent $10,000 gift from a Belvedere Club resident added to more than $20,000 from other club residents. Other 'waves' represent grants given earlier by Frey Foundation, Alden and Vada Dow Family Foundation, Glen's Markets and Oleson's (Food Stores) Foundation.

The pennies campaign plus other recent gifts total $6,117 bringing the goal of the capital campaign to about two-thirds of the $950,000 needed to complete the pool.

Pool sponsors have raised over $1.2 million for pool construction and operation. The largest gift thus far is $250,000 for operation.

Order of the Eastern Star Meets

Worthy Matron Rosalyn Goldstick presided at the July meeting of Charlevoix Chapter #72, Order of the Eastern Star. The meeting opened in regular form, with presentation of the flags. The Worthy Matron welcomed all members and guests, and introduced honored guests Dorothea Kelley, Past Grand Marshall; Ann Hufford, Past Grand Martha; and Alice Bellinger, Past Grand Adah. Bellinger was saluted with a song for her 90th birthday. Other officials introduced included Megzee District Association officers President Diane Rosendahl, Secretary/Treasurer Janada Chingwa, O.E.S. Flag Bearer Bob Kelley and Michigan Flag Bearer Donald Carey. Robert Kelley was also welcomed as Worshipful Master, F&AM, and Dianne Rosendahl as Worthy High Priestess and Nancy Wood as Supreme Special Queen's Attendant, both from White Shrine.

The Charter was draped in memory of Arletta Foster, and a Resolution of Respect was read and will be sent to her family. Members are reminded of the need of jams and jellies, especially peach and raspberry, to be sold at the Masonic Fair at Alma in August. Please contact Diane Rosendahl if you can donate. Assoc. Matron Dorothea Kelley reported for the Sunshine Committee that Chapter members had sent 52 cards and made 35 calls to shut-ins and those not well, and made two visits to other Chapters. If you have any knowledge of members who are ill or in need of help, please contact Dorothea Kelley, 547-9747. The Worthy Matron thanked all those who had worked at the hot dog stand for July, and members volunteered to assist at the Art Show hot-dog stand August 10th. If you can help, please contact Rosalyn Goldstick. Plans were made for the annual rummage sale to be held August 16th and 17th, at the home of Thomas & Esther Carey, 05518 Cedarview (2 1/2 miles south on US-31) 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Please donate all good saleable items, but no clothing. Please do not bring items prior to August 4th. For pick up of large items, please call 547-9078. Volunteers are needed prior to the actual sale. Please call 547-2636.

Plans are also being made for the chapter's annual pig roast, to be held Sunday, August 25th at Ferry Avenue Beach gazebo #1. All members and families are urged to attend. An invitation to attend is issued to Members of the Masonic Fraternity and their families, visiting Eastern Star members, and Primrose Chapter, Indian River. Please bring table service, a dish to pass and a non-alcoholic beverage. Worthy Matron Goldstick thanked her pro team officers, and the refreshment committee Shirley Lusk and Marge Russell, and Betty Sraw and Sandra Birdsall who had served the Masonic dinner in July. Ann Hufford and Sara Sievertson will serve the masonic dinner in August. The next meeting of Chapter #72 will be August 21st at 7:30 p.m.

Norwood plans "favorites" service

Norwood United Methodist Church invites everyone to an "Old Favorites" service Sunday, August 11. The 9 a.m. Sunday worship service by Rev. Bernard Griner will include singing old, popular gospel songs. Bible study follows the worship service at 10 a.m.

BEACONS OF BLESSINGS

By Rev. Bruce Hamilton
Community Church of God

Marriage is a venerable institution. It is with great joy and thanksgiving that my wife and I will mark our 23rd wedding anniversary this coming Sunday. In a day and age where a little over half of all marriages seem to end up in divorce, it intrigues me to look for examples of couples who have been married for long periods of time and ask them how they have done it.

One of my favorite couples in the world, who shall remain nameless for loving and obvious reasons, is fast approaching their 50th. We were discussing the state of marriage when they revealed something about their own half century together that amazed me.

They have been avid gardeners for years. You name the crop and they have managed to grow it and grow it successfully as long as I've known them. Green beans have always dominated. In fact, a couple of years ago she had put up over 100 quarts in one season. That's a lot of beans in my book.

That's where the surprise came in. She said, "and you know what? It took him over 40 years to tell me that he doesn't even like green beans!" Well why in the world did you grow so many green beans? "Because I thought she needed them," was his grinning reply. Needless to say, they have since stopped growing beans. They never agreed with his stomach anyway and if you were her, would you be crazy about putting up 100 quarts of something your loved one didn't really want to eat?

Forty plus years before he told her... Is that the secret to a long marriage? No, of course not. Think about what a couple who has been married that long has shared together. They have been through sickness and health, happy times and sad times together. They struggled getting started and established together. They experienced the wonders of becoming parents together. They made their share of mistakes raising their children together. They faced tough decisions relating to their jobs and careers together. Have you sensed a recurring theme here? The secret of a long marriage revolves around sharing life together.

The same weekend I learned about the tale of the green beans from this half century couple, another couple stood before me at the altar in my sanctuary to begin their voyage of hoped for marital bliss.

We need to remind ourselves that marriage is a journey of togetherness. The Bible directs that a husband "love his wife as Christ loved the church and gave Himself for her." The wife has a loving place at the side of her husband because of it. God's Word is clear in saying that the "price of a good woman is far above rubies."

Yes, there are distinctive roles that each partner has to fulfill. It is being open and honest about each other's strengths and weaknesses that makes the difference. It is allowing your life mate the joy of being and growing with you as a unique individual that makes marriage so sweet. The apostle Paul said it best when he spoke of faith, hope, and love but ended by saying "the greatest of these is love."

Stress relieved with massage

B. J. Hetler
Courier reporter

Ages ago humans experienced the body's stimulated or stressed state, known as "fight or flight," only at occasional times of danger. Today technology and lifestyles contribute to longer stretches of time when the body is in this state, said massage therapist Sam Sharp.

Stress not only brings on fatigue, but causes the digestive system to shut down and circulation to slow, Sharp said.

Massage is a softening and relaxing of the body, increasing circulation and allowing it to function in good health.

Sharp is the owner of the Health Awareness Center for Massage & Bodywork. Based in Petoskey, he recently opened a therapeutic massage service at Charlevoix's Edgewater Inn.

The Edgewater Inn did a "knockout" job preparing the massage room, Sharp said, and those who have had a massage say it's a wonderful addition to the hotel.

But Sharp wants to see more people enjoy the experience. Eighty percent of the public has never had a massage. For some people it is difficult to overcome their inhibitions, especially those who have a poor body image. In addition, the profession still battles the stigma of questionable "massage parlors," he said.

Sharp, a nurse, has practiced massage for five years. He performs two methods. One is a relaxation technique or a Swedish massage, called "Fluff and Buff" or the "Club Rub" by some therapists. It is the most popular massage. The other method is a therapeutic technique designed to eliminate pain and help the body heal.

Sharp sees a change in massage clientele. More middle income people are willing to pay $60 for the experience.

"People in the middle class are investing in their own bodies," he said. "They realize the health benefits."

He also sees pregnant women who suffer from back and leg pain, and an increasing number of athletes.

Charlevoix residents and visitors can call Sharp at 348-1919 to arrange an appointment at the Edgewater Inn. The Edgewater Inn is located at 100 Michigan Avenue, just north of the bridge.

Massage therapist Sam Sharp demonstrates a relaxation technique with the help of Edgewater Inn employee, Angela Snyder. Relaxation is the most popular form of massage, but theraputic massage for relief from pain is a growing area, Sharp said. Sharp opened his Charlevoix business in June at the Edgewater Inn.

DCL Inc. of Charlevoix purchasing new mfg. software

DCL Inc. of Charlevoix is upgrading its information systems with the recent purchase of SyteLine from Complete Computer Systems of Traverse City. SyteLine is a completely integrated manufacturing information system from Symix Computer Systems of Columbus, Ohio.

Using personal computers and Microsoft Windows, DCL will have immediate access to information about its customer orders, inventory, production schedules, accounting, payroll and sales. Quoting and estimating will be improved by using technology included with the package. CAD Engineering will be integrated with the SyteLine Software to provide better communication between engineering and manufacturing personnel.

"We are really excited about the information that will be available to help us run our business more effectively and efficiently," said Werner Egger, Vice President and owner of DCL.

The company engineers and manufactures material handling equipment for industries that require control of dust for environmental and efficiency reasons. DCL's products are used throughout the world to load bulk, granular substances, such as grain, minerals and dry chemicals.

"Then there are the many volunteers that help administer the instructional and competitive program. We had 40 adults serve in many capacities from walking and monitoring foursomes to scorekeeping during tournaments. We can't forget the Association's Board members that meet monthly to oversee the program. The Board members include; Denny and Nancy LaCroix, Sam Supernaw, Tom Bickersteth, Gordon Boydston, Brian Brogan, and Holly Russell, all of whom devote interest and time on behalf of the youth of Charlevoix."

With the help of a $750 grant from the Petoskey-Harbor Springs Area Community Foundation, the Little Traverse Conservancy has established a World Wide Web site for northern Michigan organizations involved in conservation and environment. The address is http://nature.org.

The conservancy's project allows each organization to display information regarding their goals, accomplishments and services. Visitors and residents now will have a source of up-to-date information about the many worthy non-profit environmental groups in Northern Michigan while students and teachers may obtain information useful in the classroom.

Community foundation reaches million dollar mark

Four years ago, the Charlevoix County Community Foundation was presented with a unique opportunity - a chance to build an endowment of $1 million to be used for the exclusive benefit of children and teens in the area.

The goal has been met.

A special trust within the community foundation called the Charlevoix County Youth Fund will support educational, enrichment and recreational programs for young people - now, and well into the future. With assets of $1.1 million, the fund can be expected to earn substantial interest. And, since only interest income is to be used for grant making, the youth fund will continue to grow over the years.

"This is a significant asset for a community of our size," said Mike Stowe, foundation president. "It's a tribute to the citizens of our county that we were able to meet the challenge. What a wonderful resource for area kids."

The challenge began in 1992 when the W.K. Kellogg Foundation offered to match every $2 raised locally with an additional dollar, up to $1 million. The Frey Foundation supported the effort by contributing another $1 for every four. The foundation is one of 14 Michigan community foundations to meet the challenge.

"We're so grateful to our community," said Erin McDonough, a Beaver Island resident and member of the foundation's youth advisory committee. "Everyone expresses concern for young people and the need for good, wholesome activities for youth. With this endowment, we'll have financial resources to help lots of programs aimed at making life better for kids."

The million-dollar youth fund is guided by the foundation's youth committee, whose members survey their peers, teachers, parents and others to learn about children's needs. Twice a year, the group reviews grant requests and makes recommendations for how income is to be spent. To date, the youth committee has awarded nearly $53,000 to non-profit programs ranging from day camps, teen centers and environmental field trips to recreational facilities, youth theater productions and substance abuse prevention initiatives.

Although the foundation has met the million dollar challenge, trustees and youth advisors say their efforts won't stop now. Kevin McNeil, a youth committee representative from East Jordan, said the fund will continue to grow.

"We have the potential to do so much," he said. "This is a great way for all of us to invest in the future of Charlevoix County and its young people."

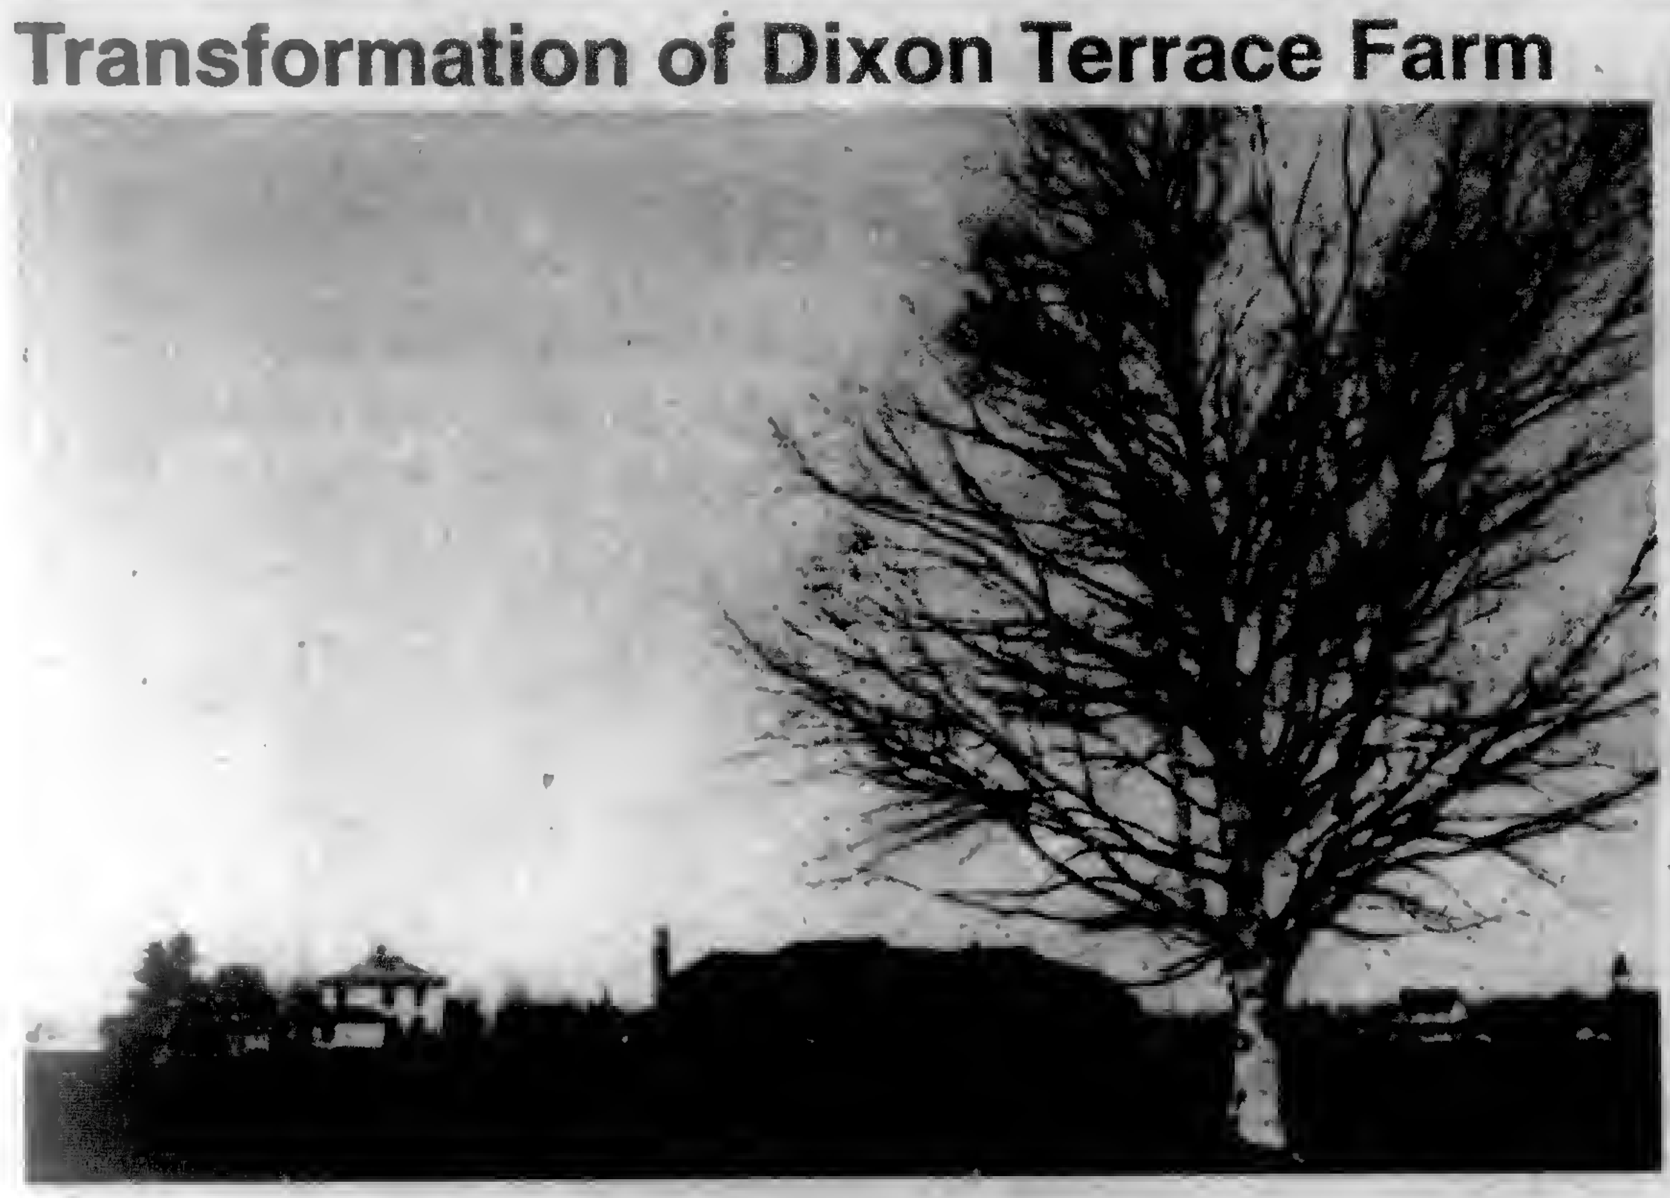
Transformation of Dixon Terrace Farm



This is how the Dixon Terrace Farm used to look when it was home to the largest birch tree in Charlevoix. The tree was later struck by lightening, thus losing its title.

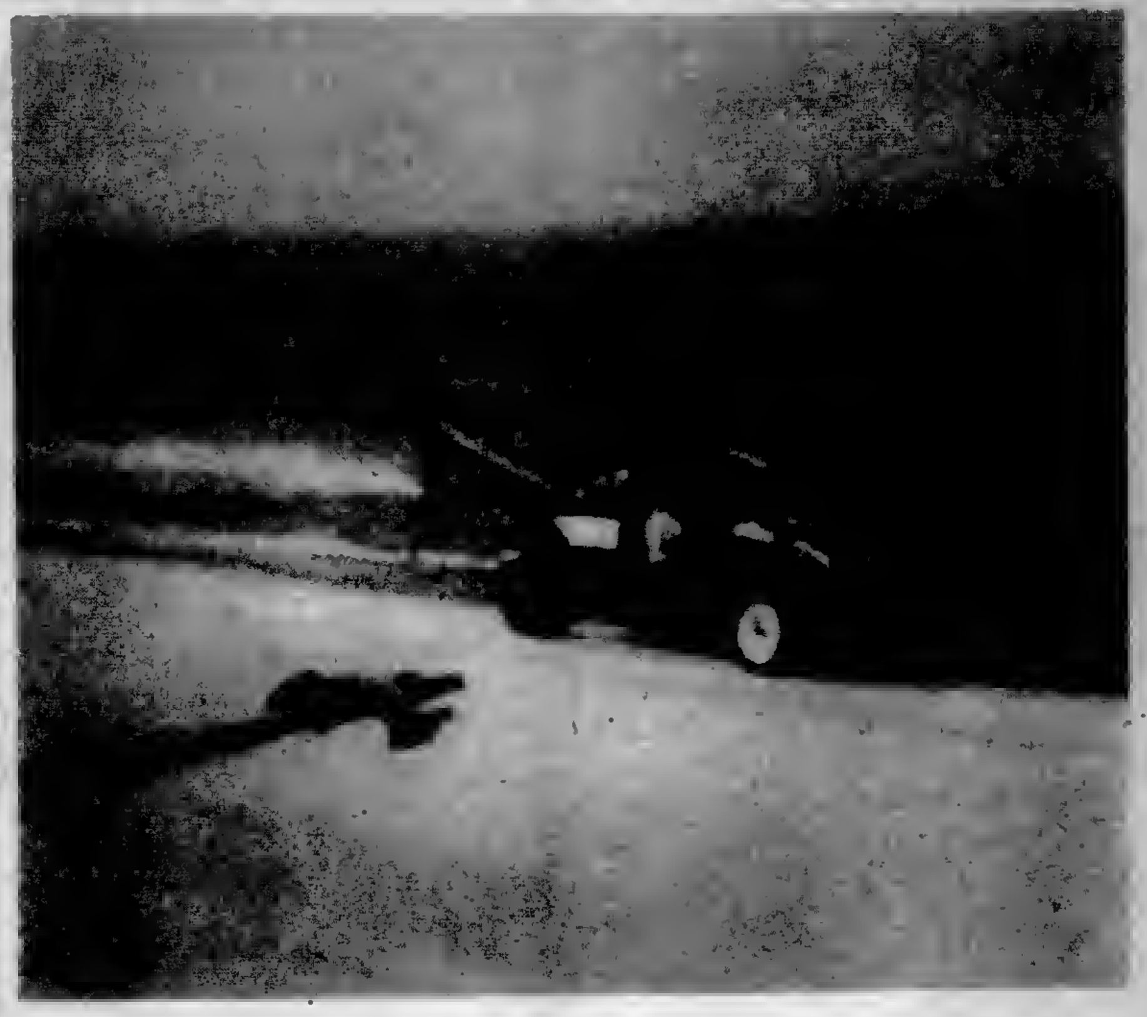
In the center of the picture is the Inn Hotel, which was part of the railroad property, also once part of the Dixon Terrace Farm. The foreground is a part of the Chicago Club Golf Course. When first laid out, the first tee was adjacent to Dixon Ave. The birch trees, which marked the left boundary of the first hole, is now on the left side of the ninth hole. It was the largest birch tree in Charlevoix until struck by lightning a few years ago. This part of the golf Course was also part of the Dixon Terrace Farm.

The John S. Dixon home is now occupied by Dr. and Mrs. James Gels, 200 Mercer Blvd.

The above information was written by Bob Miles and provided by the Charlevoix Historical Society.



Sea and shore skiing

Could we get away with this today? This picture was taken in 1972 at Mt. McSauba beach. Driving is Dwight Boss, his passenger is Jim Boss and skiing is Bo Boss.

Charlevoix Hospital Accredited

Charlevoix Area Hospital has achieved accreditation from the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Healthcare Organizations as a result of its demonstrated compliance with the Joint Commission's nationally recognized health care standards.

Formed in 1951, the Joint Commission is dedicated to improving the quality of the nation's health care through voluntary accreditation. The Joint Commission's onsite survey of Charlevoix Area Hospital occurred in June.

"Above all, the national standards are intended to stimulate continuous, systematic and organization-wide improvement in an organization's performance and the outcomes of care," says Charles Bair, executive vice president, Division of Accreditation Operations, Joint Commission. "The community should be proud that Charlevoix Area Hospital is focusing on the most challenging goal: to continuously raise quality to higher levels."

Richard Krueger, Charlevoix Area Hospital president, spoke of his pride in a staff whose members ask what needs to be done to be accredited by the Joint Commission. "In addition, they appreciate the educational aspect of the survey and the opportunity to interact with the team of surveyors."

He called the accreditation, "proof of an organization-wide commitment to provide quality care on an ongoing basis."

Boyne hosts auto show

Saturday and Sunday, August 10th and 11th, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. the Boyne Country Region Antique Auto Club of America will host the 23rd Annual Antique Auto Show and Flea Market in Veteran's Memorial Park, Boyne City, on the shore of beautiful Lake Charlevoix.

"We expect to host more than 100 antique vehicles," says chief car judge Don Hayden. "And there should be over 100 vendors at the flea market. This year looks to be terrific."

"Nineteen judging classes will receive first, second and third place trophies. There will also be a Judges Choice and Exhibitors Choice trophy as well as a trophy for the longest distance driven."

This popular show draws participants and visitors from all around the state and region. While the car show is scheduled to open on Saturday, many of the flea market vendors will open on Friday afternoon. Food will be served on the grounds and spectator admission is free. There is a $5 entrance fee for show cars.

Art fair to fill East Park with creations

By Janenne Irene Froats
Courier editor

What is normally a sailor's delight is turning into an artist's haven.

Charlevoix's waterfront will be home to 125 art exhibits during the 38th annual Charlevoix Waterfront Art Fair, in East Park.

The juried fair is organized by eight area women, who judge artists as a means of selecting the best and greatest variety of mediums for the exhibit.

"The reason we work so hard at the Charlevoix Waterfront Art Fair is because we want to have art in northern Michigan," said 25-year art committee member, Mary Ann Chew.

Have art, they will. More than 1,000 artists applied to the committee to have their work exhibited. The top 125 will gather Saturday, Aug. 10, for a day of show and discussion with area people.

There's another reason for inviting artists from out-of-state and out-of-country to Charlevoix's gathering spot. The committee raises money to bring art to the community year-round. Programs are held for students from kindergarten to twelfth-grade. Scholarships are given to youths to either attend art camps or college, Chew said.

Former programs include performances by the Detroit Symphony Orchestra, professional New York acting companies and the Cincinnati ballet.

Local artists who will help fill the park are Susan Rus, Lori Bolts, Barb Godwin and Norman Brumm.

Traverse City artists, James Smith and Ken Christensen will also represent northern Michigan.

The show is traditionally the second Saturday of August. This year is no exception. Junior and senior hosts will cater to artists' needs and volunteers of various ages bring another art show to Charlevoix.

Mediums represented at the fair will include jewelry, varied paintings, printmaking, weaving, clay, etchings, drawings, ceramics, copper enameling, glass, mixed media, porcelain, wood, paper mache, sculptures and photographs.

This piece of fused glass is entitled "Girl Talk at the Subway Stop." It was created by Dawn Adams and Dale Steffey, of Bloomington, Ind. The duo will be exhibiting their work Saturday, Aug. 10, at the Charlevoix Waterfront Art Fair with 124 other artists from around the state, country and Canada.

Etching artist brings portraits of life

Award winning artist, Larry Welo, of Mount Horeb, Wisc. is exhibiting his etchings at the art fair.

"My work has always been inspired by events in life and the world around me," Welo said. "I consider my etchings to be portraits of myself with the intention that maybe they are portraits of all of us. All my imagery is rooted in the real world."

Welo creates in his studio from personal notations and sketches. Although his work are portraits of life, he said they aren't intended to duplicate the world, but rather, interpret it.

Making an etching involves taking a smooth piece of copper and creating a surface on it that is not smooth. This irregular "created" surface will then hold ink so the etching can be printed.

A protective coating is applied to the smooth copper plate.

Below: "Porch Light" is a chin colle etching, a type of collage that uses thin sheets of dyed Japanese paper that are glued together as the etching is pulled through the press. Right: "Shadow Cat" was also etched using the chin colle method. Both pieces are the work of Larry Welo.

German-born artist brings art work from Canada

Manfred Heine-Baux was born in Munich in 1940. He has also lived in South Africa, France and the United States. His studio is located in Cambridge, Ontario, where he settled his family in 1984.

He has traveled and painted throughout France, Italy, Portugal, Persia, East Africa, Hawaii, the Caribbean, South America, Thailand, Tahiti, Hong Kong, Indonesia, India, Nepal, the United States and Canada. Impressions of his travels can be seen in his work.

European and American art critics have described Heine-Baux's work as a visual experience. Whether he is working with oils, acrylics, watercolors or etchings, the effect has been described as visual fireworks.

His educational background includes studying psychology, art history, painting, lithography and etching at the Academy of Fine Arts in Munich from 1959-1966. He taught there after receiving a master's degree in fine arts. He has earned a doctorate in art history.

Lines may be scratched through the ground with a needle, textures may be pushed through the ground, the ground itself may be applied in an irregular fashion, or the plate may be covered with a rosin dust that will form thousands of tiny droplets when fused to the plate with heat.

An acid bath etches the copper plate wherever the metal is left unprotected by the drawing with the needle, the texture, the irregular ground or the rosin. Once the plate has been etched for various time intervals, the protective ground is cleaned from the plate. Ink is applied to cover the plate. Cloth is then used to clean away the surface ink, leaving ink mainly in the recessed, etched area.

Welo pulls the plate through his etching press, covered by a damp sheet of paper. The pressure from the large steel rollers is great enough to force the paper into the recesses of the plate where the ink lies.

Twins bring glasswork

James and Tim Harkenrider, fraternal twins, graduated from the Center for Creative Studies in May 1991. Since then, they have established a reputation for excellence in exhibit, furniture and product design.

While at the center, they became acquainted with the glass medium. After graduation, they built their own hot glass studio with the intention of creating work that extends traditional art glass.

Classic forms and primitive colorations are transformed into glass. The end creations are timeless pieces reflecting thousands of years of manmade vessels.

More than a painted smile

Camp Quality clown warms hearts of weary children

By Janenne Irene Froats
Courier editor

Daisy's smile never slips. Its ruby red corners are painted upward.

No matter how ill the clown's kids become, she smiles from the inside out — for their sake.

Daisy's kids are the campers who come to Camp Quality each summer to get away from doctors, chemotherapy and the stress of having cancer.

This week, the camp is toasting life and the children who cherish it from the edge of Walloon Lake at Camp Daggett. This week, the campers are living life to the fullest.

Sunday morning, Daisy donned her makeup in anticipation of reuniting with friends and meeting children who have yet to discover the week-long getaway.

Let the games begin.

Daisy, along with an ensemble of other volunteers, are spending this week giving golf cart rides; singing around the campfire; going on boats, hot air balloons, planes and antique car rides; petting an African elephant; and playing putt-putt golf.

"I've always wanted to give children the happiness in life that I think they should have — that I didn't have," Daisy said, her eyes the only part of her painted, white face to show seriousness.

Daisy never fought cancer, or lived with a sibling who did. But she knows what it's like to grow up with both parents working, and one roughing her up.

The woman behind the mask never planned to be a clown. She just wanted to work with children. She has four of her own.

"Being a clown, I'm covering up or hiding my hurts to make somebody else's better," she said.

Behind the hugs, kisses and encouragements of the clown dressed in primary colors, there is a purpose that reaches beyond juggling and jokes. A gold, guardian angel is pinned to her shoulder.

"I don't like to see anybody unhappy," she said.

Daisy is a name given to the clown years before she began helping at the camp, which has been held

Rash of larcenies empty unlocked vehicles of valuables

By Janenne Irene Froats
Courier editor

An unlocked car cost one area visitor a 9 mm handgun, about $450 in cash and a batch of credit cards Saturday during a rash of thefts.

Two separate areas of Charlevoix were hit late Saturday and early Sunday with larcenies from vehicles, said city police chief, Dennis Halverson. A total of six vehicles have been reported to have missing items.

Each of them had been left unlocked.

Areas involved in the thefts were: Mason Street, and the Stover Road and May Street areas.

The handgun and cash were stolen from outside 402 Mason Street. It belongs to Michael Berro, 37, of Jonesville.

The gun was loaded, Halverson said. The man's property was all inside a briefcase in the car. The case — minus the key contents — was discovered by police a short distance from the car in a wooded area.

Radar detectors and purses were taken from the other five vehicles.

Halverson said one witness saw two suspicious people in the parking lot at Mystic Village — the site of some of the larcenies — but they have yet to be located.

The chief said he can't be sure that the rash was entirely the work on one group.

"They are two separate, distinctive areas," he said. "We're trying to develop some leads at this point."

Because the vehicles were left unlocked, entrance and removal of items happens quickly. Halverson said locked cars are often bypassed during this kind of spree. No forced entry was used.

Halverson said the department is comparing notes with the Emmet County Sheriff's Department, which is investigating a similar rash of larcenies.

Also late Saturday, tires on two cars were slashed. They were parked at State and Garfield, and State and Antrim streets. Police are still investigating the weekend's crimes.

Charlevoix man arrest for fatality

A Charlevoix man has been charged by the Emmet County Prosecutor's office with negligent homicide for the death of a passenger in a car accident in Bear Creek Township on June 25.

Jason Staph, 21, of 1018 May St., was the driver of the car that rolled over on Howard Road. State police determined that speed was a factor in the accident that killed Michael Burmeister, 19, of Boyne City and injured Burmeister's sister, Danyel Burmeister, 17, of Boyne City. Danyel Burmeister was discharged from Northern Michigan Hospital on July 19.

Staph was arrested by the state police on Aug. 9. He is out on a $2,000 bond.

Staph will hear the charges against him and the possible penalties involved at his arraignment Wednesday, Aug. 21, in district court.

Events in brief

False alarm for firefighters

Charlevoix firefighters responded to a false alarm at the Ameritech building, on Mason Street, about 5 p.m. Saturday.

Firefighters are still unsure as to what triggered the alarm, but did report that the building was secure upon arrival.

The investigation for cause continues.

Bodem's office hours

State Rep. Beverly Bodem, R-Alpena, is holding office hours in Charlevoix 9-10 a.m. in the Tower Room at the Charlevoix County Building.

Meeting canceled for development authority

The Charlevoix Downtown Development Authority canceled its meeting scheduled for 5:30 p.m. today. The next meeting is set for 5:30 p.m. Wednesday, Sept. 11. A complete agenda will be posted at city hall prior to the meeting.

Democratic picnic Saturday

The Charlevoix County Democratic Party is holding its county convention and picnic, 11 a.m.-4 p.m. Saturday, Aug. 17, at Ferry Park in Charlevoix. There will be a $3 donation for attending.

Summer concerts continue

The jubilant sounds of brass will entertain guests in East Park 8 p.m. Wednesday, Aug. 14, as the Charlevoix Convention and Visitors Bureau's summer concert series continues with Corporate Brass.

The group is comprised of principal players from the Northwood Orchestra: Peter Brockman, tuba; Larry Herman, trumpet; Martin Porter, trumpet; Bernice Schwartz, horn and David Sporny, trombone.

The five professional musicians formed the group in 1992, and offer a repertoire ranging from Bach to basic, renaissance to ragtime.

Clown dons happy face for Camp Quality kids outside Charlevoix for nine years. About 15 years ago, she volunteered to clown around in a parade for the Boyne Valley Lioness Club. She's been clowning since.

"I enjoyed seeing the smiles on the kids' faces," she said, of that first experience in a puffy wig and ruffles. The smiles continued as she threw herself into working with children at her church.

"You can see the light shining in their eyes," Daisy said. "They walk up to you, and they don't know if they want to shake your hand or give you a hug. I just asked them if they would like a hug.

"It just makes you melt."

Although Daisy can't make the cancer melt away, she tries her best to help the kids forget while they're in her care, and that of the other camp volunteers.

"I love these kids, and I'll do anything for them," Daisy said, an out-of-place tear forming above the orange hearts on her cheeks.

For six days — rain or shine, heat or chill — Daisy will paint clown faces on little friends, make name tags, eat lunch with the kids, help with crafts and mostly, praise them for all their accomplishments.

"There's caring, and then there's caring," she said. "They all have a part of my heart."

Each camp day for five years, Daisy arrives in a dress, bloomers, red wig and big clown shoes. Each night, she goes to her home in Advance to remove the colors that makes children's eyes brighten.

"I don't want the kids to see who I am underneath," she said, twirling a tiny parasol between thumb and fingers. The potted daisies attached to her wig jostle.

Underneath, Daisy said she is a woman who has faith in God.

"I would not be able to help them into happiness without the help of Christ," she said, noting that He strengthens her so she doesn't break down and cry when she sees their suffering.

Enough about Daisy. She's off, bopping from one camper to another.

"I like the buttons on your dress," one girl says. "They're bright."

"If I get lost, everyone will be able to find me," Daisy jokes as yet another hug is given at Camp Quality.

Primary election welcomes three new commissioners

Lasater to remain county sheriff

By B. J. Hetler
Courier reporter

The county has three new commissioners after the Aug. 6 primary election, making half of the board new blood.

Patrick

In district four, voters elected Victor R. Patrick over Michael Burr to replace commissioner Howard Hosler who retired. Patrick received 243 votes and Burr received 197. Patrick will represent East Jordan and South Arm Township.

Patrick said he didn't think the vote would be so close, but because it was the first time he had run for office, he didn't know what to expect. It's time to get out and get to work, he said.

Blanchard

In district five, challenger Joan Blanchard narrowly defeated Donald Smith, a 14-year commission veteran. Blanchard, a former county equalization director, received 409 votes. Smith received 328 votes. Blanchard will represent Charlevoix, Norwood, Marion and Eveline townships.

Smith said he thinks the public wanted a little change on the board and he is not surprised at the outcome. It was a win-win situation for him. Either he would win his seat on the commission or he would win more free time and the free time won out, he said.

Roloff

In district six, challenger Shirley Roloff defeated Richard Gillespie by 43 votes. Roloff, a former city council member and mayor pro tem, received 393 votes.

Gillespie, a four-year commissioner, received 350. Roloff will represent the City of Charlevoix, and St. James and Peaine townships.

Roloff credits the win to hard work and the support she received from workers and the community as a whole. Her experience in government was also instrumental, she said.

Roloff said she knew the race would be a good battle to the end, and was not surprised that the votes were close.

An important initial goal when she takes office is seeing the commissioners and the department heads work well together, she said.

Gillespie said low voter turnout was one of the biggest contributing factors to his loss. Gillespie, who lives on Beaver Island, said 44 people from the island voted against him, but all of Beaver Island loses.

"People shouldn't mix their personal feelings for me with off-island representation, because they all lose," he said. "I think I've done a good job in the county. No one can say I didn't do a good job."

Gillespie said he is committed, and he won't be going away.

Commissioners serve two-year terms. The newly elected commissioners will be sworn in at an organizational meeting in January.

In other primary election results:

Brannon

- In the race for county clerk, Jane Brannon held on to her post by 315 votes.

Brannon, who has been the county clerk for 16 years, received 1,834 votes. Challenger Dolly Louiselle received 1,519.

- In the race for sheriff, incumbent George T. Lasater defeated challenger Jerry L. Alward. Lasater received 2,426 votes and the current East Jordan Police Chief received 1,066 votes.

Lasater

Lasater goes on to face nonpartisan candidate Ed Johnson, of Charlevoix, in the Nov. 5 general election.

Planners push zoning violation fines

By Janenne Irene Froats
Courier editor

Norman Lawson thinks the city planners are setting up a "little Gestapo team."

The owner of Wishes & Whimsies, an antique shop, doesn't approve of planners' recommendation to city council that it pass a civil infraction ordinance that would impose fines on untidy landowners.

"Sounds like you're asking for a lot of trouble," he told planners at a public hearing Monday.

The civil infraction ordinance would allow the city to impose fines — again and again — on people who do not abide with zoning regulations.

"We don't want the city to look like a junk pile," said planner Nancy Wood. "We have to start somewhere."

Currently, if the city and a landowner have a dispute over what is permissible, ignoring the problem or going to court are the only recourse.

The zoning amendment is designed to make zoning violation civil infractions instead of misdemeanors that have been handled through the district court. Violations will be tickcted and fines due to the city. The fines would begin at $150, for the first offense, increase to $300 for a second offense within two years, and go as high as $500 for repeat violators.

City planner, Gerry Harsch, said his office "works long and hard" with zoning violators before going to court. Sometimes because of the expense of court action, violations are allowed to slide.

"It's a last resort to take action with litigation or a ticket," he said.

Planner, Allen Telgenhof, who is also an attorney, said the ordinance doesn't take away people's rights, and it saves time and money for the city.

"The burden is still on the city to prove a violation," he said.

Wood described the possible change as a way of give "teeth" to city employees who are responsible to enforce zoning ordinances.

After hearing from the board, Lawson wasn't persuaded that the ordinance would be beneficial.

"I think it's something they're going to misuse," he said. "I don't trust them."

Lawson's business is at 1208 Bridge Street, outside the central business district. He said he has received four certified letters warning him about putting merchandise out on the business's porch.

Lawson's wife, Rosemary, said putting goods outside the store attracts customers. Although the ordinance would mean that they will be fined if they continue to use space in front of the store, Rosemary did say that she thinks the ordinance will help clean up the city's junk.

The planners voted unanimously to recommend approval of the ordinance to city council, which will consider adoption at a future meeting.

In other action Monday:

— Planners denied a request for a zoning change of 543 Petoskey Ave., where the Phillips Service Station is located. The property is currently split between commercial and residential.

Son of the land owner, Pete Phillips said he wants the zoning changed so he can sell the property for commercial development.

Board member, Barbara Fels, said the land was given split zoning to maintain a residential atmosphere on Division Street.

"Sooner or later, the whole section is going to go commercial," Phillips said. "It's the most logical use with frontage on two streets."

"Not if we don't zone it commercial," Fels added.

Two neighbors spoke out against the rezoning at the public hearing. A petition with nine signatures was received by planners prior to the hearing.

Camp Quality: Top-notch chance to give back

EDITORIAL

Some people give more to life than is required. And everyone around them benefits. Many of them can be found at Camp Quality, on Walloon Lake this week.

The camp is full of hope, full of the kind of life that often can't be found amid the daily hustle and bustle. The camp is full of what the volunteers bring into it, which includes love, dedication, nerve and willpower.

The children who gather from around the state to get away from the unwelcome reality of living with cancer bring themselves, just as they are.

For nine years, Camp Quality has been a week-long refuge for children of any race and belief. The one common denominator is the fight for life and appreciation of what each day offers. Even some of the companions who closely befriend the kids have won battles with cancer.

There are no reminders of what life is like during countless trips to the doctor at home. There are no questions as to what it's like to be a child fighting a war that was unfairly declared.

There are only words of encouragement and expressions of love.

We praise the efforts of all who have given of their time and energy for Camp Quality.

At the camp, each child is assigned a companion to share their experiences with them. The camp is also full of cooks, clowns, artists and organizers. But the enlarged heart of northern Michigan doesn't stop at the borders of the camp.

The number of volunteers involved in putting on the camp can't even be counted. They include all those who donate money, sail in fund-raisers, blow the morning bugle, take photographs for memory books, drive an antique car with children as honored passengers, supervise swimming, fly planes, guide boats, drive golf carts, clean the mess hall, lead singing, prepare snow cones, raise the flag, juggle during jokes, light the campfire, trailer in animals, and lend listening ears.

Camp Quality is celebrating its ninth year of giving children quality time. Memories go home with them to towns and cities throughout the state. The friends they make help them when the cancer in their bodies goes on the offensive. Many of the companions and campers maintain contact throughout the year.

Children with cancer and their siblings are invited, free of cost, to attend the camp. It began at Park of the Pines and has since moved to Camp Daggett. The camp is made possible by the open hearts and open pockets found within Charlevoix and Emmet Counties.

Everybody needs a helping hand from time-to-time. Camp Quality is an excellent place to extend assistance in whatever way possible. Don't let the excitement for what this camp offers wane with passing of time.

Become one of the people who hold the hands of Camp Quality kids.

Letters to the Editor

School district's soccer coach should be allowed to continue training kids

Editor:

I am writing this letter to you in support of Michael Dennis, Charlevoix's soccer coach. I just wanted to let the Charlevoix community know what kind of person our athletic department is trying to get rid of. For the last few years Michael Dennis has been instrumental in forming Charlevoix's Youth Soccer program. He has donated countless hours during his summer forming a program that is second to none in the state.

While I am not a big soccer fan, my kids, as well as hundreds of other kids, have thoroughly enjoyed his program. However, Mike does not just donate his time during the summer months, he also opens up the basketball gym several nights a week during the winter so our youth can become better basketball players. Mike is there to not only give the kids a place to play ball, but to teach them the fundamentals of the games.

Undoubtedly, our high school program will take credit for any success that comes from Mike's efforts. For all his work in preparing our youth for the athletic programs for which they will participate in, firing him is the only way our athletic program deems they can reward him.

I have seen Charlevoix's athletic programs steadily decline the last few years. The major reason for the decline is our community has lost touch with our athletic department, school board and coaches. It is time for us to get together as a whole community and let our school board know that we are not happy with the direction our athletic programs have been going. If we don't, we too will be brushed aside just like Mike was.

In closing I would just like to thank Michael Dennis for all the work he has done to help our youth become the best possible athletes that they can become.

Thanks to teachers for summer tech camp

Editor:

I would like to thank teachers Teresa Noirot and John Twichel for the excellent class on rocketry that they taught this summer. My 10-year-old son was enrolled in the week-long program that was held in Charlevoix. Cody could hardly wait to go to class each day. When I asked him how he liked the program, he told me that it was "awesome."

As a teacher and a parent, I appreciated all the hands-on activities that the children were exposed to. Computers were used to learn about NASA and the space program. The children constructed bottle rockets, which were launched by compressed air systems. They also built and painted their own dry cell rockets.

I was able to watch the launching of the dry cell rockets at the ball park. It was exciting to witness each child's reaction to his/her rocket being launched to elevations of 1,000 feet.

I am very thankful that this exciting and educational program was available this summer. Cody and his younger brother are already talking about attending next summer. Thanks again, Teresa and John, for making learning fun!

Don't expect to see the Chicago Club written up in PEOPLE Magazine! For over 100 years, this summer association has kept a low profile, and if the fifth and sixth generation of families have their say, their privacy will continue for another hundred years.

Founded in 1880, by leading members of the First Congregational Church in Chicago, the socially prominent men settled with their wives, children and staff on 40 acres of land on the shores of Lake Charlevoix, which was then called Pine Lake. One of the original officers and treasurer of the group was Brayton Saltonstall, father of the late Dr. Saltonstall. Adlai Stevenson, vice president under Grover Cleveland, was also among the earliest members who stayed at the clubhouse with its wide veranda, library, dining room and 27 sleeping rooms. The first cottage was built six years later. Today there are 25 cottages. In addition, there are four cottages adjacent to the off-the-club premises.

Generally over the years, families have adapted to some small changes, but not many. For example, members no longer eat three meals a day in the clubhouse as was formerly required. In 1945, some of the young folk balked at having to change into a tie and jacket for both luncheon and dinner, so the rules were bent and kitchens were added to the cottages. Today, members only dine at the clubhouse twice a week in tie and jackets, of course. It's not uncommon to see well-behaved toddlers seated together for meals at the same family table with parents and grandparents. After dinner in the adjoining hall, Sunday evening hymn sings from the Methodist Hymn book are still "de rigeur." Here you'll find Ann Dickinson at the piano, who knows all the songs backwards and forwards.

Last week, the clubhouse was the scene of a festive dinner party, which was attended by more than 100 members. The theme was a celebration of the Olympic Games, and the dining room was accented with oars, tennis rackets, bathing suits, etc. The long U shaped table was decorated from end to end with numerous two-foot high, gold Olympic torches, at the base of which were red carnations, white Queen Anne's lace and yellow Fuji mums. Intertwined among cedar and fern greenery were red white and blue ribbons with gold medallions, of course. This striking centerpiece, masterminded by Marti Cash Bennett, extended the full length of the table which circled the room.

In the center of the room was a large open space where some lively dancing took place to the music of a disc jockey, who played swing, polkas, and rock'n roll tunes for the benefit of all the members, who ranged in age from the low 20's to the high 70's..

The delicious four-course meal began with fresh salmon, followed by breaded veal, a goat cheese salad and ended with a trio of tiny pastries all prepared by Chef Banar Singleton. Bottles of wine were placed on the table by a young wait staff dressed in shorts and polo shirts. (Housing for the staff used to be provided in on-premise dormitories).

Dinner table conversation touched on the Olympics, naturally, as well as people (sailing instructor, the late captain, Allie Moore), places (the Depot restoration) and things (books). While dining, one could not help but admire the magnificent 100-year-old maple tree that dominates the view from the clubhouse, beyond which shimmers

Students should build schools

Editor:

The construction technology course taught at Charlevoix High School seems to be practical, and have merit. Now the students learn their craft by building houses. It occurred to me that it would be even more practical if the students would build their own schools when new schools are needed.

Perhaps an architect could design a school that could be built by students in yearly increments.

Chicago Club: Few changes throughout its Charlevoix history growing on the property were planted by founding members. Prior to the founding of the association, the entire property was wooded with first growth maples trees. They were cut down for lumber, leaving wide open terraces and room for building lovely summer cottages with wrap around porches.

The first home at the Club, No. 1, is still standing and was built, inside and out, of solid maple, as is much of the furniture.

The lifestyle, then and now, has not changed that much, although gone is the fleet of six-meter sailboats, that was the most perfectly matched fleet in the United States during 1924-1925, under the command of Commodore William B. McIlvaine. Sailing, tennis and golf still occupy most of the day for the summer people. A well-stocked library is still maintained in the clubhouse for leisure reading. Youngsters have a group called the "crew" and their days are occupied under the supervision of counselors, who teach them swimming, tennis, sailing, crafts and take them on nature hikes. There have never been garages built, since people used to arrive in Charlevoix by train, not automobile. Chauffeur driven limousines were kept at a nearby Inn garage.

There are no basements in these summer cottages, either. Most have sleeping porches and can be stretched to sleep as many as 20 guests. Only three old cottages have been winterized. Members need not bother much with maintaining their property. Gardeners automatically mow the lawns and trim the bushes. Fireplaces are laid daily with dry firewood. Arrangements are routinely made for opening and closing cottages.

Yes, gone is the 18-hole golf course and the dormitories. The four clay tennis courts have been replaced with two all-weather surface courts, but the 100-year-old dream of a handful of Chicagoans has survived two World Wars and a Depression. The clubhouse kitchen was remodeled a few years ago, the grounds are well maintained and all the committees are functioning.

Although members today hail from all over the United States, and occasionally a few cottages are rented out, by and large, there are more similarities than changes at the historic Chicago Club. One could easily say it has been wrapped securely in a large cocoon of time, protected from the prying eyes of PEOPLE magazine.

Former Charlevoix man to help build habitat houses abroad

Former resident Patrick Schmidt is preparing to volunteer his time, talent and energy to build a Honeywell sponsored house during the first ever Jimmy Carter Work Week to be held in Europe. The Habitat for Humanity project takes place this week as 20 Honeywell employees come together from around the world to work on one of 10 single-family homes being built in V'ac, Hungary, near Budapest.

Schmidt, an employee with Honeywell for 12 years and currently serving as space components project manager at the Solid States Electronics Center, has been an active volunteer with Habitat for Humanity. He served as project leader for his division, organizing 200 volunteers for builds. Schmidt also donates his time to the United Way and Special Olympics of Minnesota. Through Honeywell, Schmidt also participates in the Adopt-a-Family and Paint-a-Thon volunteer programs. .

"We salute the dedicated Honeywell employees who will be taking their home-building skills to Hungary," said Michael R. Bonsignore, Honeywell chairman and chief executive officer. "We are proud to be associated with the Habitat for Humanity organization and its important mission to provide housing in partnership with people in need all over the world."

Honeywell has a long-standing relationship with Habitat, being the first and only corporate sponsor to provide product for every new Habitat built home in North America and Europe last year. In 1996, Honeywell has continued to expand its partnership with Habitat for Humanity. The company has fully sponsored and Honeywell employees have teamed up with homeowners to build individual homes in Atlanta, Phoenix, Albuquerque and V'ac, Hungary, and cooperatively sponsored homes in Minneapolis.

Habitat for Humanity International is a non-profit organization dedicated to building affordable housing with people in need throughout the world. Funds, building materials and labor are donated by individuals, churches, corporations and other organizations who share Habitat's goal of eliminating substandard housing in the world.

Tours tread lightly on land conservancy

The Grand Traverse Regional Land Conservancy celebrated its fifth successful year of land conservation and the 20th anniversary of the Michigan Natural Resources Trust Fund at its annual meeting in Eastport.

The meeting was followed by three afternoon field trips. The St. Clair Lake/Six Mile Lake Natural Area steering committee supplied pontoon boats, canoes, and row boats and hosted tours of the 147-acre natural area from the one-and-a-half mile Sinclair River Corridor. Wild Iris were in full bloom.

The mink made a quick and daring appearance. And 29 nature enthusiasts and conservancy board members returned with renewed joy and dedication to responsible earth stewardship. Other tours included a hike to Antrim Creek Natural Area, just 13 miles south of Charlevoix on U.S. 31 South. The Regional Conservancy played a pivotal role in helping secure a $4.7 million grant to purchase the 151-acre preserve, including a mile of Lake Michigan shoreline just south of Norwood. The public is welcome.

BEACONS OF BLESSINGS

By Rev. Bruce Hamilton
Community Church of God

Every day last week found me up and stirring at five o'clock in the morning. It's not a practice that I necessarily want to make a habit of, but it had its advantages. You can see and hear things in those early hours that all too often get overlooked in the "normal" day.

For instance, I caught a glimpse of the Perseids Meteor Shower. With a slim crescent moon just above the horizon and Venus beaming brightly above it, the shower made me think of my Mom sprinkling sugar on cookies at Christmas. Only this time, the "sugar" was being sprinkled from the sky.

If you've been taking advantage of these nights where it's been nice enough to keep your windows open, somewhere between 5 and 5:30 a.m. you probably have heard the first bird waking up with a song. Maybe it's a Momma with a nest full of demanding babics off on a hunt for worms. Maybe they are just responding to the first hints of sunlight hitting their eyes. Whatever the reason, you can almost hear the joy in a bird's first song.

There may just be a farmer out here going, "Five in the morning? I do that all the time!" Yes, they probably do because their cows are stirring or those chickens never seem to slow down laying eggs that need gathering or the fields need irrigating. There's a greater order in every thing that they do than perhaps even they take time to think about.

But what touched my heart most of all was the daily display of color that went on with each new sunrise. There's no way you can be bored watching the sun come up because no two days are ever exactly alike.

The stars begin the overture. From their lofty heights, it is as if they can see what's coming over the horizon. One at a time they yield their place in the heavens.

The horizon seems to beggingly tug at the drawstrings of any clouds that might be hanging around, pulling them back from the blossoming corona. Heralds of pink and orange and deep purple begin to proclaim the news racing across the changing sky. Then at last, the dawn arrives!

There is a classic hymn of the church that echoes through my mind as I've been trying to recreate this week for you. "When morning gilds the skies, my heart awakening cries; may Jesus Christ be praised! Alike in work and prayer, to Jesus I repair. May Jesus Christ be praised!"

"The night becomes as day when from the heart we say, may Jesus Christ be praised! The powers of darkness fear when this sweet chant they hear, may Jesus Christ be praised!"

It sort of puts a whole new slant on the morning when you look at it that way. You only think you know what lies ahead when you get up to start your day. Long before you are even aware of those first sounds of life within your being, the Lord has been long at work preparing to bless you. Get a good look at the world around you one early morning and join me in giving God the praise!

Oh boix

A collection of accomplishments of people from the Charlevoix area.

Amy VanGuilder, Charlevoix, the daughter of Dennis and Dianne VanGuilder, has earned two scholarships for Calvin College in Grand Rapids this fall. VanGuilder earned a $3,500 for the Calvin Presidential Scholarship and an additional $600 for the Calvin Stewardship Award. Presidential scholarships are awarded to top first-year students and are available for four years by maintaining the required grade point average. Stewardship awards are given based on written demonstration of talent in areas of the arts, government or church, for instance.

Robert McCullough, Charlevoix, has been named to the Dean's List for the spring 1996 semester at Case Western Reserve University. He maintained a grade point average of 3.6 or better for the honor. He is studying English.

Betsy Jo Straw, Charlevoix, graduated from Ferris State University with distinction this spring. She maintained a grade point average of 3.25 to 3.49 to earn the honor. She received a bachelor of science degree in medical technology.

Rebecca Schulmeister recently graduated from basic training at Lackland Air Force Base, in San Antonio, Texas. She is the daughter of Robert and Sharon Schulmeister and a 1994 graduate of Charlevoix High School.

Rebecca was involved in a six-week training course, during which she studied the Air Force mission, organization, customs and received special training in human relations.

City gets grant for Bridge Park

Charlevoix has received federal transportation funds of $428,800 to purchase the land at Bridge Park from the state highway department. The city already paid $5,306 of the $536,000 land acquisition price. City Manager Mike Wiesner said the remainder due will be worked out in a contract.

Deck area meets eatery demands

By B. J. Hetler
Courier reporter

Juilleret's new deck seats 32 to 40 customers, but owners Mary Ann Hodack and Mary Morrison say it isn't enough.

People waiting outside pace and give deck diners dirty looks trying to make them complete their meal and leave so they can get seated, Morrison said.

"People love to eat outside," Hodak said. "They'll wait in line for the deck when the dining room has empty seats."

The non-smoking deck was completed and opened in July and both owners say it's extremely popular.

"The deck paid for itself in three days," Morrison said. The building and furnishing of the deck cost about $7,500.

The owners applied to the city for permission to add on the deck and say the city was very encouraging and helped them get things done.

Hodack and Morrison added the deck to the restaurant not only for pleasant dining, but in response to a need for expansion. Business has been excellent, they said, and it increases every year. The restaurant broke its record on Venetian weekend when it served 700 customers in one day.

Juilleret's is serving more and more customers from places such as Eastport, Elk Rapids and Traverse City. The Bay Harbor development brings more people to the area, too, they said.

Charlevoix needs more breakfast places and expansion in general, Morrison said.

Juilleret's is open from 5:30 a.m. to 3 p.m., seven days a week and is located at 1418 Bridge Street.

Juilleret's of Charlevoix owners Mary Morrison and Mary Ann Hodack expanded the restaurant in July with the addition of a deck. Customers pass up available tables indoors and wait for the popular outdoor dining experience.

Charlevoix woman among thousands at Mary Kay seminar

Leadership. Marketing. Team Building. These are just a few of the skills that Shelly Saul, of Charlevoix, learned at the company's annual business building seminar July 18-31, at the Dallas Convention Center, which attracted more than 45,000 independent Mary Kay beauty consultants.

Every year, Mary Kay businesswomen from around the world attend more than 180 business enhancement classes that teach business management, sales techniques, marketing strategies and fashion trends. The business seminar also includes general assemblies, with motivational speeches from top sales leaders within the sales force and company executives, and information on new products and program launches.

In addition, the businesswomen attend an awards night, where they receive recognition for their achievements.

"Our annual seminar is an excellent opportunity for independent consultants to exchange ideas, learn about new products in the industry, hone their marketing and sales skills and strengthen their businesses overall," said Tom Whatley, senior vice president of Global Sales at Mary Kay.

There are more than 475,000 independent Mary Kay consultants operating their own Mary Kay businesses in 25 countries worldwide. The National Foundation for Women Business Owners estimates that women-owned firms now generate nearly $2.3 trillion in sales, a 236 percent increase over the past nine years.

Independent Mary Kay consultants have been successfully operating their own businesses since founder Mary Kay Ash started the company in 1963.

These boats lazily pass in midday sunshine as the downtown bridge rises on its bi-hourly mark.

Ken Mousseau (right) and Jody Givens, of K & J Excavating, test the water flowing into the Charlevoix Community Pool. Sewer lines are almost complete. Construction on the pool's building will begin soon.

Big bucks from pool auction

More than $30,000 was raised at the auction held recently for the Charlevoix Community Pool.

A J-24 sailboat drew the largest bid of the evening. The winning bid for the boat, which was donated by Carol Morris and her belated husband, Chuck Morris, brought $7,000. About 200 attended the auction and dinner.

International resort packages in Portugal and the Bahamas also drew large bids followed by golf packages.

Friends of the Pool President, David Strawbridge, suggested that purchases at the auction were "a contribution to the future of Charlevoix and its children."

Progress on the pool: "The pool is in the ground, the footings are poured, the foundation is finished, the water lines are in and sewer lines almost completed," Strawbridge said.

Rotarians raffle off boat to support education

This 120-horse power jet boat is being raffled off by the Charlevoix Rotary Club Thursday, Aug. 22.

The Charlevoix Rotary Club is raffling of a 14-foot Sea Ray Jet Boat to raise money for student scholarships.

The boat seats four and has a 120-horse power engine. It is on a trailer next to Trademark Clothiers, on Bridge Street.

Tickets are $10 for one or $50 for six. They can be purchased at Trademark Clothiers or from any Rotarian. Odds are one in 250 with the purchase of six tickets.

The drawing will be held Thursday, Aug. 22, during the club's weekly meeting. Participants do not have to be present at the drawing to win.

The boat was provided for wholesale cost to the club. Profit on the drawing will go toward annual scholarship awards given by the club. Last year, about $3,000 was given to middle and high school students for workshops, and to freshman students entering North Central Michigan College.

"This money is coming right back into the community and supporting local kids," said former club president, Dan Barron.

Firefighters raise money for a dive boat

The Charlevoix Volunteer Firefighters Association will be hosting a "Millionaire Party" from 8 p.m.-1 a.m. Saturday, Aug. 17, at Paul Bunyan Lanes, across from the airport.

The purpose of the event is to raise money to buy a dive boat for the dive team. There will be Blackjack, Roulette, 50/50 drawings, and more.

The firefighters association purchases many items for the Charlevoix Fire Department to help protect the citizens of Charlevoix and townships the fire department services. The association is supporting a dive boat because it believes the boat would reduce response time of the dive team during water-related calls.

Help academy with band

Northwest Academy's new music director, Gary Stutzman, urges families to rummage through closets for band instruments that can be put to good use by the school. Students will rent or buy the instruments.

People who have instruments are asked to contact Stutzman so he can make arrangements to have them appraised and in the hands of a student that is interested in playing.

The academy is a sixth through 12th-grade public school with an emphasis on science and technology, but music will play an important part, Stutzman said.

"This town is very rich in it's history of music," he said. Classes include beginning, intermediate and advanced band.

"This is going to be an exciting program for me to teach. We will have a large number of the sixth-grade students involved and the intermediate and advanced levels will round out the program."

Music appreciation and music theory classes will be offered if there is enough interest, he said.

Stutzman earned a bachelor's and a master's degree in music from Northern Michigan University in Marquette. He taught music and coached varsity track at Charlevoix High School for nine years in the 1970's.

To rent or sell, call Stutzman at 547-9000 or 547-1311.

SPORTS

Photos by B.J. Hetler

This goalie is one of the many people who showed up Thursday for an informal time on the soccer field at Shanahan Field. Games are organized through 4-H.

Soccer players from the Charlevoix area and lower Michigan compete in an informal game on Thursday. The games take place every Tuesday and Thursday at 6:30 p.m. at Shanahan Field. Anyone is welcome and players include middle school, high school and college students, as well as parents and members of the public.

Rod Smith of Charlevoix enjoys the day and the fishing in the channel. He said he fishes five days a week and that the fishing has been rather good, especially for walleye at night.

Deer license application period delayed

The Department of Natural Resources has traditionally opened the application period for antlerless deer licenses Aug. 1. However, this year the start was delayed until Saturday, Aug. 10, so the DNR could complete necessary computer software changes for the program. These changes will simplify the application process for some applicants and will provide more information for the customer on the receipt. These changes should not affect the sale of other licenses.

The new computerized licensing system has been very successful in its first year. These changes are part of an ongoing effort to make improvements to the system that will benefit the hunters and anglers, the license agents, and the DNR.

This delay should have minimal impact on applicants. Most applications are received by the DNR during the last two weeks of the application period. Of the 382,700 applications received last year, only 4,200 were made during the first 10 days of the program.

Even with the delay in the start of the application period, hunters will have more than six weeks to submit applications. The deadline for applications is Tuesday, Sept. 24.

Charlevoix and the early automobile

First hometown engine puttered through town in 1908

By Geoffrey Reynolds
Courier columnist

During the rest of calendar year 1996, the United States, particularly southeast Michigan, will be celebrating the centennial of the creation of the automobile by the Duryea brothers. But let us not forget the impact the horseless carriage had on Charlevoix in changing it from a quiet, horse drawn, resort town to a major automobile tourist destination.

While inhabitants of Detroit and other major U.S. cities quickly bought into the idea of owning an automobile, Charlevoix's first locally owned automobile was not seen on city streets until nine years later. Its owner, was Dr. Armstrong, a local physician and politician. This seems ironic since Charlevoix was the resort home of Ransom E. Olds, founder of Oldsmobile. Here the automobile pioneer had a home and docked his yacht, the Reomar, in a large Round Lake boathouse that still stands. However ironic, Dr. Armstrong purchased the Cadillac between 1904 and 1905 for approximately $900 and took to the rutted, dirt streets on his medical rounds and for pleasure. How pleasurable the ride was on the bad roads remains to be known.

One July 4, 1908, Dr. Armstrong and the rest of Charlevoix celebrated the completion of the first Bithulithic paved thoroughfare, Bridge Street. Soon after the new paving came the use of wood traffic spheres called dummies, which were placed in each of the four downtown intersections. The driver was supposed to stay to the right of the dummy at the intersection while his outstretched arm indicated him making a left turn. This was supposed to help in avoiding traffic snarls. While this served the purpose, police officers were constantly righting the dummies after motorists knocked them over. Eventually the dummies were replaced with iron dummies to prevent this. The iron dummies were phased out soon after World War I.

Few resorters cared to make the long trips from the cities on the unbelievably bad roads. Trips that usually took many days, were hard on the tires, cars and passengers. Instead many resorters preferred to ship their automobiles by boats, such as the Illinois, Missouri, or the Manitou, accompanied by a chauffeur.

The owners might have also traveled by steamship or taken the train to either of Charlevoix's train depots. There the weary train travelers and their baggage were driven away in livery trucks and taxis provided by the new garages that once contained the malodorous horse stables. The garages occupied Bridge Street had names like Hooker's and O'Neil's.

After World War 1, roads specifically designed for automobiles started to appear. This was a result of the April 1919 positive $50 million bond issue from Michigan voters to build better roads to accommodate its ever increasing industry, automobile tourist travel. By 1926 Charlevoix County tourism brochures advertised "122 miles of paved state award trunk lines and 14 miles of wide paved avenues within the city of Charlevoix." Although gravel constructed, the state boasted of dust-proof state trunk lines leading to all points of the lower and upper peninsulas.

Charlevoix's tourism was boosted by the automobile industry, which came into town when a local doctor bought the city's first motorized car.

The first gas station in Charlevoix, owned by Bill Brown, also boasted the first motorcycle dealership. Here the motorist could pull up to the curb for a fill up or drive their vehicle into the Bridge Street garage for service.

In 1937 tourist brochures described Charlevoix's first municipal auto camp. Operated by Hugh "Dad" Brady, the camp was located on the spot now occupied by Charlevoix Area Hospital. It boasted facilities for the comfort and convenience of the motorist, which was patrolled by city police and located adjacent to an excellent bathing beach.

After World War II automobile travel increased with the economic wealth of the nation and the steady increase of resorters and tourists continues today as motorists still seek the wonderful surroundings of "Charlevoix the Beautiful."

Families find help for respite care

Charlevoix Area Hospital's "Welcome Guest Respite Care" program is now available to some patients on a sliding fee scale. The room rate, which is usually $110 a day, may be reduced for those who are of low income but can benefit from the service.

Respite care is not covered by insurance of Medicare and the cost is sometimes prohibitive for those on fixed incomes. The difference in the charges and what the patient pays will be made up by a grant from the Health Care Financing Administration. All medications and supplies will be at the usual charge and guests are requested to bring their own prescriptions and nursing supplies.

The Welcome Guest Respite Care is nearly 10 years old. It was developed to provide relief for family members who are caring for a loved one. It can be used for overnight or up to two weeks. Hospital nursing staff provides 24-hour care for guests in rooms often overlooking Lake Michigan. Physicians are available around the clock. Meals, linen and other services are provided.

For more information, contact Linda Parsons, at 547-4024.

Discover unclaimed college support

Unknown to many students struggling to pay tuition, there are more than 375,000 non-government scholarship and grant sources available, which do not have to be paid back. More than 80 percent of these scholarships do not depend on family need or exceptional grades, but are awarded based on the student's interests, hobbies, academic focus, age, heritage or parents' occupation or military service.

According to the National Commission on Student Financial Aid more than $6 billion of assistance goes uncollected each year simply because students are not aware of it and do not apply for it. Now, through the resources of the National Academic Funding Advisory (NAFA), an updated publication for 1996 is available to spell out academic funding guidelines, step students through the maze of the financial aid process and show what's needed to secure scholarship assistance.

Summer school draws smiles

Nature brings excitement to classroom

By Janenne Irene Froats
Courier editor

When Darrill Hudson walked through the door for summer school, he didn't know he was going to influence his teacher's lesson plan.

Marlynn Hughes knew Darrill loves insects. So, her third- and fourth-graders from Charlevoix are using bugs to up their Michigan Education Assessment Program (MEAP) scores.

The kids are creating their own 3-D insects, naming them, deciding what they eat and where they would live, and writing books about them. The process involves mathematics, science, informational reading and writing.

Darrill's imaginary insect is a combination of a beetle and a cockroach. He's brown, eats flies and lives in a bush.

Although the mention of summer school is the kiss of death to most students, the 10-year-old said it's not like regular school. And, he would like to go again next year.

"It's more like fun than work," he said.

Along with the other students, Darrill has gathered a live insect collection. He has 11 critters and hopes to finish summer school with the biggest collection in his class.

Darrill's mother, Robin Hudson, said her son has loved insects all his life. Summer school has surprised her, too.

"It gives him something to look at and relate to," Hudson said. "It's right up his alley."

Hudson has two children attending the summer program, which is funded by a grant from the Michigan Education Association. Students from grades 3 to 8 can voluntarily attend the free classes. Some ninth- and tenth-graders are required to attend if they have failed an English class.

Rather than just mimic regular classroom tactics, Gayle Gennett, one of the program's supervisors, said class is relaxed. Kids get a snack, are allowed to wear shorts, chew gum and sit on the couch or lay on the floor during instruction. The key is learning.

School board hires new high school soccer coach

Dennis submits resignation

By B. J. Hetler
Courier reporter

Mike Dennis is no longer Charlevoix High School's soccer coach. And even some of the board members who accepted his resignation aren't sure why.

Dennis was asked to resign in February and reasons behind the request are unclear. Until Monday night's school board meeting, Dennis was still the coach.

As of today, Josh Block, a middle school computer teacher, is the new coach. This is his second year with the district.

Some of the board members are still questioning the reasons behind the coaching change.

Larry Levengood said it was his impression that it wasn't a voluntary resignation. He pointed out that if Dennis' performance as soccer coach was not satisfactory, he should have been given a chance to make improvements, not asked to resign right away.

Levengood said he wanted more of an explanation. Board president Mary Lee Campbell said she didn't think the board should second-guess why Mike Dennis resigned. Campbell then asked athletic director Barry Anderson to give an explanation.

Anderson said that he met with Dennis, Dennis submitted his resignation and "basically that's what happened."

Board member Joan Buday said that the students needed more time with the soccer coach and Dennis did not have that time.

But board member, Ardeth Wieland, said she didn't think people were concerned with the kids, and the resignation was a political matter.

Member Allen Telgenhof said it was the most political issue he had experienced while on the board.

"There are way too much politics in this and too much time spent kicking this around," he said.

Wieland said she also felt that part of the difficulty was in expecting too much out of a new soccer program too soon.

"Everyone knows it was not an inadequacy on the part of the coach," she said.

Anderson said the matter was not against Dennis' character, but that he and Dennis agreed that the soccer program needed to go in a new direction.

Dean Mikulski, who has a son in the program, asked the board what that new direction would be. The athletic director said he plans to meet with coaches and parents in about a week to explain the program.

The motion to accept Dennis' resignation was approved, even though Levengood and Wieland voted against it. Wieland was the Teachers' contract expiring

School board members and Charlevoix Public School teachers are meeting for contract negotiations this month. The current contract expires on Saturday, Aug. 31, and the bargaining is for a new three-year contract. Eighty-two teachers are in the union.

Tom Sothard, a teacher for 23 years, is the spokesperson for the teachers. The board is represented by members Allen Telgenhof, Sulane Hamilton and Ardeth Wieland. Superintendent Roberta Jackson is also at the table.

The school district has two unions, one for teachers and one for support staff. Talks have not yet started for a support staff contract, which also expires Aug. 31.

Summer school shines spotlight on new student group

Students asked to attend the program were those who had tested low on the MEAP, or were recommended by teachers or parents. Summer school has allowed them to learn with less pressure.

"They're the stars here," she said, noting that the program helps students' self confidence because it's a step away from regular lesson plans where they've traditionally fallen behind and felt inadequate.

After a few weeks of going to summer school four days a week, from 9 a.m.-noon, Darrill said that he feels much better starting school this fall than in other years.

The four teachers, who are paired with an assistant and up to 15 students, organize as many hands-on projects as possible. There have been field trips, skits, cooking and calculating about how much it would cost to go to the prom.

Students spend time in the computer lab working with tutorial programs in spelling, math and reading. The computer automatically tests and increases the learning level.

There are 48 students enrolled in summer school. School is out Thursday, Aug. 22, just in time for the kids to prepare for the fall semester.

When Hughes leaves the insect project and her summer students for her regular position in the Discovery room at Charlevoix Elementary School, she will take with her the motivation she received from one 10-year-old who loves insects.

County board approves budget, prepares to return with millage

By B. J. Hetler
Courier reporter

Action by the county board of commissioners Aug. 14 included approval of a child care fund budget, discussion of millages for the November ballot and an announcement of the near-completion of the county building renovation.

The board approved the child care fund budget of $333,778.79 for the 1996-1997 fiscal year. The money is generated through county tax dollars and a state funding.

Probate Court Administrator, David Rauch, said that the fund helps care for children in the community who are, for instance, substance abusers or victims of abuse by their parents.

The fund pays for options including placement of children in area homes that provide a secure environment, as well as educational programs on substance abuse. The county has one home in Boyne City and one home soon to open in Bay Shore. The homes accommodate up to six children each.

Rauch said that the cost for keeping the children in these homes is $55 a day, compared to $280 a day if children are placed in a detention home in lower Michigan.

Also during the meeting, the board approved placing a 5.9 millage on the November ballot. The millage was defeated in the primary, because of voter confusion and a lack of information about the millage, commissioners said.

The millage is allocated by the state. The proposal involves determining how to divvy-up the 5.9 mills and to set the millage for a four-year period. Of the 5.9 mills, 4.7 mills go to the county, 1 mill goes to townships and .2 mills go to the intermediate school district.

The board discussed the need to educate the public before the November election.

Manatron was approved to provide computer software for the county. The county will notify eight vendors who had expressed an interest in providing hardware to submit bids. A Monday, Aug. 26, deadline was set for bids so that commissioners could review them before the next meeting.

The board approved contracting with Northstar Analysts for a cost reduction analysis of the county's expenses to determine whether the county is paying too much for costs, such as utility bills. The company charges 50 percent of the amount it saves the county from its findings.

Commissioner Carl Price reported that inside renovations to the county building should be completed within a week.

Accidents in brief

Pedestrian injured crossing Bridge Street

A Troy man was injured when trying to cross Bridge Street Saturday.

Steven Torres, 35, was treated and released from Charlevoix Area Hospital after entering the crosswalk near Park Street about 7:45 p.m.

A car in one lane had waived the man into the road, giving him the right of way. However, the driver in the second lane did not stop. There is no walking light at the corner.

City police faulted the pedestrian for the accident. However, he was not ticketed.

There were five other accidents in town over the weekend. None of them more than parking lot fender benders, the police department reported.

Downstate woman and son killed by motorist

A 44-year-old West Bloomfield woman and her unborn infant son were killed when hit while bicycling.

Patricia L. Chilcotte Elledge was riding a bike on Boyne City-Charlevoix Road, near Springwater Beach, when she was struck from behind by a 1994 Ford pickup truck driven by John W. Miller, 81, of Zenith Heights Rd., Boyne City, according to the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department.

Elledge was transported by Boyne City Ambulance to Northern Michigan Hospital where both she and her thirty-seven week old unborn son died.

The driver, John Miller, has been arrested on two counts of vehicular manslaughter and has been formally charged by the Charlevoix County Prosecutors office. He remains lodged in the Charlevoix County Jail awaiting 90th District Court arraignment.

The sheriff's department was assisted by the Department of Natural Resources Young State Park Rangers in searching the nearby woods for a possible third victim, as there was a child seat on the bicycle and deputies were not sure for several hours if a child had been thrown into the woods.

The victim had no identification with her, which slowed the investigation. Her family was located at their summer residence in the Eagle Island area about two hours after the crash.

The Michigan State Police Post also assisted in attempts to locate the family.

Alcohol involved in car crash

At approximately 11:05 a.m. Friday there was a two vehicle crash on south U.S. 31 near the county line at Richardson Road.

Carol Janet Drenth, of Ellsworth, was making a left turn onto Richardson Road when she was struck by Steven Allen Zott, of Almont, Mich. Zott was passing a vehicle behind Drenth, and did not see her begin to turn left.

Drenth and her two children were transported to Charlevoix Area Hospital, where they were treated, held under observation and later released.

Zott was arrested for drunk driving, and also cited for transporting open intoxicants, as were his three passengers, none of whom were injured.

Late-night joy ride injures two

Alcohol and speed are said to be factors involved in an accident Saturday that injured two area people.

About 2:22 a.m., Allen J. Joseph, 32, of Ellsworth, was traveling north on Pleasant Valley Road in a 1995 Pontiac Sunfire, when he lost control of his car and traveled into the woods at the corner of Behling and Pleasant Valley Roads.

His passenger was Denise Kay Brown, 24, of East Jordan.

Both Joseph and Brown received multiple injuries, according to the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department. They were transported to Charlevoix Area Hospital by the Boyne City Ambulance.

The sheriff's department was also assisted at the scene by the Boyne City Police Department.

The accident is still under investigation.

Commissioner-elect drills county board on administrator stand

By B. J. Hetler
Courier reporter

The quandary over a county administrator became a lengthy discussion once again at the Aug. 14 commissioners' meeting as commissioners hashed out what authority and responsibilities an administrator should have.

Commissioner-elect Shirley Roloff asked each commissioner to voice his feelings about the potential administrator and his or her responsibilities.

Jim Behling is in favor of an administrator. He said there is jealousy within the county departments and that some departments do not want to go to others for their information. An administrator would keep everyone on an even keel.

Don Smith said that any administrator should not have the authority to hire and fire non-elected department heads without the board's approval. He supports an administrator with human resource and board coordinator responsibilities. Fiscal duties should stay with the clerk, he said.

Smith sees the job as dealing with personnel matters, such as pay raises, and with grant information, correspondence, committee work and board meetings.

Howard Hosler supports a full-time administrator with the board to determine responsibilities that can be changed, if needed, with full board approval.

Phil Johnson supports an administrator, but not a financial officer. The administrator will bridge the gap between the board and department heads so that everyone will know what each other is doing, he said.

Carl Price supports an administrator to take care of daily operations. He said the person must have the power to make decisions, but the job description should be narrow.

Richard Gillespie said the county needs someone in charge to represent the board and the employees, but cautioned against handing over the full reins too quickly. He called for streamlining the job description.

It was generally agreed that there is a problem of whether the board can find a person to start small and then be qualified to go bigger.

Behling said a decision on whether to readvertise for the position will be made within the next few days.

Smith recommended that all future personnel committee meetings discussing the administrator position be attended by the newly elected commissioners.

In addition to Roloff, commissioners-elect Joan Blanchard and Victor Patrick also attended the meeting. The three agree that administrator responsibilities should be assigned gradually.

Two-county fair open through Sunday

The grooming, baking and harvesting of flowers and vegetables is just done, and the Charlevoix-Emmet County Fair competition is open with a full midway.

While the fair has been technically open since Saturday, the first few days were spent in preparation for 4-H and other judging.

Now the gala Skerbeck Brothers midway is very much alive with rides, tests of skill and carnival food. Today, the rabbits, goats, pocket pets and other judging will compete with the 7 p.m. pony pull for fairgoers' attention.

"We have a new, clean, family-oriented carnival," said Agnes Shaw, fair president and manager. Also, the humorous and entertaining antics of Farmer John return this year, with his "Barnyard Express" full of trained farm animals. Farmer Brown and friends entertain daily through Saturday at 3:30, 5:30, and 7:30 p.m.

Highlights this week also include the Senior Citizens and kids day at the midway Thursday, when one ticket allows unlimited rides from noon to midnight. The heavyweight horse pull will be 7 p.m. Thursday in the grandstand.

In addition to the 4-H Horse Show at 8:30 a.m. Friday, the Garden Tractor Pull will chew up the runway in the grandstand at 4:30 p.m. and the Antique Tractor Pull will take over at 7:30 p.m.

Saturday features the Open Horse Show at 8:30 a.m. and the popular demolition derby at 7 p.m.

The fair will come to a close on Sunday, but not until completion of the 9 a.m. 4-H Speed Show and the Barrel Benders Speed Horse Show at 1 p.m.

This year's fair is dedicated to former president and manager June Mittler-Jackson.

For additional information call 347-1010.

Two of the more attractive competitors compare notes at the Emmet-Charlevoix County Fair. The fair continues through Sunday, Aug. 25.

City council should approve civil infraction amendment

EDITORIAL

The city, and its residents, have a right to enforced zoning.

And without the ability to write tickets, many zoning violations are let slide because of the expense involved in lawsuits.

If the city passes the proposed civil infraction amendment, it will gain enforcement. It will gain the power to do more than threat violators.

City planners have recommended city council pass an amendment that will allow the city to issue fines of $150, $300 and $500 to people who disregard warning to abide with zoning. This would take enforcement out of the courts, unless the land owner used the legal system to fight a fine.

According to Boyne City City Manager, Randy Frykberg, the ordinance has helped decrease the number of violations in the neighboring town. Not a lot of money has been collected through fines since violators corrected the problem following the threat of a fine.

Most people know that a minor misdemeanor isn't worth hiring lawyers and tying up court time. So, many have disregarded the pleas of the city to clean up their property or abide by other zoning ordinances.

Such ordinances aren't designed to force unreasonable rules on residents. They enable people to live in harmony, rather than have neighbors warring over odd structures and junk heaps.

Even though we believe the pending amendment should be passed by city council, we strongly suggest that wording be included to outline a warning policy.

The current administration said warnings always come first. Enforcement is a last resort.

We would like the amendment to clearly define a warning procedure rather than leave it up to assumption and interpretation for future community leaders. Documenting intent in ordinances and other city policies is crucial since representatives change with a vote of the people or job changes.

If drivers don't want a speeding ticket, they slow down on the roadways. If residents don't want a civil infraction fine, they will abide by zoning ordinances.

A warning will allow for ignorance of the ordinances and for acceptable courtesy by the city. If the violator is informed and purposefully doesn't comply, they can expect a fine, just as if they were speeding down U.S. 31 in front of a police officer.

Letters to the editor

Former school soccer coach clears his name on accusations of profanity

Editor:

Having recently resigned from the varsity soccer coach position with the Charlevoix High School, I would like to include a portion of the letter I received from Gary Grundman, Charlevoix High School principal, as to any reflections made upon my character while coaching these past three seasons.

"It is also the purpose of this letter to dispel any of the rumors and innuendoes that have surfaced during this process. At no time has your character or morals been questioned by me or this school. The statement that you have used vulgarities or profanity at any time is totally untrue. At no time has there been a problem between you and the football coaches or with any other of our coaches ..."

I would also like to thank the community of Charlevoix for the support demonstrated to myself and my family with the many telephone calls, personal visits, and even stopping me on the street. It has been my pleasure to coach the youth of Charlevoix. I have enjoyed all the players and their parents participation has been greatly appreciated.

Loaded handguns shouldn't be in unlocked cars for crooks to confiscate

Editor:

Regarding the Jonesville man whose unlocked car was robbed of cash and a loaded 9 mm handgun:

Why did he carry a loaded handgun in his car? Does he always, wherever he goes, carry a loaded handgun in his car? (Jonesville is north of the Ohio border, a long way from Charlevoix.)

Does he believe it's his right to carry a loaded handgun in his car?

His car was unlocked. How competent is he to carry substantial cash and a loaded handgun in his car?

What are the effects of this lack of responsibility? He has equipped some crook with money and a 9 mm handgun.

Whether his car was locked or not is of no matter. If someone wants in your car, they can get in, and there's very little you can do about it. A brick or a screwdriver will easily serve as keys.

The fundamental point is: it was foolish to have the cash and the handgun, loaded or not, in a car. The best you can hope for if you do, is that nothing happens.

Great job city recreation department, Ike Boss

Editor:

As the summer recreation activities, offered through the Charlevoix Recreation Department, come to an end, I'd like to say a big THANK YOU to the director, Ike Boss. In addition to offering a gamut of activities, Ike hires quality instructors and supervisors like Amy Drenth (swimming instructor), Erv Jones (tennis instructor) and Meg Fowler (Camp Mc-Sauba director), just to name a few.

The recreation department also provides lifeguards for our beaches. This is a unique service that we are lucky to have. Ike tackles the problems inherent to the job head on and deals with them. I believe he always keeps what's best for kids as his No. 1 priority. So if you appreciate our Charlevoix Recreation Department, give Ike a call and register a COMPLIMENT!
